"Andy" Anderson will tow cars 24 hours per day and Chief Blasko warns offenders to register cars and then refrain from parking in restricted areas.

Towing Continues In Parking War

by Alan Grigsby
Police Reporter

"I'll keep towing cars until I'm purple," said Chief Blasko, as a wrecker began the annual parking war at UMass.

Yet, this was only one of the problems confronting Blasko and the campus police on the first hectic days of the new year.

Even with an additional two men on his force, Blasko found himself pressed by the critical parking problems and open trenches surrounding the registration area. Police worked fifteen and eighteen hours a day to meet the increased need for security.

Chief Blasko said, that while the University was not liable for any accidents near the open trenches, he had four men present to direct students behind the tennis courts and away from the dangerous area.

The Chief commented that tagging had been suspended during registration, but would continue immediately thereafter on any student or staff car, with or without a sticker in any, but student parking lots.

The parking problem during registration was acute, said Blasko and can only be remedied during the school year by complete campus compliance with parking laws.

Chief Blasko said, he now has eleven full time men and twelve night watchmen working this year.

Contrary to what freshmen may have been told, the series of whistle blasts heard Friday morning had nothing to do with air raids or termite control.

Three blasts normally alert the voluntary fire department of UMass students. These students answer campus and local fire calls.

Friday, however, was merely a test, using a box alarm at Amherst College. When the alarm was sounded at the Amherst fire department, a bell was rung at the UMass power plant and the North Amherst fire station.

UMass then sounded its whistle and the voluntary fire department members ran to the "fire" though classes were in session.

Revenge!

by Howie Davis
Sports Editor

UMass football fans need not worry about a quarterback for the next three seasons.

Greg Landry has been found.

In his first test as a varsity pilot, the 6'4", 200 pounder completed 12 for 18 passes worth 164 yards as the Redmen beat Harvard 15-7 in a game-scrimage played Saturday.

Landry scored the second UMass touchdown with a 13 yard run in the third quarter. He seemed to have the poise of a senior and the play-calling knowledge to go along with it. In the three periods he played, Landry gave the Redmen the impetus they needed to revenge last year's 20-14 loss to the Crimson.

In the first quarter the Redmen took the ball on their 32 yard line and found pay dirt 18 plays later. The drive used the legs of Leon Biron, Terry Swanson and Dick Benoit plus passes from Landry to Bob Meers to get down to the one. From here Phil Vandersea carried it in for the score.

The two teams agreed to have two tries for the extra point, one kicking and one running. The Redmen made both. The second on a sensational catch by Meers in the end zone. Meers had three Harvard defenders

State of UMass

Growing...

UMass President John W. Lederle, in his third annual "State of the University" address, Thursday evening, cited accomplishments of the University during the past year, and called on faculty, old and new, to join in reaching even greater heights in academic achievement during the coming year.

In regard to student conduct he said, "Our campus environment has such positive hallmarks as high student morale, large turnouts for cultural events, and a healthy concern for the affairs of the world. We do not forget that our students are our prime reason for being."

"AT THE UNIVERSITY we treat our students as responsible and valued members of our academic community, whose views deserve a careful hearing and respectful consideration. We will not turn over the management of the University to them. That would be an abrogation of faculty responsibility for the academic program. But it would be just as improper to pay no attention to student opinion because a few of the students are boisterous, or immature or irresponsible."

"As we continue to grow, and as news of disturbances on other campuses make the headlines, I ask you to extend your efforts to maintain an environment in which 'college life' in the true and best sense of the term is possible."

Speaking to the faculty in Mahar Auditorium, Pres. Lederle pointed to several recent administrative developments and accomplishments that will affect the University.

"A REMARKABLE administrative achievement is the opening of the University of Massachusetts-Boston. Authorized in June of 1964, in a little more than 14 months a building was selected and remodeled, a quality staff and faculty obtained, and classes will open on schedule. More than 1150 students will attend. There are few, if any, similar achievements in higher education. What more dramatic proof could there be that we not only want to meet our full responsibility to the ever-increasing numbers seeking University education, but that we can meet that responsibility."

Pres. Lederle then noted the first positive action toward the establishment of a state-wide University system. "Earmarks of this development are the University of Massachusetts-Boston, the

Marcus To Address Opening Convocation

The annual University of Massachusetts opening convocation for faculty, students and friends of the University will be held tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

Main speaker for the formal opening of the academic year will be Professor Joseph Marcus of the School of Engineering, who will speak on "University Problems, Imaginary or Real."

Prof. Marcus is the recipient of last year's "Metawampe Award," presented to him by the student body as its choice of the outstanding teacher of the year. He is the first member of the faculty to address an opening convocation at UMass. The Metawampe Award carries with it a $1,000 stipend from the senior class to conduct research and present a paper of value to the student body. It is expected that the senior class will continue to make this presentation, and that Metawampe recipients will speak at special convocations in the fall.

Fantastiks

Casting for the University Theatre's first production of the 1965-66 season, The Fantastiks, will be today, tomorrow, and Wednesday in Bartlett Aud. at 7:30 p.m.

The Fantastiks requires a cast of seven men and one woman. Any student is welcome to try out for this production. Rehearsals will begin immediately after tryouts and The Fantastiks will be presented in Bowker Auditorium Oct. 14, 15 and 16.

To All Members of the Senior Class:

I would like to extend a special invitation to each of you to attend the opening Convocation of the University on Tuesday, September 14 at 3:30 P. M. in Bowker Auditorium.

Professor Joseph Marcus, who was honored by the senior class as recipient of the Metawampe award, will deliver the main address, "University Problems -- Imaginary and Real."

I would hope that every one of you will wish to show your continuing support of your class and the University by attending this program. I have therefore made arrangements for a special section of the auditorium to be reserved for you.

With best wishes for a happy and successful senior year.

Very truly yours, faculty member selected by his peers. Previous recipients have been William Ross of the physics department; George Richason of the chemistry department; and H. Leland Varley of the English department.

University Provost Oswald Tippo will preside at the Convocation. Student Senate President Richard Dacey of Waltham will welcome students. Monsignor David J. Power, Chaplain to Catholic students, will give the invocation.

A special section in Bowker Auditorium will be reserved for the senior class which is sponsoring Prof. Marcus' talk.

The formal academic procession will form on the walk outside Stockbridge Hall at 3:15 p.m. The procession will begin at 3:30.

Seniors: Sign Up For Index Pictures

Senior Pictures for the Index will be taken during the weeks of October 25 and November 1. All seniors who wish to be pictured in the Senior Section of the yearbook should select one day and one time in this two week period to have their pictures taken.

When your picture is taken, you must pay a $2.50 sitting fee to the photographer. You're not obligated to purchase any of the finished pictures, but you may if you so desire.

You may sign up for senior pictures in the Index office weekdays afternoon, between 2 and 4.

This year, all women will be pictured in drapes rather than wearing sweaters. Men will be asked to wear dark coats and ties, with a light shirt. The drapes for the women will be provided by the photographer.

One significant change has been made in the Senior Section of the Index this year that will probably please everyone. The pictures and the activity write-ups will be placed on the same page again as they had been in the past. When your portrait is taken, you will have an opportunity to fill out an activity form.

A post card will be sent to you several days before your appointment to remind you of it. When you sign up for an appointment, you will be asked to address a post card.

Try to be prompt, as there are many pictures to be taken each hour, and if you are late, you may delay someone else.

Book Exchange On

The (APO-GSS) Book Exchange is continuing in the Middlesex Rm, S.U. This year's sales are already breaking previous sales records, they report. The highest day's receipts in past years was only $800, but Friday's receipts totalled over $1300. When the doors closed Saturday at 2 p.m., the gross receipts were $2700, a three days record.

This money does not, however, go to these service organizations, but goes back to the students who brought in the books. The Exchange acts only as a broker and is a non-profit program.

The Book Exchange will receive and sell books until Sept. 17 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Middlesex Room, S.U. Co-chairmen for this year's exchange are Dorette Gelzinis and Karl Polson.

WMUA: Many Openings

WMUA, the educational broadcasting station of the University, will resume operation Monday, Sept. 13. A station meeting will be held in the Student Union Council Chambers at 7:30 p.m. The staff and management of WMUA welcome all interested students at this meeting.

WMUA has a branch of service to develop skills, whatever your major, whatever your interests. There are openings in all departments--News, Announcing, Publicity, Engineering and Secretarial. Membership on the staff of WMUA offers the opportunity for personal achievement in a University sponsored activity.

Immediately following "Musical", WMUA will present "The Art of Jazz", a one-hour program featuring contemporary jazz artists. World news follows from 11-11:07 and "Spectrum 65" (11:07-1) will round out the evening's programming.

Dr. Houn regularly teaches undergraduate and graduate courses in major Asian governments, East Asian foreign policies, and East Asian government and politics.

He is presently on leave from the University, spending the current academic year as a research associate at Stanford University's Hoover Institution on War, Peace, and Revolution.

Medical School in Worcester, and our continued support of programs in Waltham and Wareham."

IN REFERENCE to the decision to locate the medical school in Worcester, the President said, "... the time for debate is past. We must unite and proceed. A first-rate University in Amherst can and will become a reality, and a first-rate Medical School in Worcester can and will become a reality. I ask that everyone cooperate in achieving those goals. The academic deans have assured the Board of Trustees of their full support, as have I and the other administrative officers. We are united; we are proceeding."

University trustees have agreed on the 300 acre Worcester State Hospital as the site for the Med School, and have approved Architects Collaborative of Cambridge and Ellerbe Associates of St. Paul, Minn., as the two firms to design the facility. Plans call for construction of a 400 to 600 bed hospital, a medical services building and some housing.

Dean of the school, Dr. Lamar Soutter, announced that the school will open for its first class by 1970 and possibly by 1969.

Dr. Harry C. Solomon, commissioner of mental health, has agreed to donate the necessary land, a move which would require legislative approval.

THE SITE IS suitable although there are some unfortunate aspects such as its being obscured from view by a vacant warehouse and an Armory.

He called on the faculty to give thought to continuing education and overseas programs. "Both of these," he said, "will expand greatly in the next few years but as in everything else, we will demand excellence."

He noted in particular current University programs in Uganda and Malawi in Africa, and pointed to course programs that will be conducted next summer in Europe.

He reminded the faculty of the importance of establishing close cooperation this year with the new UMass-Boston campus and with the newly-formed Board of Higher Education. He asked the faculty to work closely with the Provost in reviewing and recommending curriculum changes during the coming year.

PRES. LEDERLE praised the recent announcement that a new area institution, Hampshire College, will be formed. "We're very pleased and proud to be associated in the Four-College aspects of this trail-blazing education venture."

Noting that he is starting his sixth year as President, Dr. Lederle described recent accomplishments and present status of the University:

- UMass will have an enrollment this year of more than 13,000 students, approximately 12,000 of whom will be on the Amherst campus. About 2,500 of these will be graduate students.

- The University offers more than 1,000 courses in its two colleges, six schools and other departments.

- The Amherst campus consists of more than 100 major buildings on 1,100 acres. The replacement value is estimated at more than 120 million dollars.

- The growing graduate program now offers 29 doctoral programs (there were 13 in 1960) and 49 master's degree programs.

- Last year's budget exceeded 30 million dollars. Of this, 19 million dollars came from state appropriated funds.

- Sponsored research in 1965 stands at seven million dollars, compared to $500,000 in 1960.

- The University stands among the top public institutions in the U. S. in attracting students of high quality, as measured by college board scores and high school records.

- The library expansion program is progressing toward a goal of one million volumes by 1970.

- Fiscal autonomy, granted the University by the Legislature in 1962, continues to be the single most important factor in the University's success.

Pres. Lederle also cited the University's pioneering work in electronic data processing of administrative and business operations, national recognition of the new University Press, continued success of The Massachusetts Review, the new residential college plan, establishment of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter, year-round operation, a successful new summer Fine Arts Festival, and a number of other accomplishments.

University Theatre Releases Program

The University of Massachusetts Theatre in Amherst once again promises an outstanding season of events. There are six productions and twelve films slated for this fourth winter season.

Due to an overwhelming response from its production during this past summer season, the University Theatre will present a revived edition of The Fantasticks in October. This mock-romance musical scored a run of more than five years in New York, and huge successes in Europe, South America, and the Near East.

The Martyred, a new, untried play by Richard Greenbaum, is adapted from the best selling novel by Richard Kim. It is the moving story of Captain Lee's search for the truth during the Korean conflict and will be presented in November.

IN EARLY DECEMBER the University Theatre will present its first Master of Fine Arts production. It will be under the capable direction of graduate student Kenneth Bordner who will be remembered for his fine work as Harry Brock in Born Yesterday, Tom in The Glass Menagerie, and the Boy in The Fantasticks.

March will see the production of Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice, a fantastic comedy crowded with romance.

The University Theatre has assembled a Readers Theatre production based on the personal and public writings of Robert Frost to be presented in early April.

THE FINAL production of the season will be Arthur Miller's contemporary social drama A View From The Bridge. In addition to these six fine productions the University Theatre will once again present its film series. Early screen classics and contemporary experimental and documentary forms will be shown.

The series begins Sept. 28 with the showing of D.W. Griffith's Way Down East, starring Lillian Gish and Richard Barthelmess. This will be followed on October 19 by an evening of Chaplain films made from the Essany Company in 1915. Other films include Citizen Kane, and the Blue Angel. The twelve program series will conclude on May 17 with Kent Mackenzie's documentary The Exiles.

Season tickets for the six productions and twelve films are available for six dollars from The University Theatre, Department of Speech, Bartlett Hall, Amherst, Massachusetts.

Why An Editorial?

A century ago, any editorial which may have appeared in the nation's newspapers would have been considered absurd. For, the newspapers of that era made their opinions on all subjects well known through their regular news articles.

Today, however, reporters, editors, and publishers all consider the biased reporting of facts to be the cardinal sin of news writing. As a result, the editorial came into being.

A good editorial serves two related, but different purposes. The first is well known and needs no explanation. That is, an effort on the part of the author (or paper in the case of an unsigned editorial) to persuade readers to consider a certain matter in a certain way. The author tries to change the readers' opinions to coincide more closely with his own.

The other function served by a good editorial is not as well known. That function is to stimulate thought on a certain issue in the community served by the newspaper. Often, the mere mention of the issue may trigger debate. More often, however, the paper may have to portray a more radical stand, one in which it may not really believe, in order to end the apathy which envelops some issues, and help to motivate the thought processes into functioning.

The editorials which appear in the Collegian attempt to accomplish both of these functions. The Collegian's Board of Editors feels a responsibility to the campus for stimulating thought on issues which it considers to be of importance to the students and faculty of the University.

The Editorial Staff realizes its obligation to present on these pages opposing views which are responsibly voiced. As a result, it welcomes your comments, questions, praises, and complaints about any issue which you feel is of importance or interest to the community served by this press. Many letters are printed each week with the goal of presenting all sides of all issues. The few rules which govern the printing of letters appear elsewhere on this page.

The reader of any editorial should always bear in mind, that the goal of an editorial is to successfully voice an opinion. To call an editorial biased, is a compliment of the highest order.

Joel Hartstone,
Editorial Chairman

The Need To Know

We've heard about it occurring at other schools the University of California, Michigan, and elsewhere, and now it is happening here—welcome, freshmen, transfer students, and upperclassmen, to the overgrown university.

Mass education has arrived—crowds to be jostled by, lines to be waited in, and distances to be walked; the individual finds himself overwhelmed by the suffocating congestion of humanity, books, and numbers. This is a society created for the advantage of the IBM computer which, unable to function properly on the old system, desired that all course numbers be changed for its sake. Hence, English 28 became English 128, Economics 25 became Economics 125, and Men's Physical Education 00 became Men's Physical Education 000. Why be concerned about the confused student, searching helplessly through course schedules and section numbers, trying to decide without any professional guidance what subjects to take. Man is more adaptable than machines, anyway.

Registration more than exemplified the situation which has come into existence. Not only freshmen, but experienced juniors and seniors were angered and frustrated with the slowness and disinterest with which their problems were handled. Many students wasted an entire morning or afternoon just to make schedule changes, a process that should take no more than an hour. Some incidents were humorous. For instance, there was the coed standing behind several freshmen in the botany line who noticed that none of them had the signatures of their major department advisors on their change of course cards. She quickly moved herself up in the line by informing the freshmen of what they were missing, and watched smilingly as they all scattered in various directions to swell the crowds around other department tables. But these events are not insignificant, because they illustrate the alarming lack of knowledgeable assistance available to students.

The help is there, but the student has to take the initiative and not expect the help to come automatically to him. The problem is that many students honestly seeking proper advice do not know where to go for it.

Also, many students who know where to go for proper assistance, are discouraged from doing so by other annoyances such as bureaucratic red-tape and the limited office hours which advisors keep, through no fault of their own, since their own schedules are so time-consuming.

How many mistakes are thus made? How many students select the wrong profession or change majors because they feel they do not possess the material to survive in their first chosen career? These questions cannot be answered, but the fact remains that college students need expert advice and opinion since the decisions made now will affect their entire lives. At UMass where is this help coming from?

Joseph Zalkind
Editorial Associate Chairman

Colorado College Goes Progressive

Believing that the course credit system and the grading system may for some be barriers to genuine education, Colorado College will embark in September upon a program to provide opportunity for superior students to work independently through the four years of college.

Twenty-five freshmen will enroll for membership in the pilot group. These students will study under guidance of faculty preceptors. They will receive no course credit as such, although any class in the college will be open to them any time.

They will be given no grades, in the form of numbers or letters to be recorded and preserved, although their work in progress will be subjected to frequent criticism and evaluation. It is expected that they will confer often not only with their assigned preceptors but with many members of the faculty. They will submit frequent reports both orally and in writing, and more mature minds will regularly engage them in dialogue.

During the first two years, they will be asked to demonstrate by a series of examinations and/or papers and projects a high level of competence and learning in general education, covering in some depth a representative selection from the three traditional divisions of human knowledge: the humanities, the natural sciences, and the social sciences. They will also be expected to have command of at least one foreign language and of mathematics through the calculus.

When the student has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the faculty that his general education is adequate, (and this will normally require two academic years) he will then select a major field of study, working toward the writing of an honors thesis and sitting for comprehensive examinations both written and

Young Independents Prepare Activities For Coming Year

by Sandy Faiman

After a busy summer of individual work projects for many members of the Young Independents, UMass campus reorganization and membership drives began last Friday with an informal gathering outside the Student Union.

Young Independents, a chapter member of the Students for a Democratic Society, is the political group at the UMass associated with neither major political party in the United States. It has adopted a policy of striving to further democratic concepts, individual freedom and self-determination among all peoples.

LAST YEAR AT UMASS, Young Independents organized many important activities; and this year they hope to undertake many more activities of social importance. The Civil Rights Conference in February, protest demonstrations against Apartheid in South Africa, Vietnam peace marches, and numerous other projects highlighted the 1964-1965 school year.

Among the members working on summer projects, five members of Y.I. participated in the "Freedom Vigil" outside the School Committee building in Boston. One member, Steve Krinsky, who marched four to five days per week until the important bill was passed, said of the march that "the dedicated regulars" and other participants including clergymen, students, and housewives, were greatly responsible for the passing of the bill and for uncovering the subtle segregation which exists in the Boston School System."

In another summer project two Y.I. members were working for the Summer Community Organization and Political Education Project (SCOPE) in voter registration in South Carolina. SCOPE is associated with the Southern Christian Leadership Conference of which Dr. Martin L. King is president, and which has instituted community projects in both the north and south.

Psychologist Discusses Role Of College Profs.

The college teacher must have "fire in the belly and power in communication," as well as "respect for individuality," according to Dr. Gardner Murphy of the Menninger Foundation.

In a symposium address, published by the University of Texas, Dr. Murphy, a distinguished research psychologist, emphasized that the college teacher must be one who "has what it takes to hold interest, inspire learning, control the flow of confused ideas, give personal support, push forward and hold back."

He defined the poor teacher as "sarcastic or slovenly, arrogant or indifferent" and said a good teacher "is one whose respect for the student's point of view is paramount, even when the view is poorly informed and also poorly expressed."

"We cannot choose successful teachers by looking simply for people who are brilliant," Dr. Murphy warned. "There is probably a position correlation between brilliance and teaching skill, but there are many who have much of one and a little of the other, and I am talking now not about earning a reputation for brilliance, but about doing something worthy of the name of greatness in the field of college teaching," he continued.

Dr. Murphy pointed out that "it is almost entirely the problem of the teacher to perceive, reward, encourage, and advance the intellectual yearnings and cravings, and the professional

Intramural Report

by Art Keown

As the varsity coaches prepare their teams for action-packed schedules, preparations are underway in the Intramural Office to make this year the best yet in Intramural history. This year the schedule includes three new team events, bringing the total number of events to 17. On Tuesday, Sept. 14, there will be a meeting of all Intramural Athletic Chairmen at 7 p.m. in Room 255 Boyden to discuss the coming season.

Last year's Fraternity and Campus football Champs, Kappa Sigma, have lost the nucleus of their offensive and defensive units, and they will be hard pressed to retain their Championship. The Chadbourne Maroons, last year's Dormitory Champs and the winner of the Stephen Davis Award, have retained their unit almost intact, and are looking forward to a successful season. Champions of last year's Independent League were the Forestry Club.

Football rosters may be picked up in the Intramural Office, and are due for Fraternity teams on Sept. 15th and for Dormitory and Individual teams on Sept. 17th. The season starts on Sept. 22nd for Fraternities and on Sept. 23rd for the other teams. Games are played Monday thru Thursday at 6:30, 7:30, and 8:30 on the Intramural Field west of Boyden. Besides the normal team and individual Awards there will be several new trophies this year.

Rosters for Tennis (singles) are due in the IM office on or before Sept. 24. There are openings available in the IM office for any student who would like to officiate Intramural Touch Football. All those interested should report to Room 215 Boyden as soon as possible. Officials receive $1.25 per forty minute game.

Pro Prospectus

In a recent poll conducted by Sport Magazine it was decided that the Cleveland Browns and the Green Bay Packers will be the champions in the Eastern and Western Divisions of the National Football League.

In the American League the Buffalo Bills and the San Diego Chargers were picked as divisional champions.

The experts, composed of a leading pro football reporter from each league city, gave Cleveland nine of the 14 votes. Green Bay, however, was only a slight favorite over the Minnesota Vikings.

The Chargers were a unanimous selection in the AFL's West, while the Boston Patriots (recent victims of the Bills) were given a good chance in the East.

Further predictions were that Fran Tarkenton of the Vikings would be the Most Valuable Player in the N.F.L., with Keith Lincoln capturing the same honors in the Junior League.

The rushing leaders were predicted as Jim Brown of Cleveland in the National League and Mat Snell of the New York Jets in the American League. The projected passing leaders were Johnny Unitas of the Baltimore Colts and Len Dawson of the Kansas City Chiefs.

Managers

It has been announced that the Freshman Football team needs two managers for the current season. If anyone is interested please contact Charlie Bradshaw at 224 Wheeler House or at varsity football practice.

The experience is a rewarding one to any male student interested in the sport of football. He will be an important member of the squad and be able to make the trips to the different colleges.

and technical aspirations" of students. We have overlooked a tremendous requirement of the college teacher—that he respect individuality and encourage individuality in a direction where it may be most fulfilling," he emphasized.

"If he can do this by simply inspiring the student to the enjoyment of literature, home economics, science or history, that is fine," he continued. "The great teacher, however, is more than an inspirer of a group, even if he holds his inspired position in their minds and hearts for a whole college year. It is what digs deeper, what constitutes the basis for their love of learning and of using their minds over the years, that counts for the most," Dr. Murphy concluded.

for the past week with torn shoulder ligaments, but should be ready for the opener with Maine.

THE STARTING offensive interior line of the Redmen will likely be anchored by soph Dan Harrigan at the center position. Dan's chief competition, Don Rana, is currently victimized by a strained achilles tendon.

Larry Spidle and Bob Santucci will hold down the guard posts on offense with Bob Gogick also seeing action.

The loss of Burke, Hagberg and Kehoe at tackle has presented Fusia with his greatest problem. Veteran Bill "Tree" Connor (6'6", 225 lbs.) is solid at one tackle, but Fusia must pick an inexperienced player at the other all-important tackle slot. John Jim Mitchell (6'1", 230 lbs.) may well get the call.

UMass will take advantage of the new substitution rules by employing a separate defensive unit. Distinguishable by their blue shirts at practice sessions, Fusia's version of the Chinese Bandits are led by linebackers Bernie Dallas, Dave Kelly, and Rod Brooks. All have proven themselves to be excellent defensive players.

THE DEFENSIVE secondary will be filled by two-way star Bob Ellis, Leo Biron, Dave Giarla and Safetyman Ed Cody.

Soph Paul Mlinar will spell Morin and Meers on defense. A converted fullback, Mlinar has grown to 225 pounds and will see much action at defensive end.

A new stadium, new substitution rules, and new personnel, but the same old result for the 1965 Redmen-victory!

Harvard scored their lone TD in the fourth quarter when Coach Vic Fusia had his subs in the game. The score was set up by a 79 yard punt return by John Dockery. The Harvard half-back would have gone all the way it not for a great tackle by Bill Compton. The only other Crimson drive was stopped by an interception by Dave Giarla.

VIEWPOINT

by Mike Gould

Vic Fusia, varsity football coach at UMass, lost two of New England's finest quarterbacks last season in Jerry Whelchel and John Schroeder. This made Vic very sad.

Greg Landry is a sophomore at UMass. He is 6'4" tall, weighs 200 pounds, spends his summers in Nashua, New Hampshire, and is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity. Greg Landry also plays football. His position is quarterback. Greg runs like a deer and throws a football with great accuracy. Vic Fusia is happy again!

COACH FUSIA is accustomed to backfield depth, and this year is no exception. Waiting in the quarterback wings will be seniors Dack Cain and Steve Trbovich and junior Al Caruso. All three have shown themselves to be capable of doing the job if Landry should falter.

The running back positions are up for grabs. As of now, Terry Swanson, Bob Ellis and Dick Benoit have the inside track, but if they should look over the wrong shoulder, any of Phil Vandorsea, Leo Biron, and Don Durkin could take over a starting berth. Of the six mentioned, only Biron weighs under 200 pounds.

The main targets for Landry's aerials will be the much renowned pair of Milt Morin and Bob Meers. Not much need be said about this duo. Both have been all YanCon selections for two years. Morin excels in one-handed catches, while Meers is uncanny at picking off deflected passes for winning touchdowns. Milt has been taking things easy

Joseph Marcus Addresses Small Convocation Audience

by Jane Roland

"We have our own unique problems and should develop along our own unique lines," Professor Joseph Marcus told the opening convocation audience Tuesday afternoon in Bowker Auditorium.

PRIOR TO MARCUS' speech University President John W. Lederle presented the Distinguished Teacher of the Year Award to Prof. John H. Dittfach of the School of Engineering.

Marcus, first faculty member ever to give an opening convocation main address, is a School of Engineering Professor and recipient of last year's Metawampe Award.

He continued, "We can borrow what we consider good from other schools, but in the analysis we must develop in our own way, even if it means breaking with some of the more sacred academic traditions."

Speaking on the role of the faculty, Prof. Marcus noted that undergraduate instruction should not be neglected for research and other scholarly pursuits. Faculty members who neglect such pursuits to give time to programs more directly involved with teaching should be compensated for the resultant neglect of the major field of interest, he suggested.

HE EMPHASIZED the fact that the recipients of the Outstanding Teacher Award and the Metawampe award are almost always not research-oriented.

One answer to a major problem, the current wave of student unrest, is more student involvement. "Perhaps ten percent of the student body carries the interest load and the other ninety percent could seem to care less."

He equated the wave of unrest with an uninformed and uninvolved student majority and suggested a student-faculty-administration "Summit Conference" to stimulate more student involvement and to concentrate on some of the major problems which face students today.

A UNIVERSITY is never free of problems, Prof. Marcus said, but, with the historical advantage of seventeen years of teaching at UM, he is optimistic about the future. Talking about the Northwest Residence Hall complex, he said, "I can reveal that some of the plans being considered are highly exciting."

He feels happy to be part of the growth taking place in quality as well as in quantity and said there is an air of excitement in the school that could not be found when it was still Mass Aggie.

The Convocation, formally opening the 1965 academic year, began with an academic procession and an invocation by Monsignor David J. Power, Chaplain to Catholic students. Provost Oswald Tippo presided and Student Senate President Richard Dacey welcomed students.

Four Dates Set for Faculty-Student Nights

by Steve Gordon
Day Editor

The University Provost's office has announced a series of four All-University student-faculty evenings. The following evenings have been set aside for exclusive use of schools and colleges, departments, advisers and faculty for academic counseling and related academic activities:

- Tuesday, September 21, 1965
- Monday, November 29, 1965
- Tuesday, February 8, 1966
- Tuesday, April 26, 1966

The student-faculty evenings have been planned in response to a Student Senate claim that counseling day is "largely clerical."

The evenings are so planned that one falls at the beginning of each semester and one immediately precedes Counseling Day itself.

SMALL GROUP COUNSELING will be available at a more leisurely pace, making Counseling Day more important and Counseling Day program decisions more meaningful.

The evenings will not provide for student-faculty social contact, but, rather, for academic contact without the presence of a desk. Professor J. Savereid, Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, described the contact as a "socialized academic atmosphere."

Dr. William C. Venman, Assistant Provost, said he expected the student-faculty evenings to produce a "smoother and more effective counseling process," which would lead to an elimination of many of the present difficulties students run into on Registration Day.

Dr. Venman has taken great care to avoid any conflicts on the four evenings, as he feels that every student should have this opportunity for counseling, without the clerical pressure of pre-registration.

Blasko Warns:

Beware, Parkers!

by Richard Danca
Day Editor

Northampton Traffic Court was jammed yesterday by UMass students trying to pay their traffic violation debts so they could apply for new parking permits. Students have paid fines of over $100.

Some 7500 parking tickets were issued last academic year and Campus Police Chief "Red" Blasko has indicated he will once again keep Northampton District court filled with parking offenders.

Increased towing will be another weapon in the war on illegal parking; removal of cars from restricted and incorrect parking areas will be a big job for "Andy" Anderson.

The town of Amherst has come to the rescue of campus officials and campus police will enforce the town father's ban on parking on North Hadley Rd., by the Southwest Complex.

This restriction is temporary and may be lifted when better pedestrian facilities are available in the area.

Areas on which towing will be strict include sidewalks; crosswalks; within 20 feet of an intersection; land "not designated for vehicular traffic such as walks, lawns, and open fields"; visitor parking areas; and parking spaces reserved for Official vehicles.

Blasko has also indicated he will enforce the rule forbidding two-wheeled motor vehicles from being driven or parked within

Student Senate

Involvement Pledged

by Jim Foudy
Senate Reporter

"It is time that the Student Senate had more of a say in curriculum, admissions policies and University planning." This will be one of the goals of Senate President Richard Dacey when he calls the new student Senate session to order this evening.

Dacey told the Collegian that student government needs a greater role in shaping University policy, and that the "avenues of communication with the Administration do exist."

The Senate President suggested greater "personal contact with the faculty" to achieve this goal, but stressed the need for the student body to back the Senate's programs "to the hilt".

A greater roll by the Senate ... "community involvement on and off campus" is also being planned by Dacey.

As an example he suggested the establishment of a tutorial program in neighboring communities. This would be a program patterned after that of the Belchertown Volunteers — a group of students who work with the children at the Belchertown State School.

PRESIDENT DACEY also noted the need for graduate and foreign student representation in the Student Government Association.

He pointed out that a number of graduate students have considered the establishment of their own senate and feels that the matter deserves immediate attention.

In its first meeting this evening the Senate will consider a motion requiring that officers in R.S.O. organizations maintain a cumulative average which meets the graduation average of their class.

"The bill provides for the suspension of an organization's constitution, and finances if they fail to comply with the legislation."

The Senate will also consider a motion which would:

Kathie is majoring in German and lives in Brooks House. Among her interests are poetry, folk and classical music and sports cars.

Kathie likes action and believes in trying anything once. Kathie was a little frightened by the size of UMass at first but now is at ease and thinks the male population on campus is "just great".

Discussion of Student Draft Programmed for Sept. 29

by Tom Donovan

How much influence does the Viet Nam war have on various enlistment and commissioning programs for college students?

How can a student fulfill his military obligation without draft dodging or carrying a rifle?

Is it true that college students will soon be drafted out of college?

These and other questions will be subjects of a panel discussion-question and answer session Sept. 29, at 7:30 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium.

The convocation, moderated by the director of Placement and Financial Aid, Robert Morrissey, will present author's as on draft and enlistment, including the director of the State Selective Service, Mr. Carr, the professors of Air and Military Science at UMass, and the heads of the Armed Forces Enlistment and Commissioning Programs in New England.

Men's Placement Officer Robert Gailey has said that the college-draftees rumor will also be discussed. The rumor, heard on the nation's campuses, is that college students in the lower 50 per cent of their class will soon be drafted if the severity of the Viet Nam war does not abate.

Also on the agenda will be an evaluation of the effects the increased draft call are having on the Armed Forces, the student and industry's willingness to hire college graduates.

Perhaps the single most important piece of information to be discussed will be the opportunity of fulfilling one's military obligation by working two years for either the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey or the U. S. Public Health Service.

The 30-minute panel discussion will be followed by a question period in which interested students can learn how they stand in relation to military service.

Art Exhibit On Display In Union

"Moods of Light", an exhibition of contemporary paintings is on display in the SU through Sept. 26.

The exhibit, on tour of the U.S. and Canada by the American Federation of Arts, features works of 12 artists.

In each of the paintings light is used for specific expressive purpose and never simply a scientific observation of nature on canvas. Observation of light in these paintings will reveal to what extent the use of light furthers the goal of the painter.

Most of the paintings are on sale by the Federation at prices ranging from $450 to $2000.

STUDENT SENATE...

• Require the Student Senate President and Editor-in-Chief of the Collegian to attend both sessions of summer school and undertake no more than 12 credit hours in the Fall and Spring semesters.

• Require the Student Senate to "raise and appropriate the funds necessary for the summer session . . . not to exceed $200 per individual."

This policy will be at the option of the Senate President and Editor-in-Chief of the Collegian.

The Student Senate meetings are held Wednesday evenings in the Council Chambers of the Student Union and all are welcome to attend.

Orientation Held for New Faculty

In keeping with past policy, the University sponsored on Sept. 8 a faculty orientation program for new faculty members.

The purpose of the orientation was for new faculty members to meet their fellow newcomers, the administration and other people at the University, and to acquaint them with the various services of the University.

The orientation included a talk on the effective use of the library by University librarian, Hugh Montgomery, another talk on the University Faculty Club, and some insights into the University's grading system by Dean Tunis.

Karen Garvin, Vice-president of the Student Senate, addressed the new faculty members on the types and functions of the various student organizations.

According to Ken Suid, Assistant to the Provost, and coordinator of the new faculty orientation program, over 200 faculty members were present.

Suid also said that "for the first time an organized tour of the campus was conducted by the new University guides."

We Need A Leader

"Row, row, row your boat" goes the nursery rhyme but you can have your chance in earnest as the newly-formed UMass Rowing Association meets tonight at 7 in Boyden Gymnasium, Room 249. New members are welcome as well as any coaches who would like to help.

The fledgling club, founded in 1963 has been aided by almost every major college and university in the state including Yale University which donated a rowing shell to the club in 1963, and Amherst College which has been providing facilities and coaching for the club since its inception. Mr. Blysdale, dean of the UMass Agricultural School has been instrumental in helping the Rowing Assoc. by constructing a right-of-way to the Connecticut Rv. as well as providing a storage area for club equipment.

President Robert Ford invites meeting and emphasized the most urgent need is for a coach either student or faculty, with previous experience.

The Contact Story

Down the Drain

by Sherry Spear
Feature Editor

The greatest invention since peanut butter and it disappears down dorm drains, causes tears and ruins make-up: the contact lens.

Every young college student who has long since shed her (or his) braces now comes equipped with these plastic wonders. Floating on a layer of tears and practically invisible, they can be seen disconcertingly wandering in the eye of an examining physician at the infirmary, doing away with the myopic stare of young misses at dances or halting a basketball clock as it's down on the knees for the teams.

Contact lenses are not new, first appearing over thirty years ago as a fitted glass completely enclosing the eyeball. Shrinking down to fingertip size over the years and appearing in rainbow colors, they have created a whole new breed of "specialists" and problems. They are so easy to forget, lose, pop out — how many are found in the filtersystems of pools or lost forever to insurer's delight down sink drains.

While it may not be particularly true that boys don't make passes at girls who wear glasses — it doesn't hurt to have some help. But wearing time is the biggest factor with the lim, it gradually increasing from one-half hour daily until toleration reaches a peak of 18 hours without harm. Scleral damage may be caused by unclean lenses or handling of the eye which has provoked claims as to the latent danger of contacts. The

The Prof's Attitude and The Student

By Tom Shuford

Self-respect is perhaps the hardest goal to accomplish in college.

More than any other requirement set before a student during his undergraduate years, obtaining one's own respect involves hard work, self-control and enthusiasm.

Unfortunately, a great percentage of students gear their efforts to what they think the professor will like. In doing so, they are only trying to excuse their own inadequate work.

BUT SOME ASSIGNMENTS offer little room for such originality. Making college students summarize textbook chapters, for example, is one way some professors cover material. This time-consuming chore might be defended by the professors who would argue it was the only way to make some students open their books.

This argument, though valid, is insufficient. The poorer student will probably not do the assignment in the first place. Or if he does, it will be such a haphazard job that it does not justify wasting the better student's time since he would have read the chapter anyway.

In the long run such an assignment fails miserably. It doesn't stimulate the bad student and bores the better student.

Such a situation in which professors must teach classes filled with competent and less-than-average students is bad. None of the students really benefit. Perhaps several honors sections could be set up in the departments so that brighter students would not be bogged down in the mire of mediocrity that most large classes offer.

HOWEVER, IF PROFESSORS are not going to inspire students with their assignments and lectures, they should at least not hinder students by wasting time.

It would be far better for a professor who has not adequately prepared an oral lecture by class time to dismiss the class than to detain students for an hour or so with not-too-funny tales about "the old days at such and such a university."

But the burden remains with the students. To do an assignment well requires time. The student must also show enthusiasm for his work if it is to

The Door Is Open

Many students at UMass have complained in the past of apathy on the part of the faculty. And, probably, even more faculty members have complained about apathy on the part of the students on this campus.

This feeling may very well be ending shortly as a result of a new program being instituted at the University to help sponsor a closer student-faculty relationship. Four times throughout the year (once at the beginning of each semester, and once before each counseling day) all departments of all schools of the University will hold an informal open house.

The provost feels that by introducing the students and faculty to each other early in the semester, the University can open the door to a closer relationship later, between students and their professors.

These programs are being held on Tuesday nights, and there will be no other scheduled activities at the times selected. The Administration has done its part in trying to improve the situation which is so often criticized.

It is now up to the students to take advantage of the new program to its fullest.

If no one attends these open houses but the faculty, not only will the situation remain stagnant, but it will get worse. For this will only serve to prove to the faculty that their opinions about the student body are correct. It will show them that the students really do not care about the faculty-student relationship, but are merely complaining for its own sake.

The door has been opened for the students, but they must take the step inside. These open houses have been arranged for you, but it is up to you to take advantage of them.

An Experience In Living

Now that fraternity rushing for upper-classmen has begun it is a good time to commence the annual flurry of words and opinion which accompanies this event.

Whether or not to join a fraternity, and if so, which one, is a perplexing matter. While sophomores and juniors may be slightly more informed about fraternities than freshmen, both groups will find themselves muddled in confusion as all the stories, rumors, falsehoods, and truths travel back and forth. The decision is made even more difficult by the influence of friends who are fraternity members and by the fact that becoming a brother will make a crucial difference not only in college life, but after graduation as well. The friends and contacts made during college years often become lifelong associates, while to one used to living alone according to personal or family needs only, the experience of living together, with a group of peers can bring about marked improvement in social attitudes and individual principles.

Of course, there are the skeptics who will reply that fraternities can also bring about a degeneration of character, but such is not the truth. A brother who has developed a reputation for wildness more than likely possessed the tendencies toward irresponsible behavior long before pledging. Such a brother has simply used the liberal facilities offered by fraternities to unfair advantage, and would have been a disciplinary problem regardless of whether or not he joined a fraternity.

Again, the skeptics will reply that there are then too many brothers who go beyond what society considers the normal limits of decency or that there is something in fraternities which brings out the irrational in young men. Once again, there is no truth to such statements. These people have been misled by the slanted publicity which has emphasized the relatively few incidents of trouble, while hardly mentioning the many acts of goodwill and service to individual, school, and community which fraternities perform.

The question then remains, what has caused this false publicity? Why have fraternities become such a controversial topic? Why have they been the recipients of so much adverse criticism?

A great deal of the fault lies with the rushing system. In their attempt to attract new rushees and pledges the fraternities have themselves over-emphasized having a good time. Fraternities are much more than social life and weekend parties—they are an experience in living. Without any adult supervision the brothers handle all house matters, from food, to repairs, to bills. It is not an ideal society—brothers argue, problem have to be solved; but from this a student can derive something which cannot be learned in the class. It takes mature, responsible, young men to keep a house active and strong. This is what rushees should be made aware of—there are the parties and the good time, yes, but they are only a small part of the entire concept which is fraternity living.

Orchard Speaks Out

When we were first assigned to the Orchard Hill Complex last September we understood that we would be eating in the new Dining Commons. This seemed ideal because as a complex we could dine together in a hall conveniently situated. The Orchard Hill Complex, as we understood it, was an experiment in community living. Under adverse conditions (no plumbing, heating, and other essentials) we participated in this experiment enthusiastically and were commended for this enthusiasm. We demonstrated with our spirit that it was possible for over 1,000 students to live together as a community.

Upon our arrival this September, we were informed that we were no longer to dine in the South Commons. The students living in the new Southwest Complex (who, by the way, are living in finished dormitories already complete with such extras as landscaping and carpeting) and those in Brooks and Brett and replacing us in the South Commons. This defeats the purpose of the Orchard Hill Complex since in the North Commons we can no longer dine together.

Why was this necessary? We put up with many inconveniences when our dormitories were new, surely the Southwest students would have put up with a little extra walk. Certainly, we walk far enough each day. Brooks and Brett have always eaten in the North Commons, there is no reason why they suddenly had to be moved.

The whole plan not only lacks organization but also understanding. The Orchard Hill Complex was unit 1 by a central meeting place—the Dining Commons. Now there is really nothing that we can all participate in together. The new road that has been put in (from the Orchard to the North Commons) is no compensation for the convenience and atmosphere of the South Dining Commons.

In summary, the Southwest Complex has its own Dining Commons which is now under construction. Since it is expected to be completed by next semester would it not have been simpler to have those students eat at the North Commons, leaving the Orchard Hill at the South Commons? Or are the Orchard Hill students going to remain at the North Commons permanently?

Welcome, New Staffers

To assure that new members of the Collegian staff are well-acquainted with their jobs, the editors and the technical advisor, will hold an orientation session tonight at 6 in the Collegian office.

The purpose of the brief meeting is to acquaint new members with the editors and demonstrate publishing techniques. They will be assigned to staffs and given jobs commensurate with their experience.

Positions are open in all departments but students are warned that deadlines impose certain responsibilities that must be met for the benefit of the others who must work on the team.

Every student has different amounts of time he can afford but none are asked to sacrifice study or class time for newspaper jobs.

Please be prompt.

Rev. Edward Meade To Lead Open Retreat

Father Meade will speak at all Masses Sunday and will lead the evening devotions at 7. Devotions will consist of rosary, benediction and a sermon.

All students are invited to attend this Open Retreat.

The retreat will continue Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday when Father Meade will give a short talk after the 6:50 a.m., 12:15 p.m., and 5 p.m. Masses. Evening devotions will be held at 7 on these days. The retreat will come to a close after the Wednesday evening devotions.

Father Meade was born in Toronto, Ontario. He graduated from Regiopolis College Prep., a Jesuit school in Kingston, Ontario. In 1957, Father Meade graduated from Loyola Univ. of Los Angeles where he majored in Industrial Relations.

The following September he entered the Paulist Fathers Novitiate in N.J. He then went to St. Paul's College in Washington where he studied Philosophy for two years and Theology for four years. Father Meade was ordained by Cardinal Spellman in May of 1964.

Responsibility and Reward Challenge UM Counselors

In the life at the University, one experiences many things that add to growth, as well as knowledge. Among these growing experiences is that of being a dormitory counselor.

Being a counselor is an honor and a tough job, but one filled with fulfillment and satisfaction. The task consists of many large and small obligations, from interpretation of University rules to dating advice.

The burden of running the dormitory falls on the counselors and the house mother. In weekly sessions, the house council gathers to discuss the happenings of the past week and to make decisions concerning transgressions of the rules.

A dedicated, qualified person is required to fulfill such a demanding position, and the Dean of Women's office carefully screens all applicants before final choices are made.

In addition to the Dean of Women's office, applications are reviewed by the present dorm council and by dorm councils in other dorms.

To be a dormitory counselor, then, is something special; it is a reward in itself. It is recognition of an individual's worth to himself and to the people with whom he must associate.

In all cases it takes time and patience to be a good counselor. To know the meaning of responsibility, one must accept it; to fully know yourself you must learn to know others. A counselor, perhaps more than any other individual, learns to know people and their problems and eventually his own problems are squarely met.

Caesura Awaiting Contribution

Caesura is now accepting material for consideration for the Fall issue. The following suggestions are intended as a guide for the preparation of manuscripts.

- Contributions will be accepted from all students, graduate and undergraduate, and members of the University community.

- Manuscripts should be left in the suitably marked basket on the Caesura desk, Franklin room, SU. Contributions of art work should be made directly to the Caesura art staff.

- Ideally, all manuscripts should be typed on 8 1/2 x 11 paper. Poems should be limited to one per page. Manuscripts of more than one page should be stapled or clipped together with pages numbered. The author's name and mailing address should appear on a separate sheet with the manuscript, or on the outside of the envelope, but not on the manuscript proper.

Exams Will Be Held For Future Teachers

College seniors preparing to teach school may take the National Teacher Examination on any of the following dates:

December 11, 1965; March 19, July 16, and October 8, 1966.

Results of the National Teacher Examinations are used by many large school districts as one of several factors in the selection of new teachers and by several states for certification or licensing of teachers.

Lists of school systems which use the examination results are distributed to colleges by the Educational Testing Service.

Prospective teachers may take the Common Examinations, which measure the professional and general preparation of teachers, and one of 13 Teaching Area Examinations which measure mastery of the subject they expect to teach.

Prospective teachers should contact the school systems in which they seek employment, or their colleges, for specific advice on which examinations to take and on which dates they should be taken.

A Pulletin of Information containing a list of test centers, information about the examinations and a registration form may be obtained from college placement officers or directly from National Teacher Examinations, Box 911, Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

Various Fraternity Topics Discussed at Workshop

The Interfraternity Council sponsored its first annual Management Workshop Sept. 7 and 8 to discuss with the officers of each fraternity on campus their responsibilities to their fraternity, the fraternity system and the campus community.

After a welcoming speech by Robert McNeil, Jr., administrative vice-president, the Workshop began with group discussions. The topics ranged from individual fraternity problems to improvement of the entire fraternity system.

Later in the day members of the administration spoke briefly on these topics and joined in the discussion. The participating speakers were Robert Hopkins, dean of men; William Barnard, assistant dean of men; Evan Johnston, executive director of the Alumni Association; George Rogers, director of the fraternity managers association and Dr. Peters from the University Health Service.

The Workshop was highlighted with a speech by George W. Spasyk, service secretary for Lambda Chi Alpha Fraternity. A native of Pittsfield, Mass., Spasyk received his Bachelor's and Master's degrees from the University of Michigan in 1949 and 1950. After his graduation, he was appointed Traveling Secretary for Lambda Chi Alpha and in 1952 was named Service Secretary to head up the undergraduate chapter operations of the fraternity. Mr. Spasyk has authored a number of fraternity publications and manuals and since 1952 has been active in the development of new chapters and housing programs.

His talk centered around the ties and the Fraternity System. He stressed improvements in the system and methods used by fraternities throughout the country.

After adjournment Sam Armstrong, president of I.F.C. said, "The Workshop proved to be helpful and productive. An expanded Workshop is planned for next year."

Covenant Community Holds Ten-Hour Study Seminar

Last year more than 30 students from the University participated in the Covenant Community.

In order to interest new students the Covenant Community is sponsoring a "10 hour Study Seminar" this Saturday Sept. 18 at which the film version of Tennessee Williams' play, "Cat On a Hot Tin Roof" will be shown and discussed. The seminar will be held at a retreat center in Northampton and students interested in attending are asked to meet at 12:30 on Saturday in front of the Student Union.

Sensing a need for a fresh approach to the meaning and the value of the Christian faith on the mid-20th century campus, the Covenant Community was begun last year.

The purpose of the Community is to consider the meaning of human existence through reading and conversation about contemporary theological and cultural writings and it offers a four year curriculum placing emphasis upon religious cultural understanding.

The communal nature of the experiment was created to provide the student with the possibility of rediscovering the nature of "community."

The students who participate in the Community covenant are responsible not only for their study assignments, but also for collectively creating and participating in some action project in the political, cultural or economic arena.

Last year, students from the Covenant Community created and used a curriculum in one of the "culturally deprived" areas of Springfield. The curriculum employed folk music, films and paintings in order to help the teenagers gain some sense of their own value and significance as human beings.

Dr. Leonard, past UMass History professor will return to the campus Sept. 16, to speak to the YTs.

Dr. Leonard to Talk at Independents Meeting

Dr. David Leonard, a member of the UMass History Department from 1962-1965, will be the featured speaker at the first formal meeting of Young Independents to be held on Thursday, Sept. 16, at 6:30 p.m. in the Worcester Room, SU. The topic of this informal discussion will be, "Is the American View of the World Madness?"

While at UMass, Dr. Leonard lectured extensively on current national and international affairs. During the past year, he spoke at the Four College Civil Rights Conference held in February, the Teach-in on Vietnam, as well as in debates and several civil rights and Vietnam demonstrations sponsored by Young Independents.

Dr. Leonard received his B.A. degree from Brown University. He then continued his studies at the University of Michigan, where he was awarded MA and PhD degrees. While at Brown, he was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa society.

Presently teaching at American International College in Springfield, Dr. Leonard has also taught at Mt. Holyoke College and at Smith College.

Dave Kelley:*Football Profile

by Art Keown

Among the returning lettermen scheduled to start against Maine on Saturday, none has a more colorful or active background than defensive halfback Dave Kelley. The son of a former head football coach at Brown and Colgate, Kelley last year was the recipient of The Redman Award, which he received for being outstanding defenseman on the UMass team.

Dave's active career began in high school in Geneva, New York, where he lettered in four sports. For two years he was All Conference Fullback, and in his Senior year Dave was voted to the All Uppstate New York team.

During the winter months Dave was a member of the Wrestling team, and as a Junior in the 157 lb. class he became New York State Champion. Speed and agility have been a great part of Kelley's success, and he demonstrated this by lettering in track, in which he excelled at the low hurdles.

In baseball Dave played catcher, and in his senior year he was elected to the All Uppstate New York team. One would think that competing in all these sports would have left little time for other activities, yet Dave had time to be Sports Editor of the Yearbook and a member of the Student Council. In his Senior year Dave was elected President of the District 7 Student Council.

After graduating from high school Dave came to UMass, where he is a Senior majoring in Physical Education. Since coming here Dave has made Dean's list twice. He is a member of the Scabbard and Blade, a Military Honor Group, and a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity. Dave has lettered in three Varsity sports; football, wrestling and lacrosse. He is undefeated in 102 dual wrestling matches in his high school and college career. As a freshman in the 177 lb. class Dave came in 2nd in the New England Wrestling Tournament, being defeated by Springfield College wrestler Joe Cerra by 1 point. Last year as a Junior he again placed 2nd to Cerra in the Varsity tournament by 1 point. After playing spring football last year, Kelley started as a defenseman on coach Garber's lacrosse team. While participating in all these activities Dave still finds time to be a Dormitory Councillor in Hills South.

After graduation Dave will enter the Army as a 2nd Lieutenant. When his tour of duty is over Dave's plans are to coach football on the college level.

Nebraska Pre-Season Pick For No. 1 Team in Nation

by John Cunningham

Are raised academic standards and entrance requirements going to hurt the football hopes of the Texas Longhorns? Will Ara Parseghian be able to come up with another winning squad despite the loss of his two All-Americans, Jack Snow and John Huarte? Has Southern Cal., the team that beat Notre Dame last season, been able to find a quarterback?

If the answer to these questions is yes, then any one of these teams is a threat for the number one rating.

However, since the answers are not to be found until the season is underway, I am going to put my money on last year's Big Eight Champs, Nebraska.

In '64 the Cornhuskers ranked number two in the nation in total defense and except for the loss of one man in the secondary, the entire defensive unit is back this year.

With quarterback Bob

Churchich, the Big Eight's top passer last year, tossing to two great ends, Freeman White and Tony Jeter, Nebraska's offensive unit is out to improve on their number six National ranking of 1964. The offensive line is big and fast and the entire backfield returns from last year.

Reports out of Michigan are that Dick Vidmer looks as good as All-American Quarterback Bob Timberlake did last year. Actually Vidmer had a good chance of beating out Timberlake is '64 until he was injured in practice.

Bruising backs and a stubborn defense spell a big year for Michigan. Michigan suffers from a lack of depth in the offensive line, but its regulars are as good as any in the nation.

Last year in the Sugar Bowl L.S.U. showed those Northerners, Syracuse, exactly what to expect if they have not got sense enough to stay home and mind their own business. L.S.U. is going to be extending this modern version of southern hospitality to its Southwestern Conference neighbors this year.

The offense includes top S.E.C. rusher, Don Schwab, and speedster, Joe Labrusco. If quarterback Pat Screen has completely recovered from his knee operation, the backfield has the balance that it needs.

Of course the Chinese Bandits, L.S.U.'s famous defensive squad, is going to be as tough as ever.

Confab Approves New Grad Senate

The constitution of the new Graduate Senate was ratified last night at a meeting in Hasbrouck attended by some 200 graduate students.

The purpose of the Senate will be to give graduates more of a voice in University policies and to promote the well-being of graduate students.

It will work with the administration on such graduate matters as housing, parking and cultural matters.

New Church Busses Listed

There will be a new bus service from all campus points to churches starting on Sunday, Sept. 19. Busses will start from the Lincoln Apartments, proceed along the North Hadley Road to the Southwest Complex, along Boyden Drive, Flint Road, Ellis Drive, to the girl's dorms on North Pleasant St.

They will return along North Pleasant St. to Stockbridge Rd., the Newman Center, the First Baptist Church, the Methodist Church and the new Lutheran Church.

Busses will depart from the Lincoln Apartments at 7:40 A.M., 8:45, 9:40, 10:40, and 11:15 A.M. Busses will return after each service.

Other busses will start from the Orchard Hill, along Clark Hill Rd., at 7:45 A.M., 8:50, 9:45, 10:15, 10:40, 11:05, 11:45 and 12:10 P.M. to the same churches. One way fare is 25c.

Senators will be elected from every department, school or division offering a graduate degree, with one senator for every fifty graduates or fraction thereof.

There will be a maximum of three senators per department and every regular graduate student is qualified to vote in elections and be elected to the senate.

Initiation of the Senate was sparked by a successful move by graduates to make payment of athletic fees optional for graduate students.

Union Undergoes Surgery

by Richard Danca

The Student Union is getting a facelift, from the Ballroom floor to an art corridor to a sidewalk cafe treatment outside the Hatch.

Three changes in the Lobby are the new IFC guides, the ticket office near the Lounge, and the turntable signboard designed to hold 18 posters and end the Lobby clutter.

Gold felt now covers four of the games area pool tables and an expansion is in the works for the walk-in coffee service which will ease more of the new strain on the Hatch.

The new Ballroom floor, replacing the aging original parquet, is a more permanent "terrazzite" floor containing rock chips and plastic.

"Moods of Light", a collection of contemporary art, is the first of what the Student Union hopes will be an uninterrupted series

YAHOO 'Rots,' Scoffs Senator As Investigation Threat Looms

by Jim Fouady,
Senate Reporter

Is the Yahoo meeting the requirements of a campus humor magazine or should there be an investigation of its goals and functions?

This question, the establishment of a Collegian Publishing Board and President Richard Dacey's opening address were the highlights of Wednesday's lively Student Senate meeting.

In its first session, the Senate approved a budget binding clause to suspend Yahoo funds pending a report by a joint Senate-Administration committee due Feb. 16, 1966.

However, the entire budget including the binding clause must meet final approval at the Fall Petitioning Meeting on the Budget. The clause is also up for amendment by Senator Greenquist (Thatcher).

Greenquist pointed out that the idea for an investigation was primarily sponsored by the Administration and he feels that "we are losing face when we submit to the demands of the Deans."

"We are not here to fear the Administration but to work with it", he said.

Senator Greenquist's amendment calls for an investigation without the suspension of funds. This would allow Yahoo to meet its publishing dates.

Other senators also fear "encroachment" by the Administration into student governed activities.

DEFENDING the bill, Senate Treasurer Gary Bombardier feels that Yahoo needs some "housecleaning."

In the midst of the argumentative session Bombardier exclaimed that the Yahoo "rots". "There is a definite need for an investigation now", he said.

The Senate Treasurer feels that the "weak" functional structure of the Yahoo would warrant the suspension of funds until the publication can be "recognized".

The amendment by Senator Greenquist will be considered at the next Senate session.

In his opening address, President Richard Dacey called on the Senate to help "revise the role of student government on campus".

DUE TO THE rapid growth of the University, President Dacey feels that the senators are losing the necessary "face-to-face contact" with their constituencies.

He also called for a greater Senate role in changing admission and curriculum policies and in University planning, and asked the help of all senators in expanding the on and off campus activities of the Student Government Association.

IN OTHER business the Senate approved the Collegian Publishing Board Constitution.

The publishing board will consist of Collegian Editors and Advisors, a faculty member, an alumnus and a Student Senator with the purposes of:

- representing the publishing interests of the University community.

- deciding general editorial and business policy not covered in the Collegian's constitution.

- assessing the "quality of the newspaper" and "educational experience being provided the staff."

- coordinating business and editorial work and aiding the staff in "producing a newspaper which will realize its purposes as stated in its constitution."

Suspension

'Absurd,' Says Jones

by Jim Fouady,
Senate Reporter

"The Yahoo must publish before February . . . the students paid for their first issue and they should get it."

This is the feeling of Yahoo Editor Roger Jones in light of a Student Senate proposal to suspend Yahoo funds pending an investigation of the humor magazine.

The Senate-Administration committee which would conduct the investigation would report on or before Feb. 16, 1966, a date which Yahoo feels is "absurd".

"They could investigate by November", Jones said, "Otherwise we can only get out two issues".

The Yahoo Editor's biggest objection is that "it was all done behind our backs". If the Administration felt a need for an investigation they could have come to us", Jones stated.

In a similar interview, Yahoo Art Editor John Canney admitted a need for structural reorganization, but does not feel it necessary to "stop publication to do so".

"Some people don't like Time", he commented, "But they don't stop publication for a minority".

He admitted that there will always be a few complaints, but that "some people even complain about the women's underwear ads".

Canney blames any Yahoo disorganization on "student apathy on campus." "We have advertised but no one ever comes out," he said.

The Yahoo Art Editor feels that the Administration is basically "afraid of irate parents who find copies of their kids' Yahoo."

He pointed out that last year Yahoo was rated seventh in campus humor magazines by Esquire, and said that "If you think we're bad look at some of the others."

daily from nine to four thirty will be good for any one of the regular Thursday movies. The same policy holds for the Foreign Film tickets.

In an attempt to remove some Hatch congestion and at the same time allow the catering service to continue uninterrupted, the expanded walk-in coffee service is being moved to permanent headquarters in the Commonwealth and Music Rooms.

A new kitchen, which will not disrupt the music listening booths, will be built within the next month between the two sets of booths. Food prepared here will be sold in the Commonwealth Room which will be redecorated with white floor and walls and black furnishings.

These changes in the Union are typical of the growth at UMass to meet enlarged student numbers.

of art exhibits outside the Ballroom.

NEW TABLES outside the back of the Hatch are the first step in a sidewalk cafe idea which will be finished next spring.

A hedge will be planted along the edge of the concrete floor next week and the finishing touches will eventually include redwood covered posts, hanging lights and a large awning.

The IFC guides, representing all but three of the fraternities, took up service in the lobby earlier this week with 19 juniors answering all varieties of where, when and who questions.

The new ticket office, like the turntable signboard, is an attempt to eliminate confusion.

With hopes of selling all RSO tickets at one location, the office is now taking care of Concert Association and movie tickets.

USNSA CONGRESS ADOPTS MANY CONTROVERSIAL RESOLVES

MADISON, WIS. (CPS)—After a two-week merry-go-round of seminars, speakers, and legislative plenaries, 1,000 representatives to the 18th annual Congress of the United States National Student Association returned to their campuses, leaving the association with some of the most far-reaching resolutions and legislation in its history. Highlights from the Congress, held in Madison, Aug. 22 - Sept. 2, include:

- Endorsement of the student protests at Berkeley and a broader mandate to NSA national officers to become more active in supporting future campus protests.
- A call for ending all U.S. "offensive" military action in Vietnam as the first step towards a general cease-fire and negotiations, but support for U.S. "presence" in that country.
- Opposition to tax credits for families with children in college.
- Unconditional condemnation of U.S. intervention in the Dominican Republic.
- A call for the United States to sponsor admission of Red China to the United Nations.
- Support for the concept of free public higher education.
- Endorsement of rent strikes, school boycotts, and sit-ins to oppose slum conditions in the North.

The Congress sat in judgment of the Berkeley rebels and overwhelmingly voted for acquittal, declaring that "the decision by students to resort to non-violent protest against unjust administrative policy was a legitimate and responsible course of action to take." The resolution, passed after three hours of intense debate, also directed NSA to coordinate a fund-raising campaign to help cover the legal expenses of demonstrators arrested in the Sproul Hall sit-ins and to donate a "symbolic" $100 to the Free Speech Union Defense Fund.

IN A SEPARATE resolution the Congress gave NSA's national office a clear mandate to play a more active role in future campus protests than it did at Berkeley. After urging student participation in university and college policy-making processes, the resolution declared, "When all rational and reasonable attempts have been made to secure a forum for student discontent, and have failed, NSA recognizes the need for students to use non-violent, extraordinary measures to secure the minimal standards of student involvement in the college community."

The resolution further stated that when such situations arise, NSA may serve as a "mediator" in campus disputes.

THE RESOLUTION AROSE out of criticism from the Liberal Caucus at the Congress that NSA played no significant role at Berkeley or at other campuses where problems developed last year. Ed Schwartz of Oberlin College, chairman of the Liberal Caucus, charged that NSA "spent another year rendering itself irrelevant to the country, to the student community, and to its own ideals."

Schwartz, one of the major figures at the Congress, drew a five-minute standing ovation for his speech on the Berkeley resolution which said in part:

"This association always has been the unheeded prophet of higher education. For a decade, we have warned that a student cannot be expected to think if he cannot inquire, and that he cannot be expected to decide if he cannot act. We have warned that a university which treats its students as something less than people will discover that its students will treat the institution as something less than a university."

"We're tired of hearing the drone of college presidents and regents who look upon students as some sort of marionette who can be dangled through an education. We're fed up with being put off year after year, of getting promises every spring and retractions every fall. We're not idiots. We know when we've been had."

THE VIETNAM resolution took five hours of debate, but most of the battling was done in endless hours of committee drafting sessions. Even after the long debate, the resolution which reached the floor remained basically unchanged.

As finally passed, it criticized United States policy for placing "excessive attention on the military aspects of the present conflict" and for failing to come to terms with its underlying social, political, and economic aspects.

The resolution further declared, however, that "NSA believes that the United States' presence in South Vietnam is one of the elements necessary until guarantees can be found to assure self-determination for the South Vietnamese people." The major fight of the floor debate came over the liberals' attempt to remove this passage. It failed.

THE RESOLUTION CALLED for an end to all U.S. "offensive" military action, including bombing, as a first step towards a cease-fire and negotiations. It called for recognition of the National Liberation Front for negotiation purposes.

An attempt within the Liberal Caucus to write a resolution calling for immediate United States withdrawal failed. This issue was never discussed on the floor or in committee.

Both liberals and conservative accepted the resolution. Danny Boggs of Harvard College, chairman of the Conservative Caucus, conceded, "It was better than I would have expected, given the tenor of the Congress."

THE STRONG RESOLUTION on the Dominican Republic passed without serious opposition. After condemning U.S. intervention, the resolution went on to add: "NSA further declares that the United States government must recognize that profound social changes are necessary in Latin America and that popular movements of social change and revolution will emerge. The United States government must understand and cooperate with the legitimate aspirations of such popular movements if it is to have a constructive role in the far-reaching social changes which must occur."

For the first time, the association went on record supporting Communist China's admission to the United Nations. The resolution called upon the United States to propose such admission. The resolution drew broad sponsorship from delegates

Obituary

A former UMass student, Sgt. Stanley P. Kierzyk, Special Forces Detachment, was killed at Duc Xo, Viet Nam. He was a Mechanical Engineering Major and would have graduated in the class of '65. He served as a demolition expert for the army, and was from Holyoke, Mass.

Blasko Pleads For Rules Adherence

by Alan Grigsby,
Police Reporter

In a recent interview Chief Red Blasko stated some of his views concerning the campus parking and traffic situation.

Blasko said he would like to have all those who have not registered cars to pick a parking lot and remain there until they register. Moving around worsens the parking situation, he said.

There are, said Blasko, plenty of parking areas on campus if everyone parks in their assigned spots; some like lots 'S' and 'N' have yet to be filled.

Students are prohibited, he said, from parking on campus in any other lot than their own between 7 a.m. and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and 7 a.m. to 12 noon Saturdays.

STAFF MEMBERS and their families must park in their assigned lots or they will be towed, reminded Blasko.

"I've towed many prominent people and will show no partiality," he continued.

"The best way," he said, "for a person to avoid trouble is to read the signs and know the automobile regulation handbook."

"Eventually," he said, "Ellis Drive will be cut off as will Rte. 116 and a bypass will be built around the University, ending on-campus traffic. I'd like to see Ellis drive cut off up to Lincoln Street and Stockbridge right now," he continued.

The new dormitory complexes, Blasko added, also present parking problems. "Wait until the high-rise dorms are finished. on any given day," said Blasko, "we will never be able to park them."

"BOTH THE ORCHARD Complex and the new Southwest Complex," said Red, "have limited accessibility to cars and equipment."

The courtyards and the stairs leading to them are difficult for fire, police and maintenance crews to work around, he said.

"We have growing pains, I know, but we need more room," he concluded.

176 Million Added to NDEA Loan Fund

President Johnson recently approved allocations of more than $176 million in Federal loans to help college students who may need financial aid during the 1965-66 academic year.

The White House said the allocation, approved for 1,509 colleges and universities, was being made available under the National Defense Education Act and will aid an estimated total of 317,000 students.

The education act makes Federal money available to colleges and universities for borrowing by needy students, especially those in superior academic standing.

The largest single loan, $12,886,174, went to the State of New York, followed by California with $10,148,948 and Pennsylvania with $8,554,167.

Graduate and professional students may borrow as much as $2,500 a year and undergraduates can be spread over 11 years at up to $1,000 a year. Repayment only 3 per cent interest.

Congress has appropriated $179.3 million to finance the program during fiscal year 1966.

Pre-Laws

File Now

Applications are now available in the office of the University Pre-Law advisor for the "law board" exams to be administered on November 13.

The office of Kenneth J. Suid, appointed Pre-Law advisor last spring by President Lederle, is located on the third floor of South College. Students should enter the door on the left side of the front of South College to get to Suid's office.

Suid emphasized the importance of early filing of applications, because, he said, "Frequently clerical delays hinder the rapid return of admission tickets and consequently students have missed exams."

Also, those students who have not registered with Suid as Pre-Law students, should do so as soon as possible.

gates who declared that Communist China will be admitted over U.S. objections, and that the U.S. should take the initiative in supporting admission.

BEYOND RESOLUTIONS, criticism of NSA's international commission sparked a public debate on the subject. Critics, including both candidates for international affairs vice-president for the coming year, attacked alleged secrecy within which the commission operates, calling it a "closed corporation" and a "junior State Department." They cited NSA's participation in a Cairo seminar on the Palestinian refugee question where the delegation made an allegedly pro-Arab speech but refused to disclose its contents and a telegram concerning the Dominican Republic which was sent out internationally but not revealed to member student governments.

The IC debate finally focused on an attempt to have two members of NSA's delegation to the International Student Conference (ISC) elected directly by the Congress, instead of appointed by the officers as it has been done.

A third national office, student government vice-president, was abolished by the Congress this year. In the past the SGVP served as a travelling representative of NSA to member campuses, but with the development of specific area desks, such as community involvement and educational affairs, the SGVP was seen as an unnecessary expense. The desk system, according to Sherburne, will expand during the coming year, and will provide in-depth programming and resource aid to member campuses.

Booze, Sex and Frosh Girls

Dear Daughter:

Beneath that beanie, your mother and I have good reason to assume, there functions a brain. May I gently but firmly remind you that it is the brain that we sent out there for treatment, and you were just lucky that Nature requires your body to go along.

The departure of a fledgling from the fold is supposed to be a time when fatherly wisdom is poured forth profusely to guide you over, under, around, but not through, the pitfalls that allegedly lie in your path. Ever since you were accepted last year, I have been trying to find some of this wisdom to impart, but everything that came to mind sounded like either the old malarkey or an invitation to temptation that might otherwise not occur to you.

SO THERE YOU ARE, out on that terrible campus, surrounded by hairy beatniks, girls who smoke before breakfast, and professors who have never been to Vietnam. What can I say to you "Watch out! There's a lecher right behind you!"

Actually, the dangers out there are no more severe than they were here—they're just a little closer. But they have far more often been survived than succumbed to.

May I bluntly take up the subject of booze: You'll note that I didn't say "cocktails" or "drinking," because those are just euphemisms for what we're concerned about.

IT HAPPENS TO BE A FACT of college life that some students study booze as intensely as they study English I or Introduction to Reflective Thinking. I expect you'll be no exception, so I'd like to offer pointers that became available to me through sugar-cane whiskey in Manila:

Raw liquor tastes terrible, but you can get used to it in three snorts. Three snorts, to a beginner, is absolute disaster. You may challenge my implication that it will cause the loss of your control of your behavior, so I'll leave that as none of my business. What I can positively guarantee, however, is that such an experience will make you violently and repulsively sick, and that it will take months for you to recover from your own humiliation. A safe policy to follow and one that will give you class—insist on a glass, some ice, and a mix. Nobody yet has learned to drink from a bottle with dignity.

Sex is also a very big deal on campus. You were brought up in a world which insisted on denying to you that men and women like to get together privately, married or not. Now you have been sprung loose for the purpose of learning what life is really like, and sex is part of it.

This tends to put sex somewhat out of its actual focus, causing some students to give it more study time than anything on the curriculum. Since our purpose is more to discover the doings of good and bad than of right and wrong, I have no admonitions to offer, with one possible exception: beware of the guy who offers his slavish devotion to your every whim—he may be far more concerned with his mother than with you.

YOU HAVEN'T HAD MUCH TIME to tinker with atheism, political thrust, or the declaration of principle. These are extremely popular campus activities and are at least as engaging as a pregame pep rally. But before you demonstrate at the post office, talk to at least one person who agrees with our foreign policy.

Please also see what you personally can do about an act of discrimination. As for religion, its most complicated aspect is that nobody can really help you with it, so let me know when you get over your spat with God.

Finally, an expression of confidence: you will learn tact, if through no better means than necessity of writing home for money. You will acquire poise, if by no more elevated situation than resisting a pantie raid. You will expand your mind, if through no nobler motive than studying hard enough to remain a part of this new life.

Thus this first letter becomes not such a big deal after all. It merely a note from one adult to another, in an effort to overcome some of the losses from separation.

Good luck, Adult. And please forgive me if I suddenly become very, very childish.

New Frost Library Opened At Amherst

What's it like to move a 360,000-volume library? Having completed the job of moving the Amherst College collection from Converse Library, its home for the past 48 years to the new Robert Frost Library, Charles T. Laughter, associate librarian of Amherst says, "It wasn't as bad as I had expected, but it's not the kind of thing I'd like to do every year."

ONE OF THE FIRST PROBLEMS to be faced was where collections of the various academic departments.

The working out of this theory in the practice of the moving process was not easy. First, the several hundred thousand books had to be removed from shelves and packed in boxes which were color coded for their location in the new building. Once delivered to the new Frost Library building, the boxes were distributed to the various levels according to the colored markings on each. The entire job was completed by to put the books. Although the Frost Library contains almost twice the space of Converse, a plan had to be devised whereby those volumes which were most often in use could be retrieved easily from the six levels of storage stacks. The solution was to place volumes in the social sciences, literature and languages on the upper three levels of the new building, where the stacks are interspersed with study areas for students and faculty. The three levels below the main floor were allocated to volumes which contain rarely used information or information readily available in the library sixteen men in nineteen days—a rate of 1,185 books per man per day.

THE $3.5 MILLION Robert Frost Library was opened officially on Sept. 14, one day before Amherst classes began. However, the old library had maintained its regular operations throughout the moving process for the students and faculty who were working on various projects at the College during the summer months.

Mrs. Weir, a librarian in the new Frost Library, says, "We all enjoy it tremendously, particularly the students. But it's so big we sometimes get lost."

Antioch Revises Code

Background to Antioch College's revised civil liberties reveals that drafting of the new code began originally in order to unify and clarify the old one, which was made cumbersome by frequent revisions since adoption in 1959.

First proposals raised some sticky issues and met serious objections from college officials.

Sore points included the manner of regulating the required consultations prior to student social action, procedures to be used in co-operating with outside investigators, and the college's stance toward civil disobedience.

The administration objected that the code's detailed restrictions on administrators implied a need to safeguard students from repressive actions, and suggested the code also be seen as a device to protect the institution.

Revisions would set college policy on academic freedom, independent group procedures, and standards of social action.

On the Home Front

During the past few months, a battle has been raging. It has not been so dramatic as the war in Vietnam; or, has it maintained the scope of the fighting in India and Pakistan.

In fact, this battle has been going on right here at home, and practically no one has paid any attention to it. "At home", means right here in Massachusetts.

In our state capital, our solons have been fighting over the need for the raising of new revenue. It should be apparent to us all by this time that the revenue is needed, and that the only way to raise funds, which are necessary to finance the programs we would all like to see, is to tax the people.

To expect an increase in social goods without paying for it, is as foolish as to expect the local butcher to give away his best steak for the price of hamburger. It cannot be done.

We should all realize that the need for increased revenue is a present and pressing problem. We should not any longer be considering whether or not a new tax is needed, but we should be wondering in which form it should appear.

One form which has been proposed is the sales tax. This is designed to take small bites throughout the year instead of the big bite of an increased income tax. Although psychologically it may appear to be easier on the pocket book, it is actually the same amount of money spread throughout the year.

Basically, it amounts to paying the same tax in an inconvenient way.

The citizens of this state should realize that the only solution which can ultimately be reached is to simply raise the income tax rate to the necessary level. We may not want to pay more taxes, but we all want good education facilities. We all want good sanitary facilities.

We all want a lot of things which only the state can give us, and it is about time for us to acknowledge that just as with private business, you only get what you pay for.

Editorial Chairman
Joel Hartstone,

Corns, Callouses and Bunions

There's a lot that can be said about walking long distances between classes. For one, its tiring. The books begin to feel like two ton towing trucks, the hands become numb, and even switching the heavy load from one arm to the other does not accomplish much. The back becomes bent, the legs begin to collapse, and the entire physiological system of the body is upset.

But even more shocking is what happens to the nervous system and psychology of the student. The nerves of the spinal cord, ruined by the above-mentioned bending of the back, do not properly receive messages from the brain. The result is that the person involved loses all control over his muscular coordination and becomes spastic. The loss of self-control creates a feeling of embarrassment, which in turn brings about a shyness and rejection in the student that prevents him from raising his hand in class, which in turn makes the professor feel that said student is lazy and did not study the lesson, when actually said student is simply tired from having walked two miles from Boyden to the Education building.

Of course, it is much easier to complain about a problem than to do something about it. Therefore, a few suggestions are in hand.

One, all girls residing in the Southwest Complex and having 8:00 a.m. gym classes at WoPe should be provided with a camel and a box lunch consisting of bananas and raisins.

A ski-tow should be built up Van Meter Hill.

A ski-tow should be built up every other hill.

If the cost of building ski-tows is too expensive, then all hills should be dynamited. Of course, this would require the development of a new scientific system whereby the hills could be blown up while the dorms and buildings on top of them would be preserved.

All those residing in the Orchard Complex and having all their classes in the Orchard Complex should be forced to attend at least half their classes in Bartlett so that they will appreciate what the rest of the campus has to go through.

Joseph Zalkind,
Editorial Associate Chairman

Reply to the Orchard

To Misses Abeles, Foley and Helman:

In a growing University, one should expect to be inconvenienced at one time or another. We are enrolled at a time when growth is at a maximum, and convenience is at a minimum. Your experience with the Orchard Hill Dorms last semester was unfortunate, yet, does this give you the right to begrudge those students in the Southwest Complex the comforts that they now enjoy. Their comfort, I've been told, will be interrupted every morning at about eight o'clock for the next nine or ten months, while preparations are made to complete the High Rise Dormitories.

Still, carpeting on the floors, and trees outside the windows have no real bearing on the problem, as you ladies have stated it. The Southwest Complex residents must eat somewhere. Obviously, you would have them walk to the North Commons, a distance considerably farther than you yourselves must walk in order to eat. You are displaying a rather selfish, unrealistic view toward the entire problem. I'm almost positive that you three ladies, if you're clever, will be able to eat together. If you can't, you can walk down there together, and before departing for your several food lines, say a tearful good-bye until you may once more meet, and return to your community living experiment.

John D. Lawrence '66

Orchard Hill students say that if they can't eat together at their commons, they'll eat together at their dorms.

Sour Grapes

To the Editor:

It is unfortunate that the young ladies from the Orchard Complex were misinformed about which dining commons they would eat in. It is also unfortunate that they feel that others should continue to suffer just because they suffered in the past.

It is unfortunate there are overcrowded conditions all over, but we feel it's best that the residence calls take turns. The focal point of the Orchard Complex should not be where they eat but rather where they live.

If the Complex itself can not be its own focal point then it is a failure in that respect. The North Commons is as close to the Complex as the South and supposedly the dining facilities and food are equal.

However the letter does bring up some pertinent points as to why a residence hall must eat together irrespective of which Commons would be best for an individual student. Or whether the University should force its students to subscribe for meals at the Commons.

Attention Frosh!

To the Editor:

The beanie is considered an integral part of every entering freshman class. Freshmen are asked in the finest tradition of the University both to wear it and to be proud of it, and of what it stands for.

It is not a sign of subservience but rather a symbol of your prestige and of your standing as bearers of UMass spirit.

Your beanies are expected to be worn faithfully, as they have been by previous freshmen classes, until the first touchdown of the first home football game is scored, UMass vs AIC. At this time the beanies are thrown into the air as the UMass tradition wells within you.

This tradition at the University is long and enduring. An understanding of this tradition will make it dearer to you in your upperclassman years.

Remember! a highly spirited freshman class is invaluable to the stature of the University.

Editor's Note: The author of this column Mr. Georgios Pan Piperopoulos, is a graduate exchange student from Greece. He has served since 1960 as the U. S. correspondent for the Drasis Press Organization in Greece, and last year was an editor with the Atlantic Greek Daily in New York. He has been invited by the Editorial Chairman of the Collegian to write a series of guest editorials. This is the first installment of his first article.

By Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

A cloud passed over his eyes, a dark silhouette that bore the marks of wonder and anger as he pleaded determined: "Tell me, please, why is it that foreign students in America almost as a rule, always criticize us so openly, so pitilessly?" ... And then there was the girl who asked me the same question, and eventually more students, more grown-ups that kept hammering the same tune in my ears: "Why?"

It's over five years now, since the day that I set foot on this land. A long time in which as an individual I grew up both academically and physically, and through my personal efforts came to know much about the Americans, their customs, their likes and dislikes. Yet, I still remain a Greek, and if I know my Sociology well, I shall remain so even if I marry here and make America my home forever.

During these years I have come to know a multitude of people, both Americans and foreigners, adults and young, scientists and students. And from my personal experiences, shallow or intimate, I shall attempt (in an utterly unorthodox social-scientific manner) to give an answer to the question with which I opened this column.

It would probably be a more convincing answer were it based on an attitude poll and substantiated by statistical tables. And yet I feel that experience molded with the power of intuition and refined by the appropriate faculties of the mind can provide a simple answer to a so simple and justified question: "Why so much criticism?"

Under the blanket statement "Foreign Students in the U.S." one includes tens of thousands of individuals representing almost all the countries of the Free World, and all the races of our Earth. Even putting aside the major differentiating characteristics of National origin, religion or color, one is still left with individuals who though they share the above three qualities in common, yet they differ in terms of rural or urban background, socio-economic status and personality.

But as it happens with most minority groups, the Foreign students on any American or European campus, cluster together, create their own club, and only timidly in a progressing temporal context do they attempt to proceed with the most necessary—in my opinion—human needs, namely interpersonal relations, recognition of individual worth and prestige.

This is the major area of disappointment, frustration and the false rationalization of the Aesopian "sour grape" philosophy.

Students take advantage of the casual touch manifested in the new Southwest Complex dorms. Note the new full-corner glass in the lounge window, typical of the modernistic design of the whole complex.

Residential: Part Two

The distinction of being the newest dorms on the UMass campus became only a memory last week for the four residence halls perched atop Orchard Hill as 840 students moved into the latest addition to the University — the Southwest Complex.

DR. CLARENCE SHUTE

The new complex turned into a residence college after the success of Orchard Hill, will be patterned after the first Residence College at UM. The program of both areas will be similar. But, Dr. Clarence Shute, Master of the Residence College and head of Philosophy Dept., points out "It should not be presupposed that our program will be a copy of Orchard Hill."

Since Dr. Shute would like the faculty to have a good idea of what will be taking place at South West before committing themselves, a complete group of faculty fellows has not yet been selected for the Residence College. At the present time no suites are available for resident faculty. However, Dr. Shute hopes that in the future each dorm will have a resident faculty member.

As far as future planning for the new Residence College Dr. Shute hopes that it will be done through the cooperation of students and the faculty. "We're not going to rush the program but rather take the time necessary to develop South West," said Dr. Shute.

While Orchard Hill leaders on all levels have been helping with the planning of the South West Complex, they have also been active in projecting plans for this year as well as evaluating last year's activity.

Dr. Leland Varley, Master of the Orchard Hill Residence College feels that "on the whole everything went well last year."

"From the great deal of valued information that has come in we have the knowledge that Orchard Hill was a success," Dr. Varley said. He pointed to the many opinions of students and faculty and to the fact that approximately 60 per cent of the 1250 residents living in the Orchard this year are students who lived in the Orchard last year.

The series of enrichment and cultural programs that began last year and favorably welcomed by faculty and students will continue. Classes in the Orchard dorms, which have proved to be beneficial to grades through the available relaxed atmosphere, will be increased. But not to the point where they will intrude on the privacy of the residents. Dr. Varley feels that an Orchard Hill resident should have 2-3 classes in the dorms on campus.

A substantial second year will allow for a few more to the Orchard dorms. These include furniture links to provide a place for study during study hours as more kitchen equipment

Most of the problems last year have been solved. The landscaping is complete and the rugs have been laid in each corridor. Although the carpeting will solve some of the problems, soundproofing will be installed if needed. To make changes as they arise, Dr. Varley points

Since a dining hall for the Southwest Complex is still under construction, both the North Commons and the South Commons are serving at their maximum capacity.

The Orchard Hill residence has been transferred to the Commons so that they may

New 22 story dorms, which will fill out the first stage of Southwest building, near completion. They are scheduled for September while future planning indicates the construction of seven more low-rise dorms, to be known as the "Sunset Strip."

As resident colleges, both the South West and Orchard Complexes share the same goals and aspirations. In the future the UM campus will be the site of more such areas. In an attempt to decentralize a growing university and provide student-faculty identification some co-ordination between the Orchard and Southwest might seem beneficial but, as pointed out by Dr. Shute, "too much co-ordination would progressively negate the purpose by centralizing, rather than de-centralizing." Dr. Shute also feels that there should be some integration between the University and the residence colleges but they could be more autonomous than they are at present.

Opening convocations for the two residence halls were held on Thursday evening in Bartlett and Mahar Auditoriums. Both Dr. Shute and Dr. Varley are anticipating a rewarding year in their respective resident colleges.

'66 completion,

T1, the high-rise nearest completion, was topped off on Thursday, Aug. 26, with a mildly Bacchanalian ceremony. All 22 stories are right on schedule according to contractor Daniel O'Connell.

U.S. STUDENT PRESS ASSOCIATION ASSERTS RIGHT TO SEE CUBA

MADISON, WIS. (CPS) — A resolution asserting the right of student journalists to travel to Cuba as their professional colleagues have done highlighted the work of the annual meeting of the U.S. Student Press Association at the University of Wisconsin in August.

More than 100 representatives of some 55 campus newspapers from all parts of the country attended USSPA's Fourth Annual Congress of the Student Press. Observers from Germany, England, Australia, Japan, and India were also present.

ONE MAJOR area of concern was technical assistance to student newspapers. The Congress authorized the establishment of a critical evaluation service next year for USSPA members. Each member paper will be entitled to submit sample issues to professional and experienced student journalists for specific comments. The service will be free of charge.

The association approved a system of sub-regional "administrative districts" each headed by a member editor who will coordinate a program of recruiting, communication, and technical assistance. In some cases, the district programs will also include news gathering for Collegiate Press Service, which is published by USSPA.

THE ASSOCIATION'S Club resolution, adopted unanimously after a brief floor debate and many hours of informal discussion and debate, was based on the principle that "no distinction can be drawn between the commercial and student press in regard to access to information, as both have the responsibility of informing a community of citizens. Since the commercial press is specifically exempted from the State Department ban on travel to Cuba, the student press should be exempted as well."

The resolution mandated the USSPA national office to "do all in its power to facilitate the legal travel" to Cuba of "responsible and representative groups of American student journalists."

The national office was further directed to aid in obtaining financial support for such trips "from sources other than the government of Cuba or its agencies or other partisan groups."

Mt. Holyoke Enrollment Largest Ever

The enrollment at Mt. Holyoke College this fall will be the largest in the school's 129 year history. A total of 487 girls will begin their studies this month to bring the enrollment at the institution to 1684. Members of the freshman class are from 41 states and nine different countries including Colombia, Thailand and Liberia.

In the coming college year, the third under the new four course curriculum, the academic offerings available for the first time include a number of seminars and other advanced classes for which well prepared undergraduates are now able to qualify.

The building program in progress on the campus includes a newly completed $1.4 million language dormitory as well as a psychology and education building and theatre, both due to be completed in the spring of 1966.

UMass Prof In Wash.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Rep. Silvio O. Conte (R-Mass.) and Prof. Sydney Maunders of the University of Massachusetts were invited by President Johnson to witness the signing into law of the State Technical Services Act in ceremonies yesterday morning at the White House.

The act was largely the brainchild of Prof. Maunders, a retired electronics engineer and visiting lecturer at the university.

Prof. Maunders was an active supporter of the bill and had appeared in Washington at his own expense to testify when the bill was before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. Amherst is in the First Congressional District represented by Cong. Conte.

Cong. Conte was a key advocate of the legislation during consideration by the Congress. He also testified before the House committee and spoke on behalf of the bill on the floor of the House. A member of the House Select Committee on Small Business, Mr. Conte stressed the value of the plan for small merchants and businessmen throughout the country.

The act will set up state and regional centers for storage and retrieval of technical data and research findings with potential benefit for businesses, industries and educational institutions.

Other outspoken backers of the plan from the University of Massachusetts included the president, Dr. John Lederle, and Prof. E. E. Lindsey, a dean of engineering in the engineering department.

Principal Canned

The New Haven Board of Education removed the principal of Hillhouse High School on the grounds that he signed and forwarded college transcripts that gave students higher grades than they had earned.

The action was the result of a 10 day public hearing held last month. The board's investigation turned up some 1,000 grade misrepresentations involving 459 pupils between 1960-1965.

Birth Control Attempt Termed "Abortive"

MADISON, WIS. (CPS) — "The whole world is not a small Catholic girls' school," said the delegate from one of NSA's small Catholic girls' schools, setting the tone for one of the liveliest exchanges of the NSA Congress.

The debate was a resolution calling for university health centers to provide birth control information and devices to students who requested either. Although the resolution exempted campuses "where institutional religious teachings are in conflict with the use of birth control devices," the major opposition to the resolution came from Catholic school delegations.

The spirit of the debate, however, was set by the speech contrasting the world and a small Catholic girls' school. The major amendment was the deletion of the declaration in favor of birth control "devices" from the resolution.

"To delete 'devices' would emasculate the entire resolution," cried one outraged delegate. But the amendment passed.

"It was an abortive attempt in the first place," muttered a non-Catholic observer in the grandstands.

Dope Case Continued

The case of a 21 year old Amherst college senior, charged with illegal possession of marijuana, was continued to September 28 in Northampton district Court Tuesday. Dean Edward Hethington of 33 Bridge St., Amherst stood mute to the charge, an innocent plea was entered on his behalf, and he was released on $1,000 bail.

The complaint was brought by Amherst and State Police, who said they found marijuana in Hethington's apartment after a July 31 investigation of the stories of two other youths.

Boycott Threatens To Counter Red Nations

WASHINGTON, DC (CPS) — The conservative youth organization whose picket lines and boycott threats helped force a halt to U.S. negotiations with Rumania over sale of a rubber plant has announced new plans for a full-scale drive against trade with Communist nations. Young Americans for Freedom (YAF) announced at its fifth annual convention that it would form a national advisory committee to consider "possible further action against American business firms which might be engaged in negotiating trade deals with Communist nations."

Outgoing YAF national chairman, Robert E. Bauman, said the organization had already singled out four U. S. firms which were considering Eastern Bloc trade. All four have been notified of YAF's opposition to such plans, he said.

If negotiations with the companies fail, Bauman said, the 25,000-member organization was prepared to mount picket lines and initiate a boycott.

"If this is the only tactic that the Commerce Department understands—the only way American businessmen can be brought to their senses, then we will employ it," said Bauman.

YAF picket lines in Philadelphia, Providence, Brooklyn, and other cities last spring helped force the Commerce Department and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. to abandon plans for construction of a synthetic rubber plant in Rumania.

That action was widely regarded as the greatest success by YAF since it was founded in 1960 at the Sharon, Conn. estate of William F. Buckley, editor of the National Review.

SEN. J. WILLIAM FULBRIGHT, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, charged in July that the demise of Firestone negotiations was in part, the result of a "nuisance boycott campaign by an extremist political organization"—YAF.

Elected national chairman at the convention was Tom Huston, a University of Indiana law student, who will head 500 chapters, many on college campuses.

YAF leaders disclosed that the organization operates on a monthly budget of about $25,000, $350,000 in annual income, and about 60 percent, or $200,000, contributions, with the remainder coming from annual membership fees.

ALSO ANNOUNCED during the convention was the formation of YAF-PAC, the YAF Political Action Committee. According to Wainwright Dawson, its director, the new organization will "put young conservatives to work in congressional districts throughout the country in 1966."

Its initial effort will be known as "Mission 66" and will concentrate exclusively on next year's congressional elections. Senatorial and gubernatorial elections in 1966 will not be the organization's concern, Dawson said.

The almost 1000 delegates to the convention also approved resolutions calling for continuation and escalation of the war in Vietnam, an end to federal urban renewal programs, and exclusion of college fraternities and sororities from anti-discrimination statutes.

Amherst Frosh Told To Play Roles

Freshmen entering Amherst College were told this week that they will have failed "if after four years here you think of education as belonging to the classroom and work, and play and delight as belonging somewhere else."

The speaker was Prof. John William Ward of the American History Department whose talk to the class was part of a three-day orientation program. "Here in the educational institution in which you now find yourself," he said, "society has provided a period in which you can, without having to pay the penalties, try on various roles, entertain various perspectives, get out of yourselves, so to speak, and play with different identities and different ways of looking at reality."

"The fact that education must allow for this kind of play and uncommitted identification makes it suspect to those outside in what we like to call the 'real' world where life is serious and one is supposed always to mean business. You can try things on for size without any commitment to buy. You can, through conversation, through reading, through imaginative identification with the experience of others, widen the horizons of your own experience."

"You are here to prepare yourself to participate in that world."

yet it is a world which none of the adults, that is, none of the faculty who presume to prepare you, know very much to do with. Your education, in other words, must be a preparation for an unknown future. You will here meet many students, you will even meet, I presume to say, many faculty who think they know all the answers but believe me, there are no answers. Or, there is only one. There is only the preparation of minds and wills able to live in and struggle with a world of flux and accept the fact that there are no simple and ready answers to what it means to be a human being in a human society."

Professor Ward's talk to the class dealt primarily with three works of literature which had been suggested for summer reading. Following the talk members of the class discussed the reading in seminars directed by upperclassmen.

During the three-day orientation period, the freshmen also heard talks by members of the administration, were guests at a reception given by President and Mrs. Calvin H. Plimpton, listened to a talk on the history of the College, attended a barbecue for freshmen and faculty members and took placement examinations in various subjects. Classes were scheduled to begin September 15.

Hollingsworth Art Shown In Bartlett Hall

The works of Keith W. Hollingsworth, including pots, sculpture and other ceramic material objects and images, went on exhibition Sunday in Bartlett Hall.

Hollingsworth, who has exhibited his work in both local and national shows, recently joined the UMass faculty, where he will teach ceramics and design.

Prior to coming to UMass, he taught ceramics and sculpture at Ohio University in Athens, Ohio. A native of Providence, R. I., he received a bachelor of fine arts degree at the Rhode Island School of Design in 1959; and a master of fine arts degree at Mills College in 1964.

His ceramic and sculptured works will be on exhibit in Bartlett Hall until Oct. 1.

Student Enlightenment

The need for ample general lighting in a room used by students for homework will become even greater this fall with the introduction of new high illumination study lamps.

Although the need for balanced lighting from wall or ceiling fixtures in addition to the local lighting at the study desk has always existed, it becomes even more critical with use of new Better Light Better Sight Bureau Study Lamps.

According to the American Home Lighting Institute, a new kind of portable lamp for home study will be marketed in dozens of communities this fall. Identified by a blue BLBS Study Lamp tag, these new lamp designs will provide two to three times more light than former study lamps.

"Lighting engineers have established specific ratios for differences in brightness between different parts of a room," said the Institute. "Since the new lamps provide higher levels of light at the study area, it will require increased footcandles from other fixtures in the room."

Doing homework in a room where there are sharp differences in the light levels can lead to eye fatigue, eyestrain and eventual loss of attention and concentration.

Pine Tree Staters Hungry For Yankee Conference Upset

by Mike Gould

Excitement and footballs will fill the air Saturday when the big, beastly, brawn of UMass meets the light, lethal, lightning of UMaine at Orono.

Coaches Hal Westerman of Maine and Vic Fusia of Mass. have both built sound models for this year's edition of their respective gridiron products, but with contrasting blueprints.

The strength of Westerman's Maine team lies in its exceptional speed, not only in the backfield, but also in the line. In order to develop its good overall mobility, however, Maine has had to make the inevitable sacrifice of size. Only one offensive starter surpasses the 200 lb. mark for the Bears, as they accentuate the speed factor.

MAINE'S OFFENSE revolves around the running and passing wizardry of senior quarterback Dick DeVarney. A leprechaun among giants (5'8", 160 lbs.), DeVarney is especially adept at avoiding the pursuits of onrushing linemen and turning broken plays into big gainers. His magic has brought Maine to the brink of great upsets against UMass for the past two years, and Dick would love to make good with his last shot at the Redmen.

DeVarney has a fine supporting cast, featuring his swift backfield mates — Paul Keany, Frank Harney, and fullback Charley Bellsle. Standout Maine linemen are center and captain Walt Hirst, tackle Vern Walker, and crack linebacker John Huard.

A VICTORY over UMass would be a taste of honey for the Bears and might make them just greedy enough to steal the Beanpot, presently situated in Amherst.

Fusia and company have other ideas. The Redmen realize the importance of the Maine game as a probable determinant of the YanCon champion and are probably at this time waiting in ambush in the vicinity of Alumni Field, Orono.

UMass is healthy and strong for its opener, with Bob Ellis and Milt Morin fully recovered from their preseason injuries. The backfield and line will outweigh their opposite numbers by about 15 lbs. per man.

Soph. Greg Landry, in his first varsity game at quarterback, will be throwing chiefly to Morin and Bob Meers, with starting backs Dick Benoit, Ellis and Terry Swanson handling the running chores. The probable starting offensive line will consist of Dan Harrigan (c), Bob Gogick (g), Bob Santucci (g), Larry Spidel (t), Bill Connor (t), with the M&M boys at the ends.

Fusia will make numerous changes on defense, with Bernie Dallas and Dave Kelly spearheading a staunch and stingy unit.

Maine will play the giant killer bit Saturday, but it will take more than speed and a slingshot to beat the Redmen.

Sophomores Seen Key To Redmen Hopes

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

The University of Massachusetts football team opens the defense of its Yankee Conference championship tomorrow when the Redmen travel to Orono, Me., to meet the Black Bears from UMaine.

UMass will be without last year's New England Player of the Year, Jerry Wheelchel, now quarterback with the Holyoke Bombers. However, Head Coach Vic Fusia believes he has found the answer to Wheelchel in a 6'4", 200-pounder from Nashua, N.H., Greg Landry. In last week's scrimmage against Harvard, Landry completed 12 of 18 passes for 164 yards and ran 13 yards for a touchdown. Only a sophomore, Landry will be getting the starting call tomorrow.

With Little All-America Milt Morin at tight end and All-New England Bob Meers at split end, Fusia has two of the best in the country. Moris has been nursing torn shoulder ligaments, but should be ready for Maine.

The starting offensive tackles will probably be Jim Mitchell and Bill Connors. Once again, Fusia is lacking depth at this position and must find some talent in his sophs.

Guard is a strong position for the Redmen, led by Juniors Bob Defensive Middle linebacker and Tri-Captain Bernie Dallas.

Gogick and Bob Santucci. Larry Spidel, who has been shifting between guard and tackle, will be available if needed.

Bernie Dallas, completely recovered from last year's knee operation, might be forced to play offensive center as well as middle linebacker on defense. Fusia is hoping for the recovery of Don Rana (Achilles tendon) and Dan Harrigan (ankle) to relieve Dallas from his offensive duties.

The UMass backfield is one of the biggest in the East, if not the country. Halfbacks Don Durkin (215), Terry Swanson (205), Bob Ellis (215) and Leo Biron (190) give the Redmen more than adequate experience and depth. The fullbacks will be led by Dick Benoit (215), Agawam High star, and Phil Vandersee (230).

Defensive specialists this year will be Dave Kelley, Ed Toner, Dick Qualey, Ed Cody, Dave Giarla and, hopefully, Dallas.

The placekicking chores will be handled by Vandersca, Morin or Landry. Swanson will be doing the punting.

The Black Bears of Maine are led by senior quarterback Dick DeVarney. Maine is slated by every pre-season poll in the country for second in the Conference and is the only team given a chance to upset the Redmen. DeVarney has 22 lettermen behind him to attempt what could be the biggest upset in the Conference. In a low-scoring game, the Redmen from Amherst are favored by 8½ points. UMass backers are confident. The Redmen are too big, too strong and too fast for the Black Bears. Fusia will use Landry only as long as he has to and then will counter with Seniors Steve Trbovich and Dick Cain.

INTRAMURAL REPORT

by David James

Next week marks the beginning of another intramural athletic season as the dormitory, fraternity, and independent teams will commence the touch football extravaganza. The defending champions in each division are the Chadbourne Maroons, Kappa Sigma, and the Forestry Club, respectively. The Stephen Davis Award, emblematic of overall campus supremacy, was won by the Maroons last year with TEP a close second. In football, awards are given for individual accomplishments such as the leading receiver, leading scorer, leading defensive team and best offensive team.

CHET GLADCHUCK, intramural director, is still looking for football officials. Any student interested should attend a meeting at 7 p.m. on Monday, September 20 in room 255 of Boyden.

Although the deadline for entries in the touch football program has passed, there still will be a lacrosse league, a cross country meet and a singles tennis tournament this fall. Deadline for tennis entries is September 24, with play beginning October 4. Remember, the intramural program is for you.

You don't have to be a Clarence Hill in basketball or a Milt Morin in football. Everyone should be able to take a couple of hours off a week from the study routine to have some fun. Mr. Gladchuck is always willing to give advice to anyone who wants to form a team. Remember, the only real loser in intramurals is the non-participant.

At 238 pounds Ed Toner will start at defensive tackle.

UMass Fish Story

St. Francis Xavier University of Antigonish, Nova Scotia, captured the tenth annual Intercollegiate Game Fish Seminar held in Wedgeport, Nova Scotia, September 2-4.

The winners enabled Canada to retain the R.J. Schaefer International Trophy, symbolic of top points in the three day competition.

The final standings were St. Francis 981 points, Yale 514, Japan 363, Harvard 221, University of Toronto 182, University of Western Ontario 159, University of Massachusetts 130.

Maine Wins, 10-8

REDMEN STUNNED!

by Howie Davis,
Sports Editor

Size is not the sole determinant of a good football team.

The big beef from the University of Massachusetts proved just that as they were beaten by the Black Bears of Maine 10-8.

The score and statistics are not indicative of the thrashing the Redmen received. The offensive backs were not able to crack the light Maine defensive line and the UMass brawny defense was not able to contain the quick backs from the Pine Tree State.

THE BLACK BEARS were led by 5'8", 166 pound Dick DeVarney at quarterback. The senior from Laconia, N. H., completed 19 of 28 passes for 133 yards and showed expert field leadership in controlling the Maine offense. DeVarney also did the punting for the Black Bears and picked up a 36.1 average in seven kicks.

The Maine ground game netted 72 yards and was led by seniors Frand Harney and Paul Keaney. The two halfbacks, both natives of Massachusetts, average 180 pounds and consistently crashed the Redmen line at will.

The only bright spot for UMass was the performance of soph Greg Landry. The only member of the Redmen starting lineup who weighed in at less than 200 pounds, Landry completed 12 of 21 passes for 195 yards. He was hitting ends Bob Meers and Milt Morin with consistency, but the "M" twins could not hold on to some crucial passes.

THE REDMEN rushing game gained 63 yards on the afternoon to give UMass a total offense of 258 yards to Maine's 235.

The Black Bears scored first on a 32 yard field goal by Fred Lovejoy. Maine began the drive on the Redmen 45 yard line. Harney and Keaney picked up successive first downs rushing and DeVarney threw for a pair. Maine found themselves on the UMass nine but a clipping penalty forced them back to the 24. Three plays later Lovejoy sent the pigskin through the uprights. The half ended with Maine on top 3-0.

The under-sized Bears scored their touchdown with only 10 seconds gone in the final quarter. DeVarney led his team

UM Action Committee Plans Tutorial Project

The UMass Action Committee, created by members of the Orchard Hill Complex, has begun formulating plans for a tutorial project in Springfield. The committee is associated with the Springfield branch of the Northern Educational Service, founded by the national Anti-Poverty Program.

The purpose of the tutorial project is to assist students in grades 4 through 12 who desire tutorial help. Originally one center, but now expanding to six, the project needs more people. There will be 75 students to a center. Emphasis will be on a one to one relationship in many situations. As Sarah Holden, Educational Director for the Springfield area, pointed out, "Much of the value is to get the attention of one student."

Training sessions will be held.

'HAMP JUDGE WANTS UM FRATERNITY CLOSED

Two West Roxbury teen-agers who came to UMass to visit were interred in Hampshire County Jail Saturday night by Dist. Judge Luke F. Ryan after they admitted to charges of drunkenness.

The two boys, released Sunday on bail, have had their cases continued to next Saturday.

According to Amherst Police Chief Francis E. Hart, the youths were apprehended at 12:34 a.m. Sunday on North Prospect St., near the Village Inn.

Judge Ryan continued the case to next week after he was informed that the boys were visiting the UM campus.

The two boys, aged 17 and 19, admitted to the judge that they were drinking beer and whiskey. Upon further questioning, they alleged that they got the liquor "at a fraternity house."

Chief Hart said the boys told police that they didn't remember which university fraternity house. The judge ordered the chief to talk with the boys and "close that place (the fraternity house) up."

Judge Ryan continued, "May be they will remember which fraternity house by next week before I make disposition."

Deans Field and Hopkins could not be reached for comment on the action. Among others unavailable last night were: Dist. Atty. Sanford Keedy and Judge Ryan.

Sam Armstrong, IFC President commenting on the alleged serving of the underage visitors, said, "I am shocked that anyone would make an allegation such as this. We have already started an investigation to find out if there is any truth to it."

Student Discovers Glass In North Commons Food

by Pat Petow
Staff Reporter

Judy Moreau '68 told the Collegian that last Friday evening while enjoying her dinner, she "...noticed a piece of hard material in my mouth. So I reached in and pulled out a piece of glass." She said the jagged glass was about an inch long by half an inch, but not "thick".

Miss Moreau recalled she turned to her roommate, Sally Therien, and showing her the glass, could only say, "What shall I do?"

She took the glass to the lady working at the cash register who exclaimed, "Oh my God!" and referred her to the woman serving potatoes. Miss Moreau said the lady looked astonished and asked her if she would like another plate of food—the Nursing major declined.

Somewhat upset, Miss Moreau complained, "I wish they'd keep the damn glass out of the potatoes...I almost swallowed it. I'd be dead now...Obviously they're not to careful in the preparation."

"I think it's a crying shame. It's really too bad that something like that is found in somebody's food," Miss Therien commented.

Another witness, who asked that her name be withheld said, "I think it's inexcusable. There should be no need of finding glass in your potatoes. If you can't stick your fork in your potatoes..."

John F. Martin, Manager of Boarding Hall, Dining Commons, when asked by the Collegian how the glass may have gotten into the food replied, "I haven't the slightest idea." The phone, however, went dead before Mr. Martin could answer the question of what precautions are taken.

The physician on duty Sunday evening at the Infirmary said no injuries as a result of glass in food had been reported Saturday or Sunday. The doctor on duty Friday couldn't be reached.

NEW LOOK

Today's Collegian initiates a new look for the front page of your campus newspaper.

The change was made after considerable study by Collegian staff members of many other campus and commercial newspapers. The new look will provide easier reading as well as allowing the printing of more copy.

Technically, the new headlines are set in a 'sans-serif' type which is generally bolder than the older style. The body copy throughout the paper is being set with a width between lines that is now one-half what it used to be.

Comments are welcome on the new format and may be mailed or left at the Collegian office addressed to the Composition Department.

Dr. Leonard speaking before UMass students on the American World View, at Business Administration Building Auditorium last Thursday evening.

Leonard Criticizes American Outlook

Speaking before a large gathering of the Young Independents and many of his former students last Thursday evening, Dr. David Leonard called for a critical re-examination by Americans of their view of the world and of themselves.

His topic, "Is the American View of the World Mad?" emphasized that experts are not to be trusted when they reason from unexamined assumptions. These assumptions, such as the world is divided between the good and evil forces and the evil communist forces must be stopped at all cost; must be re-evaluated before Americans can deal realistically with the world, he said.

Leonard pointed to the overwhelming superiority of America in wealth and power which, he said, should make us not for unilateral initiative towards peace. We have least to fear from disarmament, said Leonard.

Much of the speech emphasized the importance of self-doubt in examining any critical issue. He warned the Young Independents against dogmatism in their positions. He also said, "We should not confuse the man with the position," and warned against personal hatred of those with differing positions.

To many people attending the discussion, a "new" Dr. Leonard seemed to appear. One person evaluated Dr. Leonard this way, "He seemed more disillusioned in America but less alienated from America."

Mass. 4-H Activity Center To Highlight Exhibition

About 470 young people will tell the Massachusetts 4-H Club story at the Eastern States Exhibition this year with a nine-day series of demonstrations, contests, exhibits and special events coordinated by the Extension Division of 4-H and Youth Programs of the University of Massachusetts.

Focal point of the effort will be a 4-H activity center, open at the Youth Center building on the West Springfield Exposition grounds from 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. each day from Saturday, Sept. 18 to Sunday, Sept. 26. One hundred Massachusetts 4-H Club members and leaders will staff the center for three of the nine days—Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Program at the center will include clothing revues, drama project presentations, conservation and other exhibits. Demonstrations will include a potter's wheel, photography and crafts.

There will be another exhibit at the Massachusetts Building, the only 4-H presentation in any state building on the Avenue of States. Conservation and outdoor recreation will be the theme, with demonstrations by a staff of 57.

A full-sized pool will be used for action demonstrations in swimming and water safety. Conservation techniques, outdoor crafts and nature study and outdoor cookery will also be demonstrated.

On All States Day, Saturday, Sept. 18, there will be a 4-H assembly on the Storowton green at 10:30 a.m., followed at noontime by music from the Middlesex County 4-H Band, directed by Hamel Corsetti of Woburn.

A 4-H pageant will be featured that evening in the Coliseum at the Governors Command Performance that officially opens the 1965 Exposition. The 4-H band will play again for the governors luncheon and reception in the Massachusetts Building the following noon. Outstanding 4-H members will be honored at this Sunday function. Spread over the nine-day Exposition run will be a full program of livestock shows, contests, and judging programs.

Livestock events will include sheep and horse events, judging and fitting contests for dairy cattle, and beef judging and showing events, including a beef auction and sale.

In all, from 3500 to 4000 4-H Clubbers from all over the region will take part in Exposition events. Most of them will be housed in the specially-supervised Horace Moses dormitory and will be fed at a special 4-H cafeteria.

University Orchestra Begins Third Season

The University of Massachusetts Symphony Orchestra held its first rehearsal and auditions for students and other musicians in the Amherst area Thursday in Old Chapel.

The orchestra, in its third year under the baton of the UMass music department's Ronald Steele, has grown from a 27-piece ensemble to a 70-musician unit, comprising musicians from Amherst, Mount Holyoke and Smith Colleges, UMass, and interested people in the surrounding communities.

Particular interest is being paid this year to recruiting members for the string section of the orchestra.

The 1964-65 season included a concert for the Massachusetts All State Band and Chorus Conference in April, and a spring concert which featured three soloists from the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing the rarely performed Beethoven Triple Concerto.

There will be two regularly scheduled performances at the University this year, on Dec. 14, 1965 and on April 5, 1966.

Steele, the orchestra's founder, is a former violinist with the U. S. Air Force "Strolling Strings," and has played at many White House functions and receptions.

Prior to coming to UMass in 1963, Steele was the conductor of the Michigan Youth Symphony, a 150-piece orchestra affiliated with the University of Michigan School of Music.

The orchestra director said he hopes to increase the size of the orchestra again this year. He asked interested and qualified musicians, especially string instrumentalists, to attend the rehearsal and auditions Thursday.

St. Regis Sponsors 7th Annual Contest

St. Regis Paper Company's seventh annual collegiate packaging design contest gets underway today.

The contest is open to students of all institutions of higher learning located in the U.S. It is designed to stimulate interest in several areas of packaging design and provide an opportunity for students to acquaint themselves with the challenges of design as applied to packaging.

This year's contest will include four categories: a corrugated container design for a shipping container for 24 one-pound packages of food; folding carton design for confectionery, cookies, cereal, cake mix or any food product; a consumer bag design for five pounds of charcoal or 10 pounds of cat food and a commercial bag design for 50 pounds of lawn and garden fertilizer, sometimes called plant food.

This year, contest officials announce that there will be $6,100 in prizes, 48 medals, 352 honorable mention certificates and eight all-expense paid trips to New York awarded to the participating students and their art departments.

An honorable mention certificate will be awarded to eighty-eight finalists in each category that did not place in the first twelve of each category.

Closing date for the contest is March 16, 1966. The judging of the top 400 is scheduled for April 27th in order to coincide with the American Management Association's Packaging Show in New York. Winners will be announced early in May and the top winners in each category and their art professors will be flown to New York for the presentation ceremonies.

The '65 Marching Band

The 1965 Marching Band likes cats-enough to tell a pictorial history beginning with Noah's arc christened by a bottle of coke; the Tiger Rag, a mousehole combination with nine tuba's representing those nine lives; and a finale a la Duke Ellington with the percussion playing Caravan.

This Saturday's game against AIC will see the all new '65 version under the direction of John Jenkins in their first home appearance in the new Alumni Stadium.

The band members, have been putting in a few hours every day, on the march since band camp September 6-10. The big marching formation plans are "top secret" so fans will just have to come and be surprised. And maybe lose a beanie or two in the process.

The NEW Hillel

Fall semester brings many changes on campus, a completed Orchard Hill complex, new Engineering Building, and many new faces around campus.

Hillel, sponsored by B'nai B'rith, has always offered a unique Jewish atmosphere open to the University community, include deli suppers, movies, lox and bagel breakfasts, social get-togethers and a lecture series on "The Dilemmas of the Modern Intellectual."

THERE ARE weekly Friday evening and Saturday morning services and Tuesday afternoon coffee hours. Also, Hillel will offer Rosh Hashanah, Yom Kippur, Sukkot, Shemini Atzeret and Simchat Torah services. All these events take place in the Student Union; more details will appear in the "Notices" column of the Collegian.

As Fred Lazin, president of Hillel has said, "All things point to an outstanding year for Hillel."

Capable of speeds better than 2,000 mph, the YF-12A is the hottest aircraft around. Now Maj. Walter F. Daniel, test pilot for the YF-12A, answers your questions about the world's fastest manned airplane and America's Aerospace Team.

(Maj. Daniel, a test pilot since 1954, is a member of the Society of Experimental Test Pilots. He received a B.S. degree in Aeronautical Engineering from the University of Oklahoma. In February 1962, he set world class time-to-climb records in a T-38 jet trainer.)

Is the YF-12A the world's fastest manned aircraft?
It certainly is. On May 1 of this year the YF-12A (formerly known as the A-11) reclaimed the world absolute speed record from the USSR. It was clocked at 2,062 mph over Edwards Air Force Base.

How big is the YF-12A?

The exact dimensions of the YF-12A have not been released yet. But it's approximately 100 feet long, with about a 50-foot wingspan. That's half again as big as our present interceptors!

Is the Air Force training many men as pilots these days?

Yes, very definitely. In spite of all you hear about unmanned vehicles, the human pilot is still very much in the picture. As a matter of fact, the Air Force pilot quota is on the increase.

What other kinds of jobs does the Air Force offer?
Since it's one of the world's foremost technological organizations, the Air Force has plenty of openings for scientists and engineers. There are also many challenging and varied administrative-managerial positions.

What do I have to do to become an Air Force officer?

Air Force ROTC is the best way to get started as an Air Force officer. The new two-year Air Force ROTC program makes this method available to men who have already completed a year or two of their college education. For college graduates, if you did not take advantage of ROTC, you can still get started through Air Force Officer Training School (OTS), a three-month course open to both men and women.

Can I keep up my studies while I'm in the Air Force?

The Air Force encourages its men and women to continue their educations. For instance, you may qualify to study for a graduate degree during off-duty hours, with the Air Force paying a substantial part of the tuition.

What kind of future do I have in the Air Force?
A bright one. As we move further into the Aerospace Age, the Air Force is going to grow even more important. And you can grow with it!

Dr. Albert Ellis:

The Legitimate Pick-Up

Dr. Albert Ellis, New York psychotherapist and marriage counselor, has given authoritative, verbal sanction to something that coeds have been doing for some time: "picking up" a likely looking man. It is time, says Dr. Ellis, that the word "pickup" be furnished.

IT'S PERFECTLY right and proper for the woman to take some initiative in the matter of boy-meets-girl. There is nothing really new about this approach. Ladies of former generations, with unimpaired propriety, used to resort to all sorts of tactics such as dropping gloves and handkerchiefs to attract the attention of an man.

The legitimate pickup, he maintains, is a splendid means of finding that right man. "Wherever you happen to be, if you see a man you think you'd like to know, you should either devise some way to approach him or make it clear that you are approachable and that he won't be rejected."

The advantage of the legitimate pickup is that it offers a girl the chance to be more selective in the choosing of a friend, date, or husband. By taking the initiative, she increases the range of her own selectivity.

HAMP JUDGE . . .

University regulations state that, "All students, regardless of age, will be held responsible for inappropriate conduct with reference to the use of alcoholic beverages." There is no rule applying to visitors.

First, there's the blind date, or the occasion when a man is introduced to a girl.

In organized groups, such as clubs, a girl is wasting her time unless she comes across the man in the course of her first few meetings. Since memberships rarely go up by leaps and bounds, the club's male population tends to be static; this also holds true for classrooms.

THE EMPHASIS, then, is on the girl's field of selectivity. If she widens her range to include any place—on the avenues, in a museum or art gallery, in a library, a bus or train or plane, in the supermarket, in the elevator, at a large party—her opportunities are enormously increased. "The more selective you are, the more you should practice picking up strangers."

One solution might be the student union, or the favorite campus hangout, a jukebox or group folksinging. Informal clothes and informal manners are the rule. In these surroundings, any girl with an ounce of initiative should be able to engineer a decorous pickup with no trouble at all.

There are numerous approaches the girl can use: mistaken identity, asking him for directions when she's "lost her way," commenting on a picture in an art gallery, or asking the name of a tune at a dance.

THERE ARE SOME PITFALLS in pursuing this technique of man-hunting that might end in misfires. Perhaps

Embroided? No, Just Lost

Embroid: to throw into confusion or commotion by contention or discord; to make confused; to distract. So saith Webster.

Embroided: the first several weeks at UMass. So saith Glosband.

You're a senior, therefore you've been here for four years (anyway). You walk into the Hatch at 11:15 on Tuesday and don't know a soul. May be you're a junior. You walk into Bartlett for a Speech class and find out that the section is full. You're a freshman. You walk—never quite sure where you're going or what you'll find when you get there. PANIC.

Before yielding to the throes of apoplexy, remember that similar occurrences are scheduled annually, but usually resolve themselves in due time. "Due time" may be a bit more extended this year, commensurate with the greater influx of lost souls. A few may fall by attrition, but most will raise high the aegis of fortitude, struggle from the vortex that is September in Amherst, and fulfill their ideal at UMass.

Allow me to note that there are myriad ideals here in UMieland. Many of them are not in the strictest congruity with academia; some are even mildly sordid. But remember, you budding young Beelzebubs, there is an education here to be had. Your parents certainly think so.

Your first two weeks are impossible; filled with confusion, strange experiences, unusual people, unresolvable predicaments—all seeming detriments to the improvement of your starving young minds. The coming weeks may prove even a greater impediment to the advancement of the cause, as events become disentangled, and you begin to experiment with your new-found stability.

Despite the variety of time consuming activities, there is one to which you owe your existence as number 667996—education, that is your raison d'être at UMass. Should you forget, the machine won't, and then everyone will forget you.

There are many areas of fulfillment open to you... yes, social and extracurricular, but primarily academic. To many of you this is not a new idea. Some have benefited, some have suffered. All have been forced to remember, at least bi-annually. Should you stop to think about it in the interim, you will benefit from your pensiveness.

Wait a couple of weeks, try to figure out where you are. If you've followed the yellow brick road this far, you might make it to the end. You just might...

— Then What? —

Look over there to your right. What do you see? A new dormitory you say? You're right! Now, look over to your left. What do you know... another new dorm! Seems like pretty near everywhere you look these days there is another new dorm going up.

Yep, Ol, UMass sure is doing a lot of growing these days.

Now, look around your classroom. Do you see any empty chairs? What's that you say? One, over there in the corner? O', two people cut class today, huh? There are really 45 students in that class, are there? But there are only 43 seats!

Did you say that 72 people were originally scheduled for that class? Why, that leaves 27 with nowhere to go! What happened to them? You haven't seen them in high on a week, huh?

The same thing happened to you in one of your courses? Well, what did you do about it? And she didn't let you stay even after you showed her that you were assigned by the infallible machine, eh? So, what did you do then?

Does that mean that you are only carrying four courses now? Oh, you finally got to pick up a fifth. "How to market popscicles and fudgcicles to abnormal people who live in the unstratified environment of FJOKLIMED ISLAND in the South Atlantic #339, huh? 339, you mean they've got more than one course on that subject? There are a lot of people like you, huh, and the big numbers make it sound real impressive—like there are lots of courses. Oh, I see.

Does your major require that course? It's not required anywhere except in its own dept.? If it doesn't meet any requirements why are you taking it? Did you say ALL subjects are closed to seniors and majors only? Then how do you go about fulfilling your graduation requirements? Oh.

But you can take it in summer school... if it's not over enrolled then, huh. But doesn't that ruin your summer? The ONLY way to graduate on time, huh. What if it's filled then? An extra semester, eh?

Can't you carry six courses the next semester to make up? You'd need a 2.5? Don't you have that? Can't get it taking these tough courses outside your field, huh? Then why take them? Oh yes, I remember why.

Well if things are like that now, Where are they going to put all the kids in those new dorms that are going up?

Letters To The Editor

The Collegian editorial staff welcomes your comments and questions. It is requested, however, that all letters be typed at 60 spaces per line, and that only one side of the paper be used. All letters must be signed with your real name and address—withheld upon request. All letters should be addressed: Letters to The Editor, Collegian, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, Mass. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

Stadium Seating

To the Editor:

Well, the University has a new Alumni Stadium. By the looks of things, it will be just that, with student seating in such poor position on the field. It would seem that, in the general plan of the University, the student body would be given some consideration at one time or another. From a student standpoint, it would be nice to receive our money's worth for a change.

At Alumni Field, we were provided with seats that were reasonably situated, although there were not many, and we did have to fight for them. Now it appears that the general student population will be placed somewhere to the north of the fifty yard line. A very select few, probably the strongest, will be seated in the forty-nine yard line seats.

I dislike people who complain without offering constructive solutions; here are several. Perhaps seating could be arranged in such a manner that students received every other section and reserved seating took those that remained. If this is not possible, perhaps students could be given one side of the entire stadium, at least allowing them to choose which end of the stadium they prefer. Recently, the graduate students were given an option; they were allowed to pay their athletic fee, or to refrain if they so desired. If an undergraduate is dissatisfied with the facilities, should not he also be given this same option? For the price of this fee, a person would be able to purchase a reserved seat ticket to the game, and, provided that the purchase were made at an early enough date, he would be given a reasonable choice as to his field position.

In a matter such as this, which, after all, is more important to the student body than to anyone else, would it not have been wise to give the students a little more consideration? Perhaps, for a change, economic considerations should have been placed aside in favor of student contentment.

Student-Faculty Evening; Sept. 21, 1965

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

Each department in the College of Agriculture is set up so that advisors will be in their offices. Departments with large numbers will hold a general meeting followed by small group discussions. Several departments will serve cider and doughnuts. It is not planned to hold a C of A meeting as such because of the diversity of the majors.

Plant and Soil Science — Faculty and students will meet in French Hall. There will be informal discussions.

Food Science and Technology — Restaurant and Hotel majors will meet with their faculty in the new building. There will be a tour of the new facilities followed by informal discussion groups. Food Science and Technology majors will meet with their advisors for discussions.

Veterinary and Animal Science — This department has postponed the meeting until September 29, primarily because Dr. Russell Smith (advisor to pre-veterinary students) will not be back on campus until after the 21st. On the 29th faculty and students will meet at the Faculty Club for an evening including discussions and refreshments.

Agricultural and Food Economics — Faculty, including wives, will meet with students for a dessert party at South Commons.

Forestry and Wildlife Management — Students will meet with faculty in Hildsworth Hall. There will be a general meeting followed by small discussion groups. Refreshments will be served.

SCHOOL OF BUSINESS Administration

1. Since our freshmen take no course in Business Administration we shall use at least two of the evenings for general conferences and meetings with them. We expect to have a general session, then have smaller groups for discussion concerning their present courses, problems of transfer credit and encouragement in regular meetings with Advisors.

2. One of our problems is handing transfer credit of students who have completed terminal programs in Junior or Community Colleges. Generally these courses are taught here on a junior and senior level. We do not allow credit for these transfer courses until the student passes an examination in each course. Our plan is to use one of the evening sessions to give these examinations.

3. Departments are already making plans to use one or more of the evenings for "Club" meetings, i.e. Marketing Club, Management Club and so on.

4. Since the Dean has little chance to meet most students aside from those who have problems, I plan to use one of the evening sessions for a general meeting and question period.

5. Some Faculty have considered using a session for a Faculty Seminar wherein a few "papers" may be presented for discussion.

COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES

The student faculty evening, September 21, 1965 in the College of Arts and Sciences will concentrate on the various major programs. The diversity of curricula ranging from Art to Zoology requires this sort of breakdown in order to enhance the unity of the group of persons associated with the various areas of study.

A separate program is planned for each major except the pre-dental, pre-medical, and pre-veterinary. Students in these majors have a field of concentration and are asked to join the groups for this field of concentration.

The places of meeting for the various groups are to be found in the composite schedule. All meetings begin at 7:30 p.m. The various programs will differ in detail but all provide an opportunity for students to meet informally with the faculty.

The music majors, for example, will meet at Prof. Bezanon's home and transportation from the campus is being arranged by the faculty for individual students.

The sociology and economics departments will meet their students in small groups in neighboring classrooms.

The Russian majors are meeting in a room with a piano so that it will be possible to spend part of the time singing Russian songs.

The geology and psychology departments have planned similar programs. Following the introduction of faculty with a brief description of the areas of specialization of each, two or three faculty members will comment briefly on his recent studies. Following this there will be informal visiting between faculty and students in small groups.

These comments indicate the variety of plans. The novelty of this program on our campus makes it seem desirable that a variety of things be tried in order to improve the planning for future sessions. Student Faculty Evening, Sept. 21, 1965, Meeting places

Amherst College Commences Year

President Calvin H. Plimpton of Amherst College told undergraduates here last week that "too many of our privileged" fail to live up to their potential, and he cautioned students against what he called the problems of success.

President Plimpton, speaking to students at the opening exercises for Amherst's 145th academic year, said that "many underprivileged do the best they can. Too many of our privileged fall far short of using an equal percentage of their potential."

"There is no problem," President Plimpton said, "when you are at the bottom. If you move at all it can only be up. But if you are on a peak, then choosing a direction and pursuing it is harder. You must decide which neighboring hill has a higher summit and then make a jump across the chasm. With an institution, you cannot afford deliberately to go down even with the hope of later going up."

"In addition to direction, there is the problem of morale. Instead of contentment, success should arouse anxiety. It is so easy for the virile self-confidence responsible for success to slide over into complacency and even conceit. A successful institution can very easily become a bit precious with pride for the wrong reasons. It is easy to identify an institution that has been defeated by this hazard when you hear them say that this is the way we do things at Amherst. And there is an echo of the hazard when we say, too proudly, wait till you see the students at Amherst, or wait till you read the Amherst honors theses — they are as good as M.A. theses elsewhere. Pride only in accomplishment, in medals won, Ph.D.'s produced, papers published, buildings erected, endowments established, can be corrupting — but pride in ever increasing effort endures and is uplifting."

Home Ec. Workshop To Study Consumers

The late President John F. Kennedy once told the 87th Congress that one of the American consumer's inalienable rights is "the right to be informed."

In keeping with this philosophy, the University of Massachusetts Extension Division of Home Economics will hold a workshop for all interested people to study the characteristics of American consumers in an age of mass consumption.

Miss Winifred Eastwood, head of the Extension Division of Home Economics, in announcing the workshop, said the course would be open to all consumers in the Western Massachusetts area, and will provide an opportunity for discussion and analysis of consumer problems through case studies and consideration of the consumer's responsibility.

She said the course should make consumers more aware of their situation in the American economy, as well as government attitudes and restrictions in consumer protection and education.

The workshop will be taught by Miss Marjorie M. Merchant, extension specialist in consumer marketing education and associate professor of home economics at the University.

The course will cover several topics, including the importance of the consumer in our economy; consumer sovereignty in the United States; effects on the market place from changes in the number and age of our population; and consumer confusion with trends toward self-service discount stores and increased promotional activity.

The non-credit workshop for all interested consumers will start Oct. 7, from 7 to 9 p.m. in Skinner Hall, Room 217. Meetings will be held each Thursday evening through Nov. 4.

There will be no fee, and reservations for the workshop may be made by writing Room 108, Skinner Hall, University of Massachusetts, or by phoning Amherst 545-2389.

60 Students Receive Collegian Orientation

It was standing room only for over 60 UMass students who filed into the Collegian office Wednesday night to the first of three training programs that will introduce interested and capable journalism aspirants to the Collegian staff.

The orientations scheduled for the next two Wednesdays are intended to provide the Collegian with an organized and competent staff that will efficiently produce an excellent college newspaper.

Wednesday night each editor gave a general description of his individual department and welcomed the students to the staff.

Managing Editor Peter Hendrickson, News Editor Ellen Levine, Editorial Chairman Joel Hartstone, Sports Editor Howie Davis, Feature Editor Sherry Spear and Make-up Editor Dave Gitelson then invited students interested in their individual departments to meet with them for a brief orientation session.

Within an hour freshmen as well as upper classmen who had filled out the Collegian Staff applications available in the paper's office were already in the "swing" of collegiate journalism.

The Freshmen were requested to return this Wednesday for placement on different staffs and the upperclassmen will return for a talk by Technical Advisor Alvin Oickle of the Greenfield Recorder-Gazette.

LEGITIMATE . . .

the gentleman, once met, incorrectly assumes that she is looking for a sex playmate. It won't take him long to find out he was wrong. She has lost nothing in making the acquaintance and might have learned something in the process.

By using the pickup approach, a girl can meet about 150 eligible men in a year, as opposed to perhaps 20 with conventional methods. She has the law of averages working for her. With so many to choose from, says Dr. Ellis, her chances of finding at least one entirely suitable man are greatly improved.

The main stumbling block, Dr. Ellis found, is the girl's estimation of herself based on a lifetime of indoctrination. When she says she's afraid of "other people's" opinion of her, this usually means that she herself thinks the method is "wrong" and "immoral", which Ellis interprets to mean that she has a poor opinion of herself. If she believes she's doing nothing wrong and has a good opinion of herself, the opinions of others aren't going to disturb her.

Dittfach Honored At Opening Convocation

John Harland Dittfach, veteran professor of mechanical engineering, was named University of Massachusetts Distinguished Teacher of the Year Tuesday afternoon at the convocation formally opening the 1965 academic year.

The award, which carries a $1000 stipend, was presented by UMass President John Lederle. Selection was by a faculty committee representing schools and colleges of the university.

A member of the committee described Prof. Dittfach as a faculty member who "again and again has demonstrated his concern in students as people and his commitment to teaching."

A Minnesota native and World War II Army Corps of Engineers lieutenant, Prof. Dittfach was graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1948 with a bachelor of science degree in mechanical engineering. He received a master's degree in the same field from Minnesota in 1948 and was appointed to the UMass faculty the same year.

He became an associate professor at UMass in 1952 and was made a full professor in 1956.

He was instrumental in organizing the university chapter of Tau Beta Pi, engineering honor society, and serves as faculty advisor to the chapter.

Prof. Dittfach was the administrator of a 1963 National Science Foundation grant to the university for the purchase of advanced equipment for compressible fluid flow instruction.

Prof. Dittfach belongs to the Society of Automotive Engineers, the Instrument Society of America, the American Society for Engineering Education and two engineering honoraries — Tau Beta Pi and Pi Tau Sigma. He is also active and has served as president of the Hampshire County Association for Retarded Children.

Landry, Giarla, Dallas Are Awarded By 'M' Club

Defensive back Dave Giarla

As a result of a poll taken by the press at the Maine game, the Varsity "M" Club will acknowledge Greg Landry for an outstanding offensive performance and Dave Giarla and Bernie Dallas a fine defensive effort.

Landry completed 12 passes for 195 yards and picked up 33 yards rushing. His passes to ends Bob Meers and Milt Morin were consistently accurate. The sophomore quarterback also showed great poise in the pocket waiting for his receivers to get clear.

Dallas showed the form that made him a great middle linebacker two years ago. He missed last season with a knee injury and subsequent operation, but showed no side effects Saturday.

Giarla made it possible for the Redmen to keep the score as low as it was. He intercepted one pass in the endzone to halt a Maine drive and picked off another late in the game.

This is the first season such awards have been made. At the end of the season the players who have received the most awards will be given a trophy.

Syracuse, B. C. Win In East

The Boilermakers shutout Miami Univ. 38-0 and are the one expected to share the top ten with Kentucky and Florida along with the usual year in-year out powers.

KENTUCKY HAS (1) a fine passes in Rick Norton (2) an exceptional running back in Rodger Bird (3) receiver Rick Kestner with 42 catches last year, and (4) a strong defensive against rushing and passing. Against Missouri (1) and (4) were all that was needed for a 7-0 win. Florida took a 24-0 lead against Northwestern at Evanston before the home club managed to bring the score to a respectable 24-14 in the final period.

Perennial power Syracuse used five interceptions to help in a 14-6 win over Navy in a lower scoring game than was expected. Running quarterback Ted Holman (have the Orangemen ever had any other kind?) scored both touchdowns. This position in the Syracuse lineup was the only one in question, so if Holman works out well it could be another Lambert Trophy for Ben Schwartzwalder.

The team that is said to have so much material they don't know what to do with it all is Nebraska, and they used the pro-like precision mashing to wallop Texas Christian 34-14. Bob Churchich, a good bet for the Heisman award, fired a pair of scoring tosses to Freeman White who caught eight passes in all.

Other portents of power over the weekend were Mississippi's 34-14 win over weaker than usual Memphis State, Oregon State upsetting Illinois 12-10 behind passer Paul Brothers, All-American halfback Donny Anderson's two touchdown receptions leading Texas Tech to a 26-7 win over Kansas in a three period game. Warnings of a worse tornado than Anderson halted the game with a minute gone in the final period.

Upcoming UMass opponent, University of Buffalo, lost 18-6 in a game in which both teams looked impressive. Ed Foley opened the game with a 38 yard completion and led the Eagles to a first period touchdown. He had a good day throwing the rest of the way, although his receivers had a sub-par afternoon. Buffalo displayed the strong defense they were expected to have, and only offensive mistakes, a fumble and an interception, kept them from a higher point tally. Next week's foe, American International, got shelled 42-19, but the team that did the shelling was Vermont which is also on the schedule in a few weeks. The Catamounts managed the rout against a case of acute fumblyitis. They lost possession seven times and still racked up six touchdowns.

ton last week and showed it was no fluke by picking up 263 yards passing in leading the Bombers to their first win of the year, 28-24 over the Mohawk Valley Falcons.

GARRY FALLON kicked a field goal that put the Falcons ahead late in the final period. The Bombers then moved 51 yards in five plays to the Mohawk five where Mel Meeks fumbled. Gerry Everling recovered to kill the threat as he did earlier when he blocked a punt that led to the third Falcons score.

Three incomplete passes and a punt put the ball in Whelchel's grasp with little time remaining. An incomplete pass to Dick Bourdelais preceded the pass to Crenshaw that went for the score. He hauled in the pass at the 15 and went the rest of the way unmoled.

Whelchel also threw touchdown passes to Jack Janiszewski for 45 yards, Andy Griffin for 15 yards, and a gem to Bourdelais for ten yards that tied the game at 21-21.

The difference in the Holyoke backfield play resulted from the improved Bombers line led by two other ex-Redmen Bob Burke and Clyde Meyerhoefer.

down field to the Mass three yard line. At this point the minute quarterback threw a pass to Harney who couldn't hold on to it. He lost the ball in the air it hit an unidentified Mass player and came down in the hands of Maine end John White. Lovejoy converted for the tenth Maine point.

The Redmen scored their only touchdown late in the fourth quarter. Landry hit Morin for 41 yards and the big end was brought down on the Maine two. Landry eventually took it over from the one.

fort was knocked down by Maine's defensive halfback Norm Tardiff from Randolph.

QUESTIONS AND QUIPS

Is a light, quick team superior to a big, strong one? Including last year's Tangerine Bowl, this has made the second game in a row that the Redmen were soundly outplayed by a smaller squad.

AFTER THE GAME Head Coach Viv Fusia said that he realizes the Redmen were not as far along as he thought they were after the Harvard scrimmage. He also said that he knew Maine would give his men a good game. They showed this by their desire to win after being a heavy underdog. Once again the Redmen showed they are sluggish early in the season. . . . Dave Giarla was outstanding defensively with two interceptions . . .

Fusia had his charges punting on third down. It seemed as if a passing game would have wrecked Maine. DeVarney showed the 8000 fans why he has a good chance for All-New England honors. The only severe injury was Bob Ellis. The halfback re-injured his hamstring muscle.

Next week the Redmen open Alumni Stadium against another small college, A.I.C. Overconfidence has spelled many a defeat in the past.

ELLIS HURT

Tri-Captain Bob Ellis of the UMass football team has been operated on at Cooley Dickinson hospital for stripped knee ligaments.

Prior to this, the 215 pound halfback had been nursing a hamstring injury. Ellis played just one minute in the Maine game Saturday, but it proved one minute too long. He will probably be lost for the season.

Barring special permission from the Yankee Conference Rules Committee, the Beverly native will be ineligible next year.

Alabama Loses! Nebraska On Top

by Al Rice

The only thing that can ever be said at the end of a college football day and be 99 and 44/100 percent true is that everything went according to expectations with a few exceptions.

Last year's top six teams Arkansas, Notre Dame, Texas, Alabama, Michigan, and Nebraska were picked for an easy time Saturday and four or more touchdowns does qualify as an easy time.

But here comes the exception. Alabama was the one team that didn't score four, and it cost them an 18-17 loss to Georgia by way of a 67 yard scoring lateral carried in by Bob Taylor. The Crimson Tide was in early trouble 10-0, from a field goal and an interception return for a touchdown that a lineman lugged 55 yards. Steve Sloan pulled away run and a two point pass conversion cooked their goose.

It was no sweat all the way Alabama in front, but the break-for the other big powers and expected powers to be. Arkansas' junior quarterback Jon Brittenum scored a pair of touchdowns and passed for another in a 28-14 win over Oklahoma State no longer the weak sister of the Big 8. Sophomore halfback Harry Jones also scored a pair for last year's only unbeaten team.

Texas played their typical game against Tulane, ball control and ground power mixed with an occasional breakaway burst. End result: 31-0 shut-out over the flood ridden Baton Rouge outfit. Chapel Hill's 90 degree heat caused caused Rose Bowl champion Michigan to make a lot of mistakes against North Carolina, but their amazing backfield depth was more than enough for a 31-24 win. The Wolverines are the pick for another Big 10 crown if they can get by Purdue on October 16th.

Recent Court Case

Involvement of UMass Fraternities Doubtful

An Amherst Police Official who was recently involved in both the arrest and court proceedings of two West Roxbury youths has stated that the arrest and the naming of a fraternity house for the acquisition of liquor was merely routine.

He went on to say that the actual involvement of a fraternity house in the court proceedings was doubtful, as were the possibilities of any further repercussions concerning the closing of any UMass fraternity house.

District Judge Luke F. Ryan had no comment to make today on either the court case, which is now pending, or the quotes which have been attributed to him.

The Inter-Fraternity Council according to its President is now conducting an investigation of the alleged charges against the fraternity system at the University.

George Rodgers, UMass Fraternity Manager, when asked about the situation stated that "The I.F.C. is a self-regulating branch of the fraternity system. It has been designed to rule against either individual fraternity men or fraternity houses in the event of offenses against the fraternity community, or the campus as a whole. It has proved many times its integrity and discretion in putting into practice the ideals for which it stands."

William Barnard, Asst. Dean of Men and unofficially Dean of Fraternities, told the Collegian, "I have complete confidence in the IFC, and I am sure that if anything is uncovered by their investigation they will take appropriate action."

Bus Service Authorized To New Alumni Stadium

The Western Mass. Bus Lines of Northampton has received authority from the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities to commence service to and from the new University of Massachusetts Alumni Stadium.

Joseph A. Maddaloni, General Manager of the company stated that bus service will be provided from Amherst center and University campus points on Saturday, Sept. 25.

He said that buses will start from the College Drug Store in Amherst at 11:55 a.m., 12:15 p.m., 12:35, 12:55 and 1:15 p.m.

and will go via North Pleasant Street to Farview Way, along Ellis Drive to serve the Student Union Building, then along Lincoln Avenue and North Hadley Road to the Stadium.

Other buses will start from Orchard Hill at the same times and will go via Clark Hill Road, Stockbridge Road, Ellis Drive, Lincoln Avenue and North Hadley Road. Stops for passengers will be made at all points enroute including Fraternity Houses and Dormitories. Buses will return over these same routes after the game.

Vandalism Mars Campus Appearance

by Alan Grigsby, Police Reporter

For the last two weekends stolen steamrollers at UMass have left deep impressions on lawns and stone walls around and about the campus.

The first theft occurred on East Pleasant Street, where a steamroller, owned by Puffer Construction Co. was driven through lawns and walls and then left abandoned near Baker dormitory.

The second was driven out of the construction area of the new administration building and was found later near the Newman Center parking lot.

Campus Police Chief "Red" Blasko said, "I couldn't tell you how they started them, but it was probably somebody who worked on construction this summer."

The police also reported two accidents that occurred on campus.

Parade and Rally Friday

Two parades will be the lead-off to the home season Friday night. A rally and dance will follow.

Both parades will begin at 6:45, one in the Orchard and the other in the Southwest Complex —led by Scrolls, Keys, Revelers and Adelpheans. A band, the "Compulsions" will accompany the group on a flatbed truck.

The high-point of the Rally will be the Introduction of the 1965 Fighting Redmen. There will also be coaches' speeches and a bonfire.

The dance, which is to be in the SU Ballroom, will be the first ballroom event of the year. Two bands will play alternately. Admission is 75 cents.

Friday night's events precede the Redmen's first home game at the new Alumni Stadium.

Jill Harrison is this week's choice for Collegian Coed. Jill is 5'4½" tall and an extremely amicable person. She is currently majoring in English. Jill was a swing-shift freshman this summer and will join the rest of her class in February. In commenting on the swing-shift program Jill said that she liked being finished with classes at 10:30 a.m. everyday and not having Saturday classes, an aspect conducive to late sleeping. Jill said that the male population on campus, "is more than I ever dreamed it would be." However, she added there was not enough to do on weekends. But everyone has been telling her of the rampant social life during the regular year.

Jill likes water-skiing, XKE's, and Ferraris. "Is that too tomboyish" she asks. Jill has varied musical tastes, including Barbara Streisand, Tchaikovsky, and the Rolling Stones among her favorites.

Jill says that she misses the University—but not the studying.

Interested In Study Abroad? Apply For Fulbright Awards

by Jay Stewart,
Staff Reporter

Paris. Istanbul. Hamburg. Melbourne. Barcelona. Buenos Aires. Tokyo. Like to spend a year studying in one of these pulsating international cities, alive with the wonders of the Orient, the novelty of South America, the nobility of Europe?

Use your imagination and the impossible becomes possible. It did for me as last year I spent eight months studying in Spain and four months travelling extensively throughout Europe as well as parts of Africa and Asia.

This year under the Fulbright-Hays Act 900 full scholarships in 54 countries will be awarded to students qualified and interested for study abroad. Tragically, in the past, only a few U. Mass. students have applied. It is appalling, and quite ironical, that from an institution of 12,000 students, only two Fulbright Grants were awarded last year.

ARE UMASS students academically inferior to other university students? "UMass students often shy away from competition on a national level feeling themselves unqualified under such keen fire," said Dr. Louis Greenbaum of the History Dept. Department. "Faculty members, and advisors might give more encouragement and information about the program to qualified applicants."

He stressed the urgent need of ever larger numbers because will be more than anxious to explain the opportunities of the program to interested students. Application blanks for next year's Fulbright Awards must be completed by Oct. 15 and may be picked up in Professor Greenbaum's office, 357 Bartlett.

STUDENTS WHO WISH to apply for an award for study or research, or for teaching as-sistantships, must have: U. S. citizenship, at least a bachelor's degree by the beginning date of the grant, language proficiency commensurate with the proposed project, and good health.

Selections will be made on the basis of academic and/or professional record, the feasibility of the applicant's proposed study plan, and personal qualifications. Preference is given to candidates who have not previously lived or studied abroad and who are under the age of 35.

THREE TYPES of grants are available under the Fulbright-

Hayes Act: U. S. Government Full Grants, Joint U. S. - Other Government Grants, and U. S. Government Travel Only Grants.

Each Full Grant provides round-trip transportation, tuition, maintenance, and health and accident insurance for one academic year of study or research.

For Travel-Only Grants, the United States provides a supplementary travel stipend for a maintenance and tuition scholarship awarded by a university, private donor, or foreign government.

Infirmary Announces More Visiting Hours

New and extended visiting hours for infirmary patients have been announced by Dr. Robert W. Gage, Director of the University Health Services. Effective immediately, week day visiting hours will be from 6:30 to 8:00. Previous hours were 7:00 - 8:00 p.m.

Each student patient will be allowed one visitor at any one time during this period except when an unusually large census of patients requires that visiting be suspended temporarily.

In addition, beginning Saturday, Sept. 25, visiting hours will be held on Saturday and Sunday afternoons. Hours will be from 3:15 to 4:30. Each patient will be allowed one visitor at a time during this period also. This extension has been in response to student requests for expansion of the visiting hours.

Students are reminded that the Outpatient clinic is open weekdays from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., and that visits for health care should be planned during these hours whenever possible. The Infirmary is always open for urgent health problems which cannot be postponed until the clinic is open.

The clinic is also open Saturday morning from 8:00 a.m. until 12:00 noon. However, during this period the staff is reduced. Students are asked to come to the Saturday clinic only in the event of an urgent problem.

Visits concerning a modification of the Physical Education Program, parking permits, etc., cannot be attended on Saturday mornings.

Granny Goes High Fashion This Season

Back in Poland, grandma called it her babushka. Her daughter called it her hustka. What do we call it? The scarf. The scarf has come a long way from its humble European origin. Now it is strictly high fashion, especially when it is tied dramatically over a hat frame.

Not only is the scarf hat, as it is called, fun and attractive to wear, but it leaves lots of room for creativity. It can be tied high or low, wrapped, folded, draped or pinned. Almost any basic hat frame can be used. Check your five and dime store for a flattering one. Then, tie 'round your favorite scarf, a 30 to 36-inch square is most successful.

A really unique scarf hat is... tie-dye your own scarf. It's as simple as this. Just start with a large square scarf. Tie it in knots or tie it Egyptian mummy style with a length of cord, string or wire. Then dip it into a bowlful of hot dye solution, untie and rinse in cold water. Lo...it's a high fashion pattern. The pattern will vary from a snowflake look to a muted shading to a blend of uneven stripes. It can be centered, cornered or all-over. This will depend on your tying technique. To add extra colors, just retie and redye. Wherever the scarf is knotted or covered, the fabric will not accept the dye.

The Ginger Man

By J. P. DONLEAVY

Published by Delacorte Press

Published in Paris in its entirety in June, 1953, The Ginger Man by J. P. Donleavy became an immediate underground success. Its reputation enhanced by the fact that it was widely banned. It was published in expurgated form in English in December, 1956, in the United States two years later, and finally in its original, complete form, in England, in 1963. Until now, the American Donleavy cult has had to make do with the incomplete edition. The only complete and unexpurgated edition to appear in this country will be published by Delacorte Press on Oct. 1st (A Seymour Lawrence Book, $5.75). The new 347 page book restores the missing one-tenth of the novel.

Sebastian Balfe Dangerfield, The Ginger Man, is a free-wheeling rogue and a man for all seasons. Completely without prejudice, responsibility, amoral, inconsistent in everything, and beyond defeat even when there is nothing left, Donleavy's hero is an arch-archetype. He is the compleat scoundrel always among prudes. Young men and women all over the world have a true friend in Dangerfield for he typifies their rebellion, their defiance of conformism and the quest for life in the raw, no matter what the consequences.

Forty-two year old James Patrick Donleavy was born in Brooklyn and educated at Trinity College in Dublin. He now divides his time between London and the Isle of Man. He is the author of another novel, A Singular Man, three plays and a collection of short stories and sketches. His new short novel The Saddest Summer of Samuel S. will be published next spring (A Seymour Lawrence Book, Delacorte Press).

The 'Ins' and the 'Outs'

by Zelda 8570894

If I loved lines I would be completely ecstatic at UMass. UMass is so "line-ized" that if your timing is off, there's even a line to sign-in to the dorm on Saturday night. But not to stop here, I've been compiling a list of what

I could do without: Saturday classes, courses that need 20-30 dollars of books that you can't even resell next year because the course has been "re-organized", meal tickets, and profs who don't have the time to see a student.

The more fashion conscious of us judiciously pour over fashion magazines to see what the critics think "the well dressed college girls" should wear, and soon after arriving on campus, put away that special "total" looks outfit and become just another average slob. There's a look for almost every group on campus—from the high-waisted "empire" to the sockless fraternity man and the rim-less glasses of the "beat". And of course, there are the "in's" and the "out's". IN: corduroy (especially cranberry) and penny loafers. OUT: sneakers and pea jackets. IN: beanies for freshmen. OUT: Beanies for anyone after the first touch-down Saturday (until '70 arrives). IN: Saturday classes. OUT: Wish the IBM plug were. IN: Sitting around the pond not watching the ducks. OUT: Sitting around the pond watching the ducks.

IN: Apathy . . . . .

Eating: The National Problem

Are you a nibbler or a gorgor? Some nutritionists say if you're a nibbler you'll be healthier.

Now don't be offended—neither term is meant literally. A "nibbler," in the health experts' parlance, is a person who eats frequently but restricts his intake at each time.

Recently experiments with rats and observations of other cultures have advanced a new theory of man's eating habits: that a man who spreads his eating more thinly and consistently over the day (the nibbler) will have less needless body fat and less heart trouble than the big meal eater.

Up at Harvard a Dr. Frederick Stare added credence to the argument by citing the natives of the island of Bali. "I never saw a fat woman in Bali," he said. "Those people seemed to be eating all the time, but only a handful at a time."

And now to speak on 19th century history, the University is pleased to present . . .

The Enjoyment of Learning

There are three necessities of life—food, water, and the cume. While man is capable of surviving for days without the first two, should thought of the latter slip from his mind for even a few hours, he may find himself in a relapse from which it may be impossible to recover.

It is easy to understand why food and water are important to human welfare, but why is the last necessity so indispensable? It does not contribute to man's physical well-being by providing minerals and protein to sustain health, nor does it satisfy any powerful, uncontrollable, and instinctive urge buried deep within man's psyche. It cannot build muscles. It fails to quench thirsts. And it is powerless to relieve sexual drives. What, then, is the cume for?

This may sound like begging the question, since the answer seems simple enough. The cume is the system by which the abilities of all students are supposedly classified on one scale so that business firms, graduate schools, etc. can select the best students on the basis thereof. It is also the system maintained by most schools in order to compel their students to accomplish at least a minimum amount of work in order to remain in college, with added incentives such as Deans' Lists for those who do better than average.

The result is that every capable young person in the university develops what can be called "cumitis" — no matter where he or she might be, the thought of the cume is continually lurking in the back of the mind. Think of the people who have denied themselves participation in worthwhile extracurricular activities because they were worried about lowering their marks, or those who are always complaining about the amount of book work they have yet to finish. Such students are prime examples of what the cume system has done to learning today.

The idea of knowledge for knowledge's sake is nothing more than a dream. Twentieth century students study for practical reasons—for the job after graduation, for money, success, or status. This realistic approach may better prepare them for the world in which they will live, although this may be doubtful; but it cannot be doubted that it is shameful to see so much of the enjoyment taken out of what should be a pleasurable experience, to see young people denied the adventure that should be theirs in the search for information and truth. The excitement of learning has been lowered to the dull routine of homework assignments and huge lecture halls.

Four Colleges — Cooperate!

Now that the new freshmen have had their first taste of university living, and the upperclassmen have returned to greet old friends, many students are beginning to investigate the activities and programs offered on the UMass campus. However, few people realize that these programs are offered not only by UMass, but also by the campuses of Amherst College, Mount Holyoke, and Smith.

Through the Four-College Community Program students are invited to attend lectures, concerts, films and plays given on any campus throughout the entire year. TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THESE PROGRAMS.

The information that may be obtained from hearing a well-known lecturer or from seeing a penetrating foreign film may not help a student specifically in his field of study, but it will provide a varied background of general knowledge which helps to make a well-educated person.

Go to programs that seem, at first, very unrelated in character. Surprisingly enough, the more subjects you learn about the more you will see how interrelated the different areas of life actually are.

Since the four college community also allows students from each campus, with the permission of the Administration, to attend regular credit courses, check to see if perhaps you are eligible to take a course taught by the excellent professors of these schools. If transportation is a problem encourage friends to go with you. There will always be someone with a car available if you seek them out.

REMEMBER, these opportunities are offered to us as a favor. If we do not make use of them we are not making the most of our college life.

A Wider Way, Please?

To the editor:

Since traffic congestion seems to be such a problem at UMass, I would assume that the University would do everything in its power to promote auto safety. Yet a very dangerous situation has existed at the street by Hills North and South for the past year or so with no attempts having been made to alleviate it.

This street leading up to Van Meter is extremely narrow and winding, and two cars can travel the road at the same time only with extreme caution. However, right next to this tiny road is a huge sidewalk. Wouldn't it be better to cut away part of the sidewalk and widen the road, thus eliminating the congestion? It seems like such an easy answer to the problem I can't see why it hasn't been done already.

Don't Stop The Press!

To the Editor:

The budget binding clause which suspends publications of the Yahoo creates a more significant issue than many realize. The administration seems to have decided late last spring that the Yahoo would undergo a change. They decided that a joint Senate-Administrative committee would report their views of the Yahoo on or before Feb. 16, 1966, and until then its publication would be suspended by holding the magazine's publishing funds in escrow. The administration decided that the students (The Senate) cannot manage their own money. They decided that the expressions of a student publication had to be censored. Deeming the students incapable of self-management, they furnished for the Senate the method by which this censorship would be handled.

The officers and many members of the Student Senate behaved like "lost puppies" and yielded to administrative pressures and passed the "hand-me-down" Yahoo bill. As a result, the students of the university will not receive their pre-paid copies of the Yahoo for the Fall Semester. The Student Senate has become a voice of the administration rather than of the students. In short, the Senate compromised effective student government with the passage of Wednesday night's bill.

It must be recognized that Yahoo could be greatly improved and that indeed such improvement should take place. How this is to be accomplished, however, is a student responsibility—not in administrative one. Just as a publisher oversees his newspaper, the Student Senate oversees Yahoo. It is not likely that a publisher would suspend his newspaper while it is being improved upon; similarly, we should not suspend Yahoo.

There is an amendment pending before the Senate that would allow, without administrative dictums, the intelligent improvement of this publication. It also allows study into the possibility of placing Yahoo on a subscription basis in the future. But it does not allow the Yahoo monies to be held in escrow. It is an amendment sponsored by students for the best interest of students. It is disheartening to know that there are some senators who, because of either timidity or complacency, would, despite its implications, have the Yahoo suspended for the semester.

UM Action Committee to Begin Tutorial Program

by Sandy Farman

The UMass Action Committee held its first meeting Monday evening to plan the Springfield tutorial project.

For this project the committee will work in conjunction with the Northern Educational Service and the Anti-poverty program.

Eighty-four UMass students signed up to participate in the project, and heard Miss Sara Holden, Educational Director for the Springfield area, describe the work which they will be expected to undertake.

The UMass Action Committee delegated two chairmen, Linda Epstein, 424 Emily Dickinson, and Rosanne Bacon, 300 Emily Dickinson, who will write up a formal constitution for the soon-to-become member of the Recognized Student Organizations (R.S.O.) on campus.

By becoming a member of R.S.O. the committee may be granted money for bussing tutors to and from Springfield, thus facilitating a consistent and continuous contact between students and tutors.

Dr. Politella Chosen To Head Panel

Named chairman of a panel to discuss "Freedom of the College Press" in San Francisco this fall is Dr. Dario Politella, associate professor of journalism at UofM.

The discussion group will meet during the annual convention of the National Council of College Publications Advisors, Oct. 21-23.

Held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Associated Collegiate Press, the NCCPA will draw about 200 publication advisers for the three-day session at the Sheraton-Palace.

Politella is the author of more than a dozen magazine articles and monographs on student press freedom. He is editor of the nationally circulated magazine, The Collegiate Journalist.

Miss Ann Ferguson and Mr. John Bretlinger, both UM faculty members, worked through the Commonwealth Service Corps and NES this past summer, and now serve as the coordinators for the Springfield Project at the University. They are being assisted by Miss Holden.

The tutoring project is scheduled to begin about Oct. 4, and a training session for all tutors will be held prior to this time.

A second meeting will be held on Sunday evening at 7:30 p.m. for all persons who were unable to attend the meeting last Monday evening. Faculty members and faculty wives who may be interested in the project are especially invited to attend this meeting.

Foreign Service Exam Scheduled For Dec. 4

The next written examination for the Foreign Service will be held Dec. 4, 1965, at sites throughout the country. Applications must be filed with the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, Department of State, Washington, before October 18.

The same examination is offered candidates for both the Foreign Service of the Department of State and USIA, although candidates must specify at the time of application which agency they seek to enter. Individuals successful on the written examination will be invited to take an oral examination before a panel of senior officers during the spring.

Specialized options for State Department applicants are included on the examination in Economics, Commerce, Administration, History, Government, Social Sciences and Public Affairs, to enable candidates to demonstrate competence in their chosen areas. All USIA candidates must take option 4.

The duties of Foreign Service Officers fall into the broad categories of political and economic reporting and analysis, consular affairs, administration, and commercial work.

Entering junior officers can expect to receive experience in several of these fields, and in different areas of the world, before initiating career specialization.

All candidates should be well-grounded in economics, U. S. and world history, political science and government. In addition, many applicants have specialized qualifications in administration, or in area and language studies.

Precisionettes Traveled to Univ. of Maine

To inaugurate another year of performances, and to serve as the Redmen's chief cheering section, the UMass Precisionettes travelled to the University of Maine last Saturday, where they represented the University in the half-time program.

Performing before a crowd of 8000, the team of 20 girls offered a varied routine composed of six eye-catching exercises in precision drill.

The girls are now preparing for their appearance this Saturday at the AIC game in the new stadium, and are designing new routines for further performances at home and away.

In addition, they have accepted invitations to participate in parades in Pittsfield and Florence.

Under the direction of Susan Wanczyk, commander, and Bernard Cabral, drillmaster, the girls are planning to expand team membership through a recruiting program later in the fall.

MARYLAND STANDARDS REFINED

(I.P. — Academic probation standards and retention requirements have been re-defined and modified at the University of Maryland in a Faculty Senate attempt to clarify probation here.

The official release states that enforced academic action will be taken after computation of cumulative averages by the registrar. The table used in evaluating action is broken down on the basis of total credit hours attempted:

Hours	Dismissal Level	Probation Level

51-65	below 1.80	below 1.90
66-80	below 1.90	below 2.00

Regardless of his cumulative average, however, no student will be dismissed at the end of any grading period in which he had a 2.00 average for at least 12 hours credit.

Policy on repeated courses, a subject for past confusion, has also been defined. When a course is repeated, all attempts are included in the cumulative grade point average. If a course in which a passing grade (D) has been earned is repeated, the course may not count toward total hours credit for graduation. It is, however, included in cumulative grade point average.

First semester courses taken by freshmen which are passed but repeated are an exception to this rule.

YI's To Sponsor Four-College Affair

On Saturday, September 25, the Four College members of Students for a Democratic Society, which includes Young Independents, and all interested persons will meet for a barbecue and informal discussion concerning S.D.S. The meeting will be held at the Fine Arts camp, The Rock, off Route 9 in Goshen, Mass.

The discussion will primarily concern defining S.D.S. values and policy, which will be very helpful for persons unfamiliar with the organization and its nationwide activities. Also, plans will be discussed concerning Four College S.D.S. activities for the coming year.

Featured at the discussion will be Howard Zinn, professor of history at Boston University and author of SNCC, the New Abolitionists. Professor Zinn worked in Mississippi during the summer of 1963 directing the Mississippi Freedom Schools.

Attending the meeting will be students from the Smith College chapter of S.D.S., Mt. Holyoke representatives, and also students from Amherst College, as well as members and friends of Young Independents.

A fee of $2.00 for the barbecue supper and rental of the camp site will be collected at The Rock.

Students should meet on Saturday at 1.00 P.M. in the Skinner Building parking lot (opposite Hasbrouk Lab). Rides to The Rock will leave from this spot.

Become Leaders, Not Followers

(Reprinted from Boston Herald) a mob psychology which makes them conformers instead of leaders."

In an impassioned plea "to be motivated and determined in your goal," Fr. Walsh said, "It takes more moral courage and fortitude to stand up for one's own values than to be swayed and lulled by the fads of the crowd."

3-Year Plan Introduced For Bates College

Lewiston, Me. (I.P.) — The new educational program for Bates College — the 4/3 Option — will be offered to entering students in September. Key to the three-year program is a longer college year. Those electing the three-year program will spend ten months in college.

Bates will continue to offer a four-year program, with one significant change from the traditional academic schedule. Instead of opening in late September, classes will begin early in that month. Consequently, first semester classes and examinations will be completed before the Christmas recess.

Thus, when he returns to the campus, the student begins a new semester ready to study through late April. Four-year students will at this time leave the campus to return in early September. Students electing the three-year programs will undertake their summer vacations during July and August after an intensive short term of study during May and June.

Three of short terms, plus a slightly higher academic load during the regular semesters, will be the equivalent of a full academic year, and the four-year program of undergraduate study will thus be condensed into three.

According to President Charles F. Phillips, students under the three-year plan will benefit from markedly reduced tuition cost. "Bates students electing the three-year option will pay exactly the same annual tuition as those under the four-year plan."

"Stated another way," explains Dr. Phillips, "they may have ten months of academic work for the same tuition as for eight months. Since the annual tuition is $1,500, the four-year student's total tuition cost of $6,000 is reduced to $4,500 for the three-year student."

The three-year plan, Dr. Phillips emphasized, should not be confused with the common collegiate institution of a voluntary summer school added on to the regular academic year. The "Short Term" in May and June is designed only for students choosing to accelerate their education, and the college will not seek to enroll visitors from other campuses or special students.

"It is an experiment," Dr. Phillips concluded, "designed to test whether there is a practical and desirable way for the smaller liberal arts college to educate more students in a shorter time than the traditional, and comparatively leisurely four-year schedule permits."

Tri-Capt. Bob Ellis Out For Season

Bob Ellis' knee gets well deserved attention from a coach and a doctor in Maine Saturday. On a bruising tackle Bob's knee ligaments let loose and he had to be taken from the game. On Sunday morning Ellis was taken to the Infirmary where Dr. Gage recommended transferring him immediately to Cooley Dickinson. An operation performed almost as soon as he arrived will leave the star halfback in a cast for eight weeks. Of course, he is lost for the season. The Redmen will be pressed to find a replacement for Ellis. UMass has plenty of depth in the half-back slot with Blron, Swanson, Durkin and Lewis. However, Ellis was being counted on to play this season. It will be hard to fill his shoes.

B.C., HARVARD . . .

men's new Alumni Stadium this coming weekend.

Worcester Tech lost as expected to Bowdoin (40-8), and I am afraid that that phrase "lost as expected" is going to be in use most of the season when referring to Worcester Tech.

Three other Massachusetts teams have not yet opened their seasons—Harvard, Holy Cross, and Boston University.

Harvard has a strong veteran defensive line, and the offense led by break away threat Bob Pat Conway along with an improved John McCluskey at quarterback should jell.

The Crimson is picked to win the Ivy League crown.

Holy Cross may be in trouble this year. The Crusaders have lost their star halfback Jim Marcellino, and replacements for a player like him are hard to find. Also, quarterback Jack Lentz, who was being counted on to take up the scoring chores of Marcellino, has aggravated the rib injuries he received last year and is out for the season.

The Crusaders will be lucky to break even this year. I have to pick Harvard over Holy Cross Saturday (30-12).

Boston University ended up with a 2-7 record last season and was dropped from major college status by the N.C.A.A. The most that can be said about this year's edition of the Terriers is that the same starting team is back this year with few exceptions and the experience might have helped.

I believe that the Terriers can't break the losing habit and will be lucky to improve on last season's record.

Decision Is Upheld By Vt. Court

Montpelier, Vt. — Judge Ernest W. Gibson of the U. S. District Court signed Thursday an order upholding the University of Vermont in its dismissal of a medical student.

The student, Thomas Connelly, Jr., 26, of Milton, Mass., had sought federal court action ordering his readmission to the medical school.

Connelly was dismissed July 20, 1964, after he flunked a pediatrics course with a grade of 74. The passing mark is 75. A university rule calls for dismissal of a student who falls 25 per cent or more of his courses in one year.

B. C., Harvard and UMass Look Ready For '65 Season

The state of Massachusetts ended up with a .500 percentage this weekend as Boston College, Northeastern, and Springfield won, A.I.C. and Worcester Tech were bombed, and the Redmen of UMass were treated to an upset at the hands of a fired up University of Maine team on Saturday.

Buffalo was in over its head against B.C. Saturday. B.C.'s defense held Buffalo to 86 yards rushing and intercepted four passes. Eagle's quarterback Eddie Foley, who promises to be one of the best in the East this year, ran and passed to the tune of 197 yards of B.C.'s total offense of 266.

Speedsters Dick Leonardis (10 sec. for the 100 yd. dash), and Paul Della Villa (9.8 for the 100 yds.) both served notice that they are going to give opponents a lot of headaches this year. Brendan McCarthy, 215 lb. fullback, carried the ball twelve times for a total of 50 yds. and was never thrown for a loss.

The next opponent for Coach Jim Miller's Eagles will be Villanova which lost to Toledo in their season's opener Saturday. The famed Villanova defense should provide a good test for B.C.'s offense.

I pick B.C. to win (21-7).

UMass was ambushed in the wilds of Orono, Maine, in a game that probably decided the Yankee-Conference championship.

The Redmen defense could not contain quarterback Dick DeVarney, who proved himself to be a fine field general. De-

Varney combined a passing attack that netted 163 yards with handoffs to his halfbacks Frank Harney and Paul Keany, both of whom seemed able to gain the yardage when it counted.

UMass suffered from first game jitters and the rest of the season should go their way. With the possible exception of Buffalo, the Redmen should win the rest of their games.

A.I.C. is the next opponent for the Redmen and should prove to be a pushover.

Predicted score (UMASS 40—A.I.C. 12).

Northeastern easily beat C. W. Post by the score of 34-15 in a rough game which saw the invaders from L. I. draw five 15-yd. penalties for unsportsmanlike conduct.

Quarterback Lou Tomasello, who passed for one T.D. and ran for two himself, and fullback Bob Cappadona, who gained 120 yds. in 14 carries, were the stars for Northeastern.

The Northeastern Huskies out-class all of their opponents this season and could come up with an undefeated season.

The less said about A.I.C. and Worcester Tech the better. If Vermont, the weak sister of the Yan-Con, can score 42 points against A.I.C., can you imagine what UMass is going to do to A.I.C. when they visit the Red-

Coach Shields Greets 52 Frosh Candidates

The 1965 version of the UMass Freshman Football team began to take shape last Wednesday when 52 candidates, 16 of whom are benefitting from athletic scholarships, reported to Coach Frank Shields. The squad is currently being oriented with the Massachusetts philosophy of football.

The first test for the Freshmen will come on October 8, at home, versus the University of Rhode Island.

On October 12, the Boston University Freshmen will journey to Amherst to try to avenge last year's defeat.

After a three week respite the Little Redmen will resume action at Connecticut on November 5.

The season concludes November 13, when both Massachusetts football aggregates, Varsity and Freshman, travel to New Hampshire.

This year's team will be trying not only to improve on the 4-1 record posted by Greg Landry and company, but also to extend the UMass Freshman unbeaten record over Yankee Conference rivals to six years.

Nebraska Is Number 1

In its 10th annual college football issue, Sports Illustrated picks Nebraska as the No. 1 college football team, heading the list of the magazine's "Eleven Best Elevens."

Following in order are: Texas, Alabama, Arkansas, USC, Florida, Notre Dame, Michigan, LSU, Purdue, and Ohio State.

The magazine cites nine more as among the 20 best—Penn State, Georgia Tech, Missouri, Maryland, Stanford, Kentucky, Washington, Syracuse and Virginia.

TERRY SWANSON

Football Profile

by Art Keown

For the last two seasons Coach Fusia has been able to count on Terry Swanson for running speed and extremely good punting.

This year, as a senior, Terry will again strengthen the defensive backfield with his tremendous speed and tackling ability. Besides this and his chore as 4th down punter, it is likely that he will be called upon to show his speed as a running back on offense.

A Senior, majoring in Hotel and Restaurant Management, Terry came to UMass from Belmont. In high school he competed in baseball, basketball and football, and was twice rated All Scholastic in both baseball and football.

As a Freshman at the University, Terry majored in Physical Education, thinking that he might enjoy teaching after graduation. He played Freshman football and baseball, and was a candidate for both Varsity teams.

Terry's potential improved each year, and now, after filling an important position on the Redman Football Team, he will go on to be Captain of the 1966 Varsity Baseball Team.

Terry is one of Coach Fusia's several married Gridmen, and he lives with his wife in Suffolk House, one of the University's dormitories for married couples. Upon graduation Terry plans to work in Hotel Management, and he hopes to someday own a restaurant or motel.

INTRAMURAL REPORT

by David James

The fraternities initiate the intramural season tonight with the opening ceremonies at 6:15. President Lederle, Dean Warren McGuirk, and Dr. Arthur Levine of the Food Science and Technology Department will preside.

Interest appears to be at an all-time high as evinced by the addition of nine more teams to last year's record-breaking total of 55. In all probability there will be a wild scramble for the championship in each league.

This year there will be four Dorm Leagues, two Fraternity

Leagues, and two Independent Leagues. My crystal ball sees the always potent KS contingent squeaking out a close fraternity crown. The veteran Chadbourne Maroons should edge out their chief tormentors, the scrappy Greenough Grants. The Independent championship could be won by any of five or six contenders.

The intramural office is trying to procure tickets to a Patriots game to be awarded to the campus champion in touch football. The football season marks the beginning of the race

Alumni Stadium Ready For Saturday's Game

Dacey Gives OK To Student Seating

The stadium in this incomplete stage is only a thing of the past as students will see on Saturday when the brand new Alumni Stadium hosts the first home game of the Redmen '65 season against A.I.C.

by Ellen Levine, News Editor

"It does look a hell of a lot better once you get down here than it does on paper" commented Senate President Richard Dacey as he toured the student sections—the new Alumni Stadium.

After the announcement of the proposed seating arrangements for UMass students, Dacey became worried by reports of student disapproval of the seats assigned to them for home games.

Before bringing the issue to a head, Dacey requested that he be given a tour of the new stadium so that he may have all the facts before issuing a formal complaint.

After a complete survey of the new stadium Dacey agreed that "Now that I've seen the stadium and the seating arrangements, I don't see any basis for complaint."

The seating arrangements for the new stadium which was built at a cost of over one million dollars, were developed by a three man committee which included Dr. John Conlon assistant Dean of the School of Business Administration, Evan Johnston, a member of the Athletic Council and Robert O'Connell financial manager of athletics for the University.

These three men researched the reports from other colleges who had similar stadiums as well as the attendance reports from previous UMass games.

The results were reported to President Lederle and the entire athletic commission who then decided on the present seating arrangement, which places students in sections 7, 8, 9 and 10 of the west side and sections 17, 18, 19 and 20 of the east side of the stadium.

This plan offers the students an elevated view of the action on the field due to the construction of the stadium the first row of seats is higher than those in the last row of the old field.

Other sections explained O'Connell are for reserved and season's tickets as well as general admission. The sale of tickets is very important explained both O'Connell and Johnston. "Some schools won't even play you unless you can guarantee gate receipts'.

Explaining how the number of seats allotted to students was determined, O'Connell spoke of the fact that the highest percentage of students that ever attended a UMass game was 65%. "The new arrangement provides seats for 78% of the student body," he concluded.

Illustrating the reasoning behind the seating plan, O'Connell showed President Dacey stadium plans from other schools throughout the country. He pointed to Pittsburgh, Northwestern, Penn State and Carolina where students are offered only end zone seating. Student seating at Oklahoma is on the visiting side!

Surveying the new stadium with Dacey, O'Connell, and Johnston was Robert Brooks, assistant to Dean Field.

"The seating arrangement is just for this year, it isn't permanent and will change as the student body increases" explained Robert N. Brooks, assistant to the Dean of Students. "But, I think these are pretty good seats in any stadium," President Dacey agreed.

With the seating problem solved, everything, except the parking facilities is running smoothly at the new stadium. The grass lots planned for student and general parking have not been accepted yet by the building commission.

"I don't know why, exactly, they haven't been o.k'd" said Johnston "I think it has something to do with the type of fill used." The problem should however be cleared up shortly, if not in time for the first game on Saturday. Parking for students who show ID's will be free.

Johnston said that the alumni are very pleased with the new stadium and many have bought season's tickets. He expressed the hope that the new facility would bring alumni back to the campus so that they could become aware of the growth of the University.

A capacity crowd is expected on Saturday when the gates to the new stadium open at 12:15 for the first game of the UMass season.

Sophomore Class Meeting Set For Sunday Evening

by Al Davis, Class Reporter

On Sunday, September 26, at 7:30 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium, the Class of 1968 will hold its annual class meeting. This important meeting of the sophomore class was originally scheduled for Wednesday, September 22, but it had to be postponed until this Sunday because of a special lecture that had been previously planned for all of the sophomore English classes.

The purposes of this meeting are to afford all the interested sophomores an opportunity to meet their class officers and to obtain a better understanding of the class functions and the manner in which the class operates.

The meeting will provide a forum for constructive criticism and positive suggestions concerning all aspects of the class activities.

More specifically, the meeting will enable the members of the Class of 1968 to obtain information concerning the upcoming sophomore events which include the Soph-Frosh picnic, the Homecoming Dance, the Winter Carnival Concert, and finally the Sophomore Banquet.

In addition, the Class officers plan to discuss the functions of the Sophomore Class Executive Council and its importance in the success of all class activities.

Finally, a complete explanation of the newly initiated sophomore representative body will be rendered by its creator, President Robert Keough.

The officers of the Class of 1968 extend a personal invitation to all members of the sophomore class. It is the hope of the class officers that this meeting will be instrumental in increasing class spirit, and in encouraging more people to become involved in the activities of the class.

According to President Keough, only in this way can the upcoming Sophomore Class events be successful.

Constitutional Convention Postponed One Week

Due to the lack of class officers at Wednesday's Senate meeting the scheduled Constitutional Convention was postponed.

During the meeting Senate President Dacey discussed the student seating arrangements at the new stadium.

Dacey told the senators that the stadium will accommodate 78% of the student body. The seats are located between the 42 yard line and the goal line (on both sides) and "all seats offer a reasonably good view" Dacey said.

The only business of the evening was the passage of a bill to reimburse Senate Treasurer

Bombardier for expenses "incurred upon Senate business" this past summer. The expenses totaled $46.

The bill passed only after much discussion both on the Senate floor last week and at the Senate Executive meeting last Tuesday. Some senators, among them Senator Allen felt that such expenses and impositions are up to the individual senate members and should be considered before a senator takes office.

The meeting ended with the promise of a Constitutional Convention and a heated discussion of Yahoo at the next meeting.

The Parking Problem (See page 6)

President Lederle addressed the members of the faculty senate who met at 4:15 yesterday afternoon in the Student Union. The meeting was called to discuss an un-disclosed agenda which might be made public to the student body sometime next week. The Faculty Senate Constitution is expected to be discussed and publicized at a later date.

Senate Nomination Papers Due Today

Nomination papers are due back at the R.S.O. office before 5 p.m. today, Fri., Sept. 24th. The election polls for commuters, fraternities, sororities, and '66 at-large will be in the Student Union lobby from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Thurs., Sept. 30th.

The elections for senators from residence halls will be held in the respective dormitories from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m., Thurs., Sept. 30th.

The Student Senate Elections Committee would welcome as much help as possible from A.P.O., G.S.S., the Scrolls, the Maroon Keys, and other conscientious students to run the election polls.

A sign up sheet is provided on the bulletin board across from the Student Senate office. Obviously, a candidate cannot run an election in which he or she is a candidate.

The drawing for the arrangement of names on the ballots will be in Mills House room B1 at 8 p.m. Sunday night. For any further information contact Arnold Kaufman, 405 Greenough.

High School Seniors Will Visit UMass

High School seniors considering future schooling will have an opportunity to visit at UMass this fall in the annual High School Guest Days series for prospective students.

The program will be presented on five Saturdays in September and October. High school seniors will visit the University's Amherst campus, hear a short talk by a representative of the admissions office, and attend an orientation session about the University.

Students will also have an opportunity to question University officials about special problems concerning admission.

The Guest Day programs will begin at 10 a.m. on Saturdays designated for high schools in the following counties: Sept. 25 for schools in Barnstable, Dukes, Nantucket and Worcester counties; Oct. 2 for Essex, Franklin, Norfolk and Plymouth counties; Oct. 9 for Berkshire, Bristol and Suffolk counties; Oct. 23 for Middlesex County; and Oct. 30 for Hampden and Hampshire counties.

In addition to this there will be complimentary seats to home football games when games are being played. On non-football weekends guided tours of the campus will be conducted in the afternoon by Arcon, the University student guide service.

University officials expect about 750 visitors on each of the Guest Days. Students will usually come in groups from their high schools, supervised by school administrators.

Student ID's Needed For Game Sat.

The University Sports Information office has announced that there will be no charge for admission at UMass home football games for students with ID's. The ID must be presented for admission and for parking in the assigned areas at Alumni Stadium. Holders of the $12.00 season ticket for the five home games will also be able to park free of charge.

All other spectators must pay either $3.00 for reserve seats (including children)—$3.50 at the Holy Cross game or $2.00 for general admission with children under 15 charged $.50 for general admission. Persons without ID's or season tickets will also be charged $.50 for parking privileges at Alumni Stadium.

One of the many crowded lots at UMass due to the excess of cars and other vehicles. For the whole story on parking on campus see pages 6 and 7.

Pesky Sarpent To Feature Singer Jesse Colin Young

It's called the Pesky Sarpent. It lives at 612½ Page Blvd., in Springfield. It's a coffee-house.

Since its inception early this summer, the Pesky Sarpent has presented to the folk audience of Springfield such artists as Jim Kweskin, Pat Sky and newcomers Dave Cohen and Don Maclean. Its latest performers are Jesse Colin Young and the Jerry Corbett Trio.

Yes, something has been added to the Jesse Colin Young we knew from Capitol and Mercury Records. Jerry Corbett and his trio provide the backdrop for his new sound of folk-rock, or as Jesse calls it, "folk 'n roll." Electrified Guild guitars, harmonicas, drums, and a bass guitar add rhythm, depth and volume to "Doc Geiger," "Four in the Morning" and "Trouble in Mind."

Asked if he was influenced by Bob Dylan, Jesse replied, "No, I always liked the big groovy sound. Music, you see, is to make people happy, and the simple folk just doesn't do the job. Same with protest songs. These things have to be brought to the attention of the people, but then they have to escape from them. I guess that's what my music does." Young, by the way, is a Conscientious Objector.

Why did he change his name from Perry Miller? "Well, we always liked the bad gu's of the West, so Suzie (his wife) and I sat down and came up with Jesse, from Jesse James, and Colin Young from Colin Younger, two of the best bad men you'd ever want to know."

Jesse Colin Young has a 45 soon to be released on the Mercury label, which will be followed by his third album, complete with the Jerry Corbett Trio. He will be performing at the Pesky Sarpent through Sunday, for a show that's unique as well as entertaining.

P.S. For folk music at its best, listen to WMUA every Tuesday and Wednesday night from 6:00 to 8:00 p.m. and on Saturday from 9:00 to 1:00 p.m. That's at 91.1 on your F.M., folk music dial.

Free Love Dominates Isle Life

by Paula McCarthy,
Feature Reviewer

The Three Sirens by Irving Wallace is a true to life account of the adventures of an American anthropological team studying life on a remote Polynesian island. The Three Sirens are a small, hither to unknown group of islands, characteristic of the South Pacific. And it is here that the western researchers find a way of life, love, sex, and marriage that is in direct contradiction to all western convention.

The author vividly portrays the reaction of each researcher to the uninhibited, completely free art of love practiced on The Three Sirens. The Americans, unconsciously abandoning their primary purpose, reflect on their own desires, passions and fears in light of the customs of their Polynesian subjects. The comparison of this seemingly Utopian way of life with that of the western world produces a novel that is both exciting and stimulating, while still having the effect of a fairy tale or a Greek myth.

"Camp Metawampee" Termed A Success

by Nancy Abrams, Feature Staff

One campus wit labeled this year's summer school as "Camp Metawampee." He was right. While courses, contrary to public opinion, were just as difficult as during the regular school year, a summer-camp atmosphere dominated all.

The small student body probably was the biggest factor contributing to this atmosphere. Except for some exiles down in Johnson House, everyone lived on top of the Mountain.

The "study" lounges in the Orchard were excellent for nightly parties; there was plenty of room for the whole corridor to dance. All ticket-holders for culinary delights ate in the Kettle, the Hatch was usually sparsely populated, and there was none of the I'm-only-one-in-twelve-thousand feeling.

Most students only had three hours of classes a day. While many upperclassmen also held part time jobs and freshmen took physical education, it seemed as if there was quite a bit of time left over for loafing.

Except for an excellent Fine Arts Festival, there were no planned activities or organizations, but students kept themselves occupied, often in the unorganized traditions of college life.

That peculiar breed, the Special Freshman, set the mad pace. Fresh from cheering squads and senior proms, their enthusiasm and high spirits affected even the most sophisticated and apathetic upperclassmen.

Summer students had several privileges. They saw the Orchard receive her beauty treatment and could follow the progress of the tower dorms and the classrooms in Bartlett. Those students with classes in SBA could watch the football players practice. Everyone also got a sneak preview of the Class of '69 as they were herded in and out for counseling.

Summer school? The weather was tolerable, the kids were great, the study load was not that bad, and a good time was had by all. Consider it for next summer—it certainly beats Girl Scout camp.

How To Have A Heavenly Haven

by Angela Caruso,
Feature Staff

A BREAK FROM THE MADDENING CROWD . . . and who doesn't need it at times? How, you say, in this land of gargantuan lines, tripled rooms, and standing room only classes? Well, let me tell you . . .

Besides two square miles to cross and recross, explore and memorize, UM has given you four walls (generally of the same complexion—pink, blue, green or beige), within which you are supposed to contain yourself when not in the line of duty (classes, Hatch, etc.).

Believe it or not, you can create a refreshing retreat, a tranquil sanctuary from this gift. How, you ask again ??? Patience, I'll proceed.

Personal comfort combined with impersonal practicality will bring you the best results—an uncluttered room that bespeaks your personality. A lamp not only is an invaluable study aid, but also adds to the flavor of the room. Forget the harsh, metal-mouthed desk lamp—bring an old but reliable one from home, perhaps one with decorations on its base. Instead of a regular bulb, install a beige one—it won't hurt your eyes and will make the room more evenly lighted.

Here we see one of UMass's eager-beaver freshmen hard at work trying to beautify his room. While most students are content to put up pictures and special lighting set-ups, this enterprising Frosh thinks big. However, the Housing Office does not recommend this practice. We are informed that he is no longer here.

The same beige light will also enable you girls to make up more skillfully (you won't be forced to face yourself under that probing bulb supplied), and also lends a more conducive atmosphere to Johnny Mathis melodies during your break.

A bulletin board can also serve a dual purpose. Besides party favors and personal idiosyncrasies, notes for your roommate and class schedules can be tacked on, hopefully giving you some degree of organization in the education-go-round.

Closet curtains, too, have diverse accomplishments. Aside from the obvious decorative reasons, curtains prevent dust (which can accumulate in your den) from reaching clothes, and furthermore, hide any trash you may have reason to store.

Add a few double duty toss pillows that match your color scheme, and serve as extra floor seats, a few friends, a radio or a record player, and you have a fairly comfortable, enjoyable room to "take five".

Wednesday we ran an article about an upcoming concert by Jorge Bolet, piano virtuoso. We made a complete mess of it. We are sorry.

The concert will be held Wednesday, Sept. 29 at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. We hope to see you all there.

We would like to thank those of you who called this error to our attention. The only thing worse than making a mistake is making a mistake and not being able to rectify it.

Again, we are sorry about making a mistake like that. I doubt we will do it again.

From UPI:

Recently, the city officials (analogous to university officials, we're told), of Port Arthur, Texas gathered on a special street corner to dedicate a new $14,000 electronically operated traffic light, the city's first.

The officials affirmed that the new control would make the intersection safe and practical.

However, the ceremony was held up for 30 minutes. It seems a car and an ambulance crashed at the intersection. The dedication was held after the wreckage was towed away.

One person and, presumably, many feelings, were hurt.

The End of An Era?

No one has any serious doubt as to whether respectable turnout will show up for this Saturday's football game. There was, however, serious doubt as to whether a respectable turnout would show up Tuesday night for the Faculty-Student Program.

It should be made well known that, much to the credit of student body, which is usually labeled as apathetic, the turnout was overwhelming. Both faculty and administration members were surprised and especially pleased at the great response with which the program was received.

However, the people who were most pleased with the program were the students who attended. Most of them found it to be quite different from what they expected. They found that the faculty members were really eager to meet them and to discuss their problems with them. In addition to this, and this is perhaps the most significant part of the program, students and faculty had the opportunity to meet each other as individuals on an informal basis. This is probably the first time in a long while that this interaction has been possible.

Perhaps this is the end of an era at UMass. Perhaps students have finally realized that the impersonal atmosphere which has so long lingered over the University is not something to be merely accepted. It is something to be changed, and something which can be changed by the enthusiasm and spirit of participation which was displayed Tuesday night. The Faculty-Student night may have been the start of a new attitude at UMass. Let's hope so.

Joel Hartstone,
Editorial Chairman

What is Education?

The vast majority of college students consider their classes, readings, and assignments to be chores and unwanted burdens, which unfortunately must be endured to attain security, success, or happiness in life. The very word "studies" connotes among young people the meaning of work in the sense of mental and insignificant tasks. When a student says "I have to go study" it is said with a reluctance that is similar to the construction worker who at the blowing of the 8 o'clock whistle gripes "I have to get to work".

While it would be ridiculous to ever expect students to attempt their studies with the same enthusiasm they have in attending a social affair, and while nothing worthwhile was ever accomplished without putting a good amount of sweat and labor behind it, classes and assignments need not be the drudgery they have become. If education is not to be reduced to the rote memorization of facts and tedious drills, if it is to be an interesting experience from which the student will benefit fully, then certain steps must be taken to encourage the young man or woman to enter wholeheartedly into the process of learning.

The first step involves an evaluation of what is "the process of learning". Traditionally, the student has always been considered on the receiving end of education. He is the inexperienced youth who listens devoutly for hours while those vast warehouses of enlightenment, his professors, impart their knowledge to him. Recently, however, it has been recognized that this method of teaching leads to a stifling of the student's originality. Hence, the progressive trend emphasizes more active participation on the part of the student, thus challenging his mind and encouraging him to develop his intellectual capacities to their fullest potential.

Small class discussion groups do not seem feasible at a large university such as UMass, where conditions are so overcrowded that some students have had to select alternate courses in place of their first choice because all sections were filled. But a compromise between the huge lecture hall and the small seminar room can be found.

The history department has already begun such an experiment. Two special honors sections of about 25 people each meet for only two hours just once a week. Most of the discussion is carried on by the students with the instructor acting only as a moderator. There are no exams, but every few weeks each student is required to write a two or three page paper, stating his opinion on whatever subject is under discussion. The student must be well read so that he will be able to state his position on a specified topic and then defend this position from critics both in class and in the written essay.

The history department has set an example. The rest of the university would do well to follow.

Joseph Zalkind

Died: An Old Tradition

We are now part of a great expansion period at the University. A dynamic change that began several years ago is now at its summit. Academically, the University has blossomed into a first class institution of higher learning, and physically, our campus is pushing Amherst into the suburbs.

But what about the intangible facets of the University? What has happened to the freshman spirit that once was so evident here? It seems that while the physical process of building increases year by year, the fervor of each incoming class correspondingly diminishes.

Society lives on a foundation to which many traditions are basic. The University also carries with it much deeply-rooted tradition, representing a spirit and loyalty that lives with its students. But now these traditions, and thus, everything they symbolize, seem to have gone downhill.

This year the large influx of freshmen in UMass history has been accompanied by fewer beanies than ever before. Freshmen undoubtedly regard these beanies in a derogatory manner, not realizing their true significance and value.

Beanies are not meant to belittle freshmen, but rather to convey a proud feeling for the University and to build this feeling up within each freshman mind. That moment when the beanies fly with the first home touchdown is one which should linger throughout college years.

This Saturday is our first home game of the 1965 season and our first game ever in new Alumni Stadium. Friday night marks the first rally and bonfire of the season and a chance for all students, freshmen and upperclassmen, to get out and cheer the team.

There is no need for school spirit to die with high school graduation. Let's all turn out for these events and revel in the spirit of old UMass. And freshmen, let's see those beanies at the game. It's up to you to carry on a tradition that will remain dear to you.

Letters To The Editor

For A Change!

To the Editor:

On Tuesday evening, in conjunction with the University's newly formed program of improving Student-Faculty relationships we of the General Business and Finance Department were invited to attend an open house held at the home of the chairman of the department, Prof. James Ludtke. We found this meeting completely different from anything we have ever encountered at the University, in that we were able to talk to the members of the faculty on completely open and informal terms. The format of the evening afforded us the opportunity to do everything from discussing whatever we desired to playing pool with the faculty. We found the faculty very eager to discuss with us our views and we found them to be very sincere in attempting to understand the student's problems. Our general feeling on the entire evening was that all the students and faculty enjoyed the opportunity to see each other in a different role and that we all benefited from this opportunity to communicate. We think that other departments in the University would benefit greatly by following the approach of the General Business and Finance Department and hope for its continuance and growth.

BE A SPORT

To the Editor:

After having read the last few issues of the Collegian I have noticed that the only sport that has been mentioned is Football. I realize that football is the major sport at the University of Massachusetts; however, don't you feel that other sports such as soccer should be given at least some sort of recognition.

I am an avid soccer fan, as I am sure many others are. I am sure that the student body is also interested in what the various other varsity teams are doing.

My Question is: Does the Collegian have any intention of referring to any sports besides football.

Have A Better Idea?

Dear Girls:

After reading your letter in Wednesday's Collegian, we find it necessary to point out the following:

1. Meals at the South Commons were promised only for the '64-'65 school year.
2. Why is it necessary for the entire complex to dine together? (How many friends do you dine with at each meal, 2...3...1,000?)
3. Although the Southwest Complex may have such extras as landscaping and carpeting, it still lacks some necessities including twenty-four hour hot water, adequate lighting, vending machines, and curtains.
4. Do you realize how much greater the distance is from the Southwest Complex to the North Commons as compared with that from the Orchard Hill Complex to that same commons?
5. You state that, "Certainly, we walk for enough each day." Do you think that you walk any further than the students in the Southwest Complex? If so, do you realize that you are free to change dorms every semester?

In conclusion we suggest that instead of selfishly criticizing the present situation, you should offer a practical solution. For example, why don't you petition for a commons on the hill?

As I See It

Yours for the Asking

Editor's Note: The author of this column Mr. Georgios Pan Piperopoulos, is a graduate exchange student from Greece. He has served since 1960 as the U. S. correspondent for the Drasis Press Organization in Greece, and last year was an editor with the Atlantic Greek Daily in New York. He has been invited by the Editorial Chairman of the Collegian to write a series of guest editorials. This is the second installment of his first article.

By Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

Take, for argument's sake, the young man or woman, who has achieved a certain status in his or her country and especially in the academic milieu. He is "something" so say the friends and the superiors who award him the grant for study abroad. Incidentally, there are four major kinds of foreign students that one encounters on U.S. college campuses: a) The Fulbright exchange students; b) the Home Government sponsored students; c) the U.S. Institution sponsored students and finally the small number of students financing personally their studies.

As the first three categories indicate most of the Foreign students are here simply because they were thought worthy of the money spent on their education and scientific development. This quality of "worthiness" creates in the midst of most foreign students (it is after all a human feeling) a certain kind of superiority and consciousness of status.

Though probably more mature than the average American student, due to their cultures, their having witnessed deprivations and wars, they are still young and inexperienced about this country, the country that they know through Hollywood's jeopardies of the Seventh Art, through novels and newspapers and through the pages of Life and Look.

One rainy or sunny day, depending on the mood of New York's atmosphere, most of them set foot on this land. And next day they are faced with the unknown. The language barrier is there but it is the most easily overcome one. What is painful is the drastic, almost complete elimination of status, the realization that they are now part of an amorphous, huge student body that possesses all the attributes of an associational society. Primary types of groups exist on campus but they are open only to undergraduates; and most of the foreign students are graduates. Thus the need for interpersonal relations must be satisfied by each and every foreign student through his own efforts.

Faculty wives clubs, churches and citizens' organizations extend invitations to foreign students. Such functions serve a twofold purpose: they provide some amount of social interaction necessary for the well-being of most humans, and they give the foreign student a chance to see the inside of an American home, to meet families, to talk to people. The events can, however, lead to problems.

This is one comment we hear every day. And for good reasons. We use the finest 100% pure beef... ground fresh daily. We buy only brand-name supplies. We maintain, through automation, complete quality control over food preparation. If you could sum up Burger Chef in one word, that word is quality!

The new parking lot now being completed near the Alumni Field will help alleviate the growing parking problem on campus.

but confusion for every car*

The New Alumni Stadium may be biggest traffic problem ever at UMass. The huge parking lots at the South and Southwest areas of the stadium have not been accepted by the University.

According to Chief Blasko, the parking lots must have standing grass to be accepted, but on most of the large areas grass has only begun to grow.

Blasko said, "Those students faithful enough to walk would be appreciated."

Dean Warren P. McGuirk has accepted the North parking lot off North Hadley Road," said Blasko, "the situation will be eased."

"As of now," he continued, "we can park people in areas around the perimeter of the access road. These areas, especially off Amity Street, are soft now, and if it rains it will be very muddy."

"The only parking on the inside of the access road is a reserved parking lot for VIP parking and the north lot," Blasko stated.

"Any other parking on any of the unaccepted fields would mean University acceptance of them," he added, "and we will tow all offenders away immediately."

"If the University should accept these fields before they are ready," said Blasko, "they will have to pay for costs of reconstruction if they should be damaged."

Moving on to other campus parking problems the Chief said, "Our biggest problem now is student chiseling, by parking in lots other than those to which they have been assigned."

"The lot in front of Curry Hicks, for faculty and staff, and the South lot are the areas where this problem is most prominent," said Red.

"We've tried to get people as close to their buildings as possible," he added.

When asked about dorm parking he said the situation is worsening because more work permits, allowing students to have cars, keep coming through.

"The extra cars we have on the Hill and in the Orchard Complex will be forced to park in the field behind Van Meter. Granted, when the bad weather comes, access to this area will be poor, but it's the best we can do," he remarked.

"Tell the people parking in lot S that if they park on the inside of the posted signs in the directions of the arrows they need not be worried about being towed," said Blasko.

Commenting on the future, Red said that the Southwest Complex student will really have a long haul from the proposed lot near Alumni Stadium to their dorms at the beginning of new school years.

In addition he said that when the new Administration building is built we will lose the Curry lot, but should make up for some of the loss with the new lot being built near the old Alumni Field.

With a couple of parting shots Red concluded, "We've given about 750 tickets this year and know towing is bitter, but it's the only way to get results."

College Chaplain Reports On Sex

Frederick, Md. (I.P.)—Reporting on a one day seminar, "Sex Mores and Morality on the Campus," held at Johns Hopkins University, Chaplain James A. Smith, Jr., of Hood College, disclosed that the topic was much too broad for one day, and the seminar did tend to be inconclusive.

"The other resource person for the seminar was Dr. William Hamilton, professor of Christian theology and ethics at Colgate-Rochester Divinity School. Dr. Hamilton pointed out that sexual relationship by its very nature is a relationship of commitment and involvement and that, therefore, sex without commitment is truncated, superficial, and ultimately unsatisfying.

"Correlated with sexual promiscuity are the disappearance of guilt, the coming to the fore of normlessness or anomie, and the separation of sexual expression from the 'self.' Dr. Hamilton also made the point that the modern middle-class family is no longer an effective means for educating young persons in the matter of sexual ethics.

"He felt that the universities and colleges could not be unconcerned about values and would have to assume more of the family function of sex education.

"In a more positive vein, Dr. Hamilton welcomed what he called the 'moral pluralism' which is now present in American society. While such pluralism removes any head-start which the professional anti-Puritan might have, Dr. Hamilton seemed to feel that a responsible sexual ethic had a better chance of a fair hearing now than might have been true in the immediate past."

In an effort to arrive at a Christian sexual ethic, Dr. Smith's report to the undergraduates concluded, "Dr. Hamilton felt that a new legalism or 'post-Puritan moralism' would be ineffective and that an adequate ethic of personal sexual responsibility should be developed with reference only to 'obedience to Christ.'"

Calif. College To Have Co-ed Dorm

Los Angeles, Calif.—(I.P.)—The new master plan for Occidental College, designed by Pereira and Associates, includes a co-ed dorm scheduled for occupancy by the fall of 1966. The campus site will be occupied by "cluster residences" rather than the traditional dorm.

The cluster residence will house units of 16 students, in eight rooms around a lounge and bath. The master plan utilizes the conception of academic centers as the logical fulfillment of the liberal arts college.

The "cluster residence" is, in effect, a revival of the Oxford tradition with each cluster of students having similar and compatible interests. Conceivably, units could be made up of advanced language students, and the intimacy would provide a more consistent atmosphere for the informal exchange of ideas which is the basic concept of residence living.

Designed for 150 students, the dorm will be about sixty per cent men and forty per cent women. The cluster units will be connected to a central lounge serving both men and women. In fall 1966, when it will be opened for residence, the dorm will probably be limited to upperclass students with major interests in language.

Although dorms are presently unfilled, the Men's Residence

Council is re-evaluating the present requirements for off-campus living. The result will probably be a return to the policy stated in the catalogue of total residence of all freshman and sophomore men. In the past few years, the Deans have been forced to make exceptions because of the overflow student residency.

The new dorm will be the prototype for the future academic centers to be built on College Hill, presently undeveloped. In addition to the living quarters, the new units will contain seminar rooms.

OPEN MEETING LAW

State Rep. Philip K. Kimball of Springfield informed the Collegian recently that his bill filed July 27, to make public the voting sessions of state agencies covered by the open meeting law such as the University of Massachusetts Trustees has not been acted upon yet. "It appears," the legislator wrote, "that this bill will not be admitted for this session."

Kimball promised to "fight for the passage of this legislation as soon as the legislature convenes for the 1966 session."

The bill had been introduced in July after the Trustees of the University first chose Worcester as the site for the Medical School in a secret ballot. Attorney General Edward Brooke in accordance with Gov. Volpe's request ruled that the secret ballot as taken was valid.

Jorge Bolet Opens '65 Concert Series

Jorge Bolet, internationally acclaimed Cuban-American pianist, will open this season's University of Massachusetts Concert Association series.

Bolet will appear in the Student Union Sept. 29, at 8 p.m. to present a program of works by Schubert, Franck, and Liszt.

On the concert stage, as a recitalist and as a soloist with an orchestra, he has won plaudits throughout North and South America, Western Europe, the Far East, and even behind the Iron Curtain where he performed in 1961.

Bolet has played with several major symphonies, including those of New York, Philadelphia, Boston, and Chicago. After several seasons with the National he was signed to a long-term Symphony in Washington, D.C., contract with them.

Jorge Bolet, (pronounced George Bow-let), was born in Havana, Cuba, and began serious study of the piano at the age of five under the direction of his sister Maria. At nine he played his first public recital.

At ten he appeared as a soloist with the Havana Sinfonica. A scholarship brought him to the United States where he studied under David Saperton at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. After graduation he began a concert tour of Europe.

At the outbreak of World War II, Bolet joined the Cuban Army and received the Order of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, Cuba's highest decoration. Later he enlisted in the United States Army, became an American citizen, and was recommissioned a lieutenant.

Other UM Concert Association programs this season will include appearances by Tom Krause, Finnish baritone, on Oct. 26, 1965; The New York Pro Musica on Nov. 22, 1965; The Paganini String Quartet on Jan. 11, 1966; Charles Treger, American violinist, on Feb. 15, 1966; The Vienna Octet on Mar. 10, 1966; Music from Marlboro Festival, on Apr. 25, 1966; and the Robert Shaw Chorale on May 5, 1966.

German Print Exhibit Presently In Amherst

"One of an art gallery's first functions must be educational," states Mrs. Dagmar Reutlinger, director of Arts Intempo, the new gallery on Amity Street in Amherst.

Opened on September 7, the gallery is currently showing "New Directions in German Graphics." On Oct. 15 "Contemporary Prize-winning American Printmakers" will open.

Mrs. Reutlinger, most recently from Harvard, has wanted to establish a place like Arts Intempo in an area like Amherst for a while. Although she feels it is too early to tell if the gallery is a success, many of the prints have been sold and about forty or fifty people a day come in to see the exhibit.

The exhibit is made of original prints which are defined by the Print Council of America as being "An original work of art," the general requirements of which are:

- The artist alone has created the master image on or upon the plate, stone, wood block or other material for the purpose of creating a print.

- the print is made from the said material by the artist or pursuant to this directions.

- the finished print is approved by the artist.

The print is now becoming more and more popular as an art form; it provides a method of transmitting art as does almost no other form, and also ceases false reproduction of originals and misrepresentation of work.

New York Schools Again Seek Teachers In Mass.

With the cooperation of colleges in the Boston area New York City's public schools will seek prospective teachers among Massachusetts residents this fall.

Continuing efforts to recruit non-New Yorkers for the public school teaching staff, the New York Board of Examiners will hold an open competitive examination in Boston on Thursday, November 11, for teachers of common branches (grades 1 through 6) and for teachers of early childhood classes (kindergarten through grade 3). Applications must be filed not later than Friday, October 8.

Successful applicants may expect appointment for the academic year beginning in September, 1966.

Applicants for the examinations in Boston may apply for either test, but not for both, because of the difficulty in setting up administrative procedures at an out-of-town location.

The written test to be held on November 11 will be for either license.

Applicants should submit the required application form to the Board of Examiners, Room 422, 110 Livingston Street, Brooklyn, New York 11201, before Friday, Oct. 8, together with a fee of $5 for each examination. The forms are obtainable from Miss Gertrude E. Unser's office, 110 Livingston Street, Brooklyn, New York 11201, or from the cooperating colleges in the Boston area. Further information may be obtained from this office.

The regular license requirements call for a baccalaureate degree to include or be supplemented by 36 hours in appropriate education courses. Of these 36 semester hours in education, 12 must be in student teaching unless applicants have had two years of teaching experience.

Annual increments will provide a maximum of $11,950 by October 1, 1966 for those with advanced education and specialization in a subject area.

UMass Seen As Attraction For New Industry in Amherst

(Springfield Union)

AMHERST—The basic assets needed to attract industry to Amherst already are present, but a great deal of work must be done before they can be taken advantage of, William Sugrue, deputy commissioner of the division of economic development of the state Department of Commerce told the Chamber of Commerce Tuesday night.

..... No Developed Sites ..... To attract the type of industry the town is interested in, research and development industry, Sugrue said, "You have to have two items. You have one, schools and universities which are very important to industry today. The second, developed sites, you don't have."

Sugrue, at the invitation of the chamber, toured the city Tuesday afternoon viewing possible locations for industries. He said a lot of work would have to be done in developing the sites before they could be sold to industries.

Cost Studies
Mitchell Ziencina, also of Department of Commerce, told the chamber the areas are not graded, utilities, sewerage and drainage are not readily available, and access roads must be readied.

Cost studies should be made for installation of these necessary facilities, test borings taken, and the cost per acre figured to see if the sites the chamber has in mind are feasible, he added.

Ziencina noted commercial areas in the town are limited, and if business is to be expanded, more area will have to be provided. He said the planners should be careful not to get in the way of the expanding University of Massachusetts.

Both men said when industries decide to move, they want to do it immediately, and any city or town which hopes to attract them must be ready.

Sugrue dwelled on the University and Amherst College as the town's biggest selling points. He said more should be made of UMass by the town and it should be brought to the attention of the whole country.

The state is generally geared towards research and development industry, he said, and these demand education.

Cambridge Center

He told the chamber the construction and completion of the NASA Center in Cambridge will mean a tremendous growth in industry of this kind hopefully in the state, since 85 percent of its work will be "farmed out."

UMass, he said, would cooperate with the town, because the presence of such operations helps attract the best men in the sciences who desire to be in close contact with them even though they devote most of their time to teaching.

Money for UMass

(Reprinted from Daily News)

The House, after some debate Monday, passed a $64,965,000, record-high bond issue program for institutional construction. The capital outlay bill was increased by nearly $3 million in floor amendments.

House Ways and Means Committee member William H. Finnegan, D-Everett added $500,000 for improvements and additions to the power plant at the University of Massachusetts and another $500,000 for plans for a classroom building at the Boston State Hospital.

Rep. Thomas Newth, R-Swampscott, moved rejection, lost a 43-21 standing vote and was unable to obtain a roll call vote. The bill gained passage and went to the Senate on a 48-22 vote.

"You've got the resources here, and they are lying dormant, and they should be utilized. Brainpower is what these industries want," he declared.

Vast Opportunities

"If we don't develop these industries and keep them interested, we're going to lose them just like we lost the textile industry," he warned the chamber.

Sugrue painted a picture of vast opportunities unfolding under the provisions of the Economic Opportunity Act.

It, he said, sponsors a program whereby teachers at Boston University may go into the field to help small business experiencing trouble. Why not the same thing for UMass, he queried, noting this would certainly be an attraction for industry.

Closer Cooperation

Other possibilities for the burgeoning school, and the town, include cooperation between UMass and the Department of Commerce and a closer cooperation between the school and the town to their common good.

But, both he and his colleague warned, the town only will attract industry if it shows it is truly interested by being prepared for it.

Sports Information Aids Publicity

by Tom Fitzgerald

A secluded office in a corner of the Boyden Athletic Building houses the desks of perhaps the two most knowledgeable people in the field of UMass athletics.

Mr. Richard Page and Mr. Richard Bresciani hold the positions of Director and Assistant Director of the Sports Information Bureau. Their foremost duty is to accumulate and dispense to the news media information about the various varsity and freshmen teams that the University sponsors.

A graduate of Springfield College, Mr. Page served as sports publicist there for eight years before coming to the University in 1958. Mr. Bresciani, a UMass alumnus who once served as sports editor of the Collegian and broadcasted Redmen games on WMUA, became the school's first full-time assistant S. I. director in 1960.

Says Mr. Bresciani, "We compile rosters, statistics, records, and schedules to distribute to the press, radio and television. We're in charge of mailing brochures for the major sports as well as pictures of all the players."

"A few times each season, we send out material on individual athletes to their home town papers and to the wire services. We also try to act as liaison between the athletic department and organizations like the Collegian and WMUA. We want to help people from these organizations in any way we can to obtain accurate information."

An additional responsibility in their capable hands is the accommodation of writers and radio-T.V. personnel in "the best facilities we can provide," one of those facilities being the deluxe 140 foot press box at Alumni Stadium.

Public relations is another field that Page and Bresciani must concern themselves with, since they are often called upon to speak at luncheons and press conferences in Western Mass. and in Boston. On occasion, they are asked to give some halftime remarks on broadcasts of UMass games.

Soccer!

by Fran Larkin

The Redmen Soccer team, which finished the 1964 season winning its last four games, faces having the streak snapped early this fall. Only five lettermen have returned from last year's 5-4-1 squad—senior captain and fullback Ray Yando; Larry Martin, junior goalie, who gave up less than two goals a game last year; Aba Ayanaba, a junior who will fill one of the wing slots; Mike Russo, a junior at one of the insides, and Bill Burgess, a senior forward.

All three halfback positions will be occupied by sophomores—Phil Bozenhard, Bill Allan, and Dick Hale. Other sophomore starters are Jerry Celletti, Marty Smith, inside, and Gary Gasperack, forward.

With six sophomores in the starting lineup, Coach Larry Briggs team will play its first game Saturday at 1:30 at the lower soccer field against Coast Guard. While last year was the squad's first winning season in ten years, Coach Briggs is employing an offense and defense that he used only occasionally last year. Under this system, there will be only one fullback but two forwards instead of the one center forward. The wings and forwards will dominate the offense, while the two insides will drop back and play more of a midfield position.

Tomorrow's game is a warm-up for the first year of Yankee Conference soccer competition. With the exception of Maine, all other teams have had squads. Connecticut figures to be the team to beat, while Maine, in its first year of existence, should find the going rough.

Scene taken in Wednesday night's intramural action. The fraternities and dorms kicked off most of the action with a full slate of independent league action scheduled for next week.

BECKER REPLACES MORIN

Redmen Open New Stadium Against A.I.C. Tomorrow

by Mike Gould

If ever there were a reason for Aces to be high, the A.I.C. football team has the motives to be greatly inspired in its game at UMass Saturday.

Ever since Redmen fans discovered that the Aces were to be their team's opposition in the opener at beautiful new Alumni Stadium, they have belittled the boys from Springfield. A.I.C. has taken such verbal degradations as "Patsy," "Pushover," and "Schedule Filler," both from the press and from the mouths of the all-knowing football fans.

In the minds of most, if not all gridiron connoisseurs, a defeat of UMass by A.I.C. would be a miracle of the most high. If the Aces score a touchdown, it will be through an act of God. A three yard advance by an A.I.C. runner could only be caused by a following hurricane.

IF OUR COUSINS from Springfield need any more incentive for this week's game, they need only check the score of the last UMass-A.I.C. game, played two years ago at old Alumni Field. The Aces were thoroughly whipped that day, 42-0, the score being held down by inclement weather, an understanding and kind Vic Fusia, whose substitutes played much of the game.

If ever a team had nothing to lose and everything to gain, so do the Aces. The Redmen are expected to produce many a marked deck as they scalp the Aces before a partisan home crowd. In fact, any A.I.C. player escaping from Alumni Field with the semblance of a head on his shoulders, will be honored with a Saturday evening feast at the New Dining Commons.

Chief Redmen head-hunter will be Soph quarterback Greg Landry, who did a fine job against Maine. His backfield associates will be the relatively inexperienced trio of Don Durkin, Bob Detore and Dick Benoit.

AL BECKER has the distinction of ousting All-American Milt Morin from a starting end position as Fusia shakes up his club in search of the right combination. The remainder of the offensive line consists of tackles Jim Mitchell and Bill Connor, guards Larry Spidle and Bob Santucci, center Dan Harrigan or Don Rana, and end Bob Meers.

The Redmen defensive unit is led by Bernie Dallas and Dave Giala, whose clutch interceptions saved a lot of face at Maine.

The Aces, coached by Gay Salvucci, are led by quarterback John Sullivan and flashy halfback Howard Shortsleeve. Redmen linemen will be happy to hear that the A.I.C. line averages over 200 pounds. It will be recalled that Redmen linemen had their problems with Maine's light, lethal line last week at Orono. Coach Salvucci has no doubt put his team through triple practice sessions this past week in an effort to present the Redmen with a lighter, more formidable line.

The Redmen clearly outmatch the Aces on paper, but do not feel sorry for A.I.C. Rather shed a tear for Tulane which plays Alabama Saturday.

Intramural Report

by David James

The intramural football season kicked off Wednesday night with a full slate of thirteen games. The dorm games were marked by close, exciting contests, indicative of the high spirit of competition displayed this year. Although the frat games generally followed form, there were some impressive individual efforts.

In probably the most thrilling game of the night, the Oaks beat the Hickories 7-6 by coming from behind with an intercepted pass for a touchdown by O'Connell after the Hickories had a TD called back. The game ended as a tie but the Oaks were awarded the win because they had more first downs. Another seat squirmer saw the Hoovers, led by Rick Curwin's 9 completions in 16 attempts and Mike Shears' 2 TD's, edge the Pines 20-19. Mike Antonio threw 3 TD's for the losers.

In other dorm action the Hicks overcame the strong passing of Dobson (11-20) with a 14 point second half to win 20-6. The Maples topped the Hi-Lo's 7-0 on a TD by Eaton.

Bill Cleary chucked a record-tying 7 TD's, four of which were received by all-star Jim Neary as KS pummeled hapless PMD 44-0. TC scored all its points in a second-half comeback to tip TEP 12-6 despite Ross Piken's fine passing (14-30).

After a scoreless first half, LCA rode the strong arm of Jim Donahue (12-19) and the receiving of Jeff Larson to down PSD 20-7. BKP destroyed PSK 50-6 as Larkin completed 13 of 18 for 5 TD's. Garbutt's accurate passing (16-23) led TKE to a close 18-12 verdict over AEP. ASP easily beat ATG 37-6 as Oldach threw 4 TD's.

Rounding out the fraternity action SPE clobbered an inexperienced SAM team 39-0. ZN won over QTV 6-0 as Davis scored the lone TD. In the lone independent game, Harvey Shults threw 3 TD's as the Banchees held off a late College St. A.C. rally to win 20-14.

End Allen Becker will start in place of All-American Milt Morin.

UMass, 41-0

Redmen Swamp A. I. C.

by Mike Gould,
Sports Staff

Sophomore quarterback sensation Greg Landry led UMass to a 41-0 rout of American International College Saturday in the first game played at new Alumni Stadium.

Landry scored two touchdowns by hoof and contributed two scores on long passes to Milt Morin, as the Redmen gained their initial win of the 1965 campaign.

UMass wasted little time in showing their superiority over the Aces. In the first three minutes of the opening quarter, Landry rolled to his right, saw his receivers covered and followed a Redmen war party 57 yards for the first score of the game. Morin followed with his first of five extra points.

A minute or so later, UMass blocked an AIC punt at the visitors' 33 yard line. On first down Landry floated an aerial to big Milt, and without having made a first down, the Redmen led 13-0.

The first period pattern continued as Dave Giarla returned a punt to the AIC 25. Landry then legged it to the five and eventually sneaked in from the one. Morin's kick made it 20-0.

A 23-yard Landry strike to Bob Meers set the stage for Don Durkin to score from 11 yards out as the first quarter ended with the score a not too shocking 27-0.

Steve Trbovich proved an able replacement for Landry in the second quarter. The senior sign-

Being an undergraduate at a growing state university is a unique experience, to say the least. Living in such a society, one quickly learns that his success in college depends to a great degree upon the extent to which he can adjust to a university life. Having been through the trials and frustrations customarily associated with the freshman year at the University, I feel that it is my solemn duty to offer a few well-chosen words of advice to incoming freshmen.

First of all, to those who have the mistaken attitude that college is primarily a place of study, with everything else occupying a secondary place, forget it.

Your main objective, of course, should be to stay in, so it is wise to become acquainted early in the year with the University rules regarding the minimum freshman average required to remain at the University. Study a little, of course, but the bulk of your efforts on such a socially orientated campus should naturally be towards the acquisition and maintenance of a full social life.

Academically, one can always get by, with the many aids offered to students in the form of trots, back exams, etc. If need be, ONE CAN ALWAYS "BROWN UP" the professors (there are various ways of doing this) for the desired grade. If all else fails, and the student must resort to studying (horror!), there are a great variety of "all-night pills" available for a small fee which help to keep

UM May Receive $25,000 Grant

President Johnson's new "sleeper" law of the 89th Congress could bring added duties to the University's already complicated life. The federal law will soon involve New England's university communities in a highly organized ventures to help promote both state and regional economic growth.

The bill, provides $25,000 per year in federal funds for the first 3 years of the program to help in local studies conducted by universities and locally reached solutions to local problems. The college or agency selected by the Governor of the state would submit a plan describing the technological and economic situation in the state and propose a five year plan of rectifying the problems they disclose.

The bill received overwhelming support in both houses because of the relatively modest cost and with the initiative placed locally in the State rather than in the federal bureaucratic.

The scramble for the honor of conducting this survey is on among colleges and universities throughout the country. UMass hopes received a slot in the arm when Congressman Silvio O. Conte (R. Mass.) let his feeling be known. He felt the bill was a "simple, practical, feasible, efficient and effective means whereby we can make better, more effective use of what we have already bought and paid for."

Conte felt that expansive University facilities would provide an excellent launching pad for the program which he sees as a special help to small and independent businessmen who find it difficult to keep pace with new techniques and industrial innovations.

Jews Celebrate High Holidays This Week

Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur, the most holy of the Jewish holidays, are with us. Rosh Hashanah, Hebrew for "head of the year", signifies the beginning of the Jewish New Year.

Rosh Hashanah is celebrated for two days at the University, with services last night at 6:30 p.m. in the S.U. Ballroom and today and Tuesday morning, at 9:30 a.m., in the Senate Chambers.

The other Jewish high holy day, Yom Kippur, "The Day of Atonement", also occurs at the beginning of the New Year. According to Jewish history, this is the day God reviews one's actions of the past year and inscribes in his book the type of year one deserves. Thus, the Jew is supposed to fast and pray for forgiveness, so that God will allow him to have a good year.

The evening service for Yom Kippur, called Kol Nidrei or "All Vows" service, will be at 6:30 in the S.U. Ballroom, Oct. 5. This refers to the vows that Jews had been forced to make, throughout history, denouncing their own religion.

In this Kol Nidrei service, forgiveness is asked for those who had had to make these vows against Judaism. Yom Kippur services on Oct. 6, in the Senate Chambers, will begin at 9:30 a.m. and continue until sundown.

Absences from classes due to these holidays are excused and should be discussed with individual instructors. To obtain an excused absence from Physical Education courses, one must obtain a note from the Hillel Office of the Student Union.

In this time of Jewish holiness, The B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation would like to say to the University population: "L'Shana tova tikva tanu," "May you be inscribed for a good year."

Elections

Issue

Wednesday

The Collegian, in an attempt to sponsor a more responsible election procedure, is devoting a portion of the editorial page on Wednesday to the candidates in Thursday's Senate Elections.

Any candidate running for a Senate Seat may submit a letter to the Editor. All letters must pertain only to the author's qualifications and any reference to another candidate in the letter will exclude it from being printed. Candidates should include their experience in campus affairs and their plans for dealing with the responsibilities of a Student Senator.

Due to limited space, all letters must be under 15 typewritten lines typed at 60 space per line. The deadline for these letters is noon on Thursday, September 28th. No letters submitted after this time will be printed.

How To Succeed...

the student alert in the wee hours of the morning, and make it possible for him to sleep through the following day's classes. A WORD OF CAUTION REGARDING THE USE OF SUCH PILLS: be sure to time their effects accurately, or you may be reduced to an inert state while taking that all-important exam. Enough about academic life.

Socially, the attainment of success may be summed up in the words "without really trying", as the fundamental rule in all social contacts is to maintain a cool, independent, non-committal, even negative attitude. This is sometimes difficult for the girl. Results of a survey reveal that one of the main reasons that girls attend college is to find a mate. In the same survey, it was found that boys consider this almost negligible and even undesirable in their reasons for coming to college. Thus we have the root of the problem: Men's desire for independence versus women's desire for security.

With this in mind, here are a few suggestions for the boys that may prove helpful in achieving an independent attitude and avoiding some fatal mistakes.

FIRST AND FOREMOST, belong to an "in" group. This is most usually a fraternity, although other groups may serve as substitutes, such as Maroon Keys, Revelers, etc. Remember—status is everything when it comes to getting dates.

The second fundamental rule is this: Spend a sufficient

Men Cause More Damage Than Women

Thousands of dollars worth of damage are inflicted on student residence halls yearly by irresponsible and negligent individuals.

"Approximately 40% of all dormitory damage is paid for by students found accountable for the destruction," said John C. Wells, director of housing. "Remarkably enough," Wells continued, "only a little more than 15 per cent of the total damage is manifested in the women's residences."

"Presently," Wells stated, "the Student Personal Staff and the Treasurer's Office are considering instituting a program whereby corridor or house damage, unaccountable to responsible students, will be assessed among the members of the respective corridor or residence."

However, this policy is now only pending and will not be an immediate course of action.

CAESURA DEADLINE

Writers, poets, playwrights, artists and muses (corresponding Secretaries are discouraged) are needed desperately! Deadline for the fall issue of Caesura, the University literary magazine, is Friday, Oct. 8. Three times a year poems, sketches, photographs, plays, stories and like creative efforts of the graduate and undergraduate students are published.

Contributions may be left in the Caesura office in the Student Union at any time. If the author is reticent or hesitant to submit or merely wishes to examine more fully the nonexistent complications, stop in the office and be counseled (and cajoled into submission) by a (friendly) member of the Caesura Editorial Board.

News Editor Ellen Levine and Advertising Manager Stephen Gordon have announced that deadlines for Collegian material will be as follows:

News copy must be received by noon on Sunday, Tuesday or Thursday to be included in the next day's paper.

UMass Campus at Nantucket

by Sandra Faiman,
Feature Staff

At the UMass campus in the Pioneer Valley the thought of fog horns blowing to warn ships of fog is indeed remote. Yet, one segment of the UMass campus is located on an island off Cape Cod, and at this campus fog horns can be heard nearly every night. This is the UMass Nantucket Research Center located on ninety acres of land on the northern part of Nantucket Island.

The Nantucket Research Center was a gift to the University given by the late Stephen Peabody. This past summer the Nantucket Research Center housed the UMass Archaeological Field School run by the Anthropology Department. Prof. Ronald Spores, formerly of the Anthropology Department, accompanied by his family directed the field school, which was held during the first six week session of the UMass summer school.

TWELVE STUDENTS ATTENDED the archaeological field school, which was the first course to be given by the University at the Nantucket campus. The students, seven girls and five boys, lived in the large two-bedroom house, which also was the center for classes, meals, and a very successful open-house.

The course consisted in a two-fold program of instruction in archaeological techniques and methods, and also an extensive course in ethno-history of North America. Both parts were taught primarily by Dr. Spores.

Several lectures were taught by visiting specialists, including one on identification of colonial ceramic types taught by a Harvard professor, and a series of lectures on various types of stone artifacts. In the evenings formal classes were held for two hours. The students spent five and one-half days per week digging three different sites on the island.

The two of the site, were Indian sites dated as early as 500 B.C. and a colonial site originally believed to have dated to the late 17th century, but at which was found a coin dated 1836.

Dr. Spores and the students were assisted by the Nantucket Archaeological Society in choosing sites to dig. The sites were chosen on the basis of historical data, natural land contours, and any surface finds which may have been gathered in the area.

AT THE END OF THE course each student wrote an extensive detailed analysis of all of the digging which he had done. The data is now being compiled by Dr. Spores and the Nantucket Archaeological Society for possible publication in the Massachusetts Archaeological Society Journal.

amount of time at the Hatch; that is, make an appearance at least once a day, regardless of what pressing duties interfere. Also, it is helpful to be there when the Hatch is crowded, to insure being seen by everyone.

Next, a few hints on dating behavior.

- Never call a girl for a weekend date before Thursday.
- Do not date a girl more than a few times, as she may begin to get serious, or what's worse, Possessive.
- After kissing your date goodnight, always say, "May I call you sometime?" or something equivalent, as this is customary and involves no obligation on your part.

- Dump on your date at every possible moment, as it is important that she be reminded of your superiority.

- Never thank her for a wonderful evening or give any indication that you had a great time, even if you did, as she may think you're interested in her.

- Last, remember to "play the role" at all times and at all costs—be cool, nonchalant, extremely independent.

Next, here are a few reminders to unsuspecting females.

- It is helpful to belong to a sorority, but no absolutely necessary, nor nearly as essential as a fraternity is to a boy.

- Girls should also spend a sufficient amount of time at the Hatch. This is the best way to be seen by those whom you want to be seen by, because anybody who is anybody will be there.

In regard to dating behavior, the fundamental rule is this: develop a "don't care" attitude.

- Be cool.
- Give the impression that nothing and no one can possibly bother you.

- Never let it be known that you are snowed.

- Generally speaking, do not expect to date a boy more than once, particularly if he is a fraternity man.

- Never look at him with stars in your eyes as he passionately kisses you goodnight as if waiting for him to ask you out again.

Remember—he will bolt at the first sign of interest on your part, and instead of asking you out, will probably say something like, "See you around." If by some slight miracle you should date a boy more than once, perhaps even a few times, do not become possessive or demanding or jealous. This is very difficult, as in such a situation, almost any action on your part could be interpreted as possessive, demanding, or jealous.

- Do not express disapproval or surprise at the occasional "horror shows" that you may be subjected to. These occur most frequently at fraternity parties, but can happen anywhere. It must be remembered, however, that they are an accepted part of student life, and should be treated as such.

- Acquire a taste for beer; boys always appreciate a cheap date.

This, then, oh naive freshman, is the key to your success at the University, without really trying. Follow it wisely.

An End to Apathy?

Again the UMass students showed the tremendous amount of spirit which they really do possess. The attendance at last Saturday's football game was easily enough to show anyone how much the students here really to care about their school.

In a stadium which could easily make the largest crowd look small the students turned out in such force that some sections were packed tight. Special mention should be made of the highly spirited freshmen, who it looks like will carry on UMass tradition for a long time.

There were very few who did not cheer for our youngest class when the beanies went flying as the first touchdown was scored in the new Alumni Stadium. It will be a moment they will long remember.

Perhaps the new stadium itself has made the greatest contribution to spirit at the University. With its spacious seating and fantastic design, which permits a terrific view from anywhere in the student section, it has given the student body the feeling that "that is it". We have finally gone "Big Time". We can now be proud of our school.

There is one characteristic of spirit in a University which is very rare to most things. That is, it cannot be confined to one certain area. It must spread throughout the school, both in the academic and extra-curricular areas. It looks like UMass is really changing. Let's hope so.

Sports for the Liking

There is one office of the university that has been conducting a program, the activities of which have become such an integral part of college life that they are taken completely for granted. Rarely, outside of the sports page, is mention made of Intramurals; yet, this department, under the excellent guidance of Mr. Chet Gladchuck and his fine staff, has made an indispensable contribution to student welfare.

It is without doubt a safe guess to estimate that nearly every male student within his four years a UMass has at sometime or other taken part in the intramural program. Conducting tournaments and leagues in all sports from tennis to lacrosse to bowling, it attracts more participants than any other extracurricular organization.

But more important than size alone is the spirit and enthusiasm it generates. The athletic field is the best possible outlet for the venting of the youthful tensions that build up as a result of studies and other anxieties. While female readers may not appreciate the importance of intramurals, every male student knows and remembers the pleasure of making contact in a football game or scoring two points in a basketball game. The fascination of planning, practicing and playing together with a group of friends to defeat another team is a welcome relief from the normal routine of classes and assignments.

For those of you who have never become active in intramurals there is only one suggestion. Take a walk some evening after supper down to the lower field below Boyden Gymnasium. If it's late enough and the lights are blazing, you might imagine that there is a varsity football game going on. But a closer look will reveal that it is instead hundreds of young men, enjoying themselves in the healthy atmosphere of friendly competition.

As I See It

Yours for the Asking

Editor's Note: The author of this column Mr. Georgios Pan Piperopoulos, is a graduate exchange student from Greece. He has served since 1960 as the U. S. correspondent for the Drasis Press Organization in Greece, and last year was an editor with the Atlantic Greek Daily in New York. He has been invited by the Editorial Chairman of the Collegian to write a series of guest editorials. This is the third installment of his first article.

I have sat in many such social occasions along with other fellow foreign students. And many a time I sensed a subtle (sometimes overt) tone of superiority and contempt on the part of guests when discussing their motherlands in comparison to America. For most European students who can boast of a culture dating back to tens of centuries, such a feeling may be somewhat justified although it is in poor taste of social etiquette. It is my opinion though, that this should not be misunderstood by the hosts. Expression of such attitudes, I think, stems not exclusively from a genuine feeling of superiority (and after all everybody is entitled to hold values), but rather from a defensive state of mind, caused by the uncertainty of one's self perspective, and the shallow knowledge of the host society.

Criticism of the U.S. and the American people by foreign students centers around several contexts: the Academic, the social, the political and the ethical to mention just the major concerns.

Many of the criticisms against American Education at the University level seem to be grounded. A graduate student in Europe or in countries where European educational systems have been imposed in the process of colonialism, is afforded the opportunity to pursue the studies of his own interest, independently except for the occasional guidance offered by a special advisor.

Such a reality, however, becomes possible simply because the whole structure of European Elementary, High School and University education is much more thorough and complete than that of the U.S. It is unjust, then, to criticize graduate education in America by using one's own standards. Probably, and this may sound ironical, one should condemn the whole educational structure of the U.S. But then again, every self respecting European or African or Asian knows—or should know—that Education in our countries is all but democratic and a very small, and privileged group from all those capable of acquiring a Higher education are afforded the possibility to do so.

And besides, the facilities afforded a scholar or a scientist by most American Universities are such that one would not even dare dream of in other countries...

Within the social context there appears to be some justification for criticism. The family structure of the American society, the dating patterns of its youth, the various oppressions of minority groups, paradoxically supported by a puritan and democratic ideology provide the educated foreign student with grounds for a polemic.

But here again, if the Puerto-Ricans and the Negroes seem to "have it tough" in America, the Protestants are not much better off in Italy or Greece; the lower cases can't even dream of "equal rights" in India, and the Jews are all but granted "ease" in the Arab world. Discrimination and prejudice are, in my opinion, human qualities. But they cannot come into play and thus be exposed to criticism unless a group of people or a Nation, a homogenous whole is faced with a "minority" group...

Proposal Committee Set Up by S. W. A. P.

The Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, Mass. will be the scene of the annual Student Workshop on Activity Problems (SWAP) Oct. 22, 23 and 24. The purpose of the conference is to help alleviate problems obstructing the efficiency of major organizations on campus.

The SWAP executive committee has worked since January to plan the three-day week-end. The committee is advised by Dean William Barnard and Dr. David Porter and is under the chairmanship of Kip Johnson.

John Webster is treasurer and Marie Cappadona is secretary. In charge of organizing the major activities are Neil Sampson and Helen Cassoli. Bonnie Blake and Alan Bulotsky are handling the dormitories and Mary Ann McAdams and Mike Goldstein are working with sororities and fraternities respectively. Scott Freedland is in charge of publications and Anita Russo is handling publicity.

In order to achieve its purpose, the SWAP committee places special emphasis on the responsibility of the representatives to report on the suggestions from the conference. In addition, a new senate SWAP Proposal Committee has been established to work on the follow-up and to put innovations into effect.

AMONG OTHER changes in the general format of the workshop is the organization of the discussion groups. They are divided into the following categories: communications, service organizations, religious organizations, fine arts, classes, Greeks, and dormitories. It is hoped that this arrangement will be more profitable to all the groups involved.

In order to formalize the discussions and to work with greater efficiency, information packets with note books and pencils will be provided. Summary reports will be made by each group at the end of each conference.

Food Science Dept. Expands Seminars

People in the food service industry responsible for management of personnel and purchasing of food will have an opportunity this fall to attend two six-week seminars in those fields at three locations across the Commonwealth.

The continuing education-extension seminars are being co-sponsored by the University of Massachusetts department of food science and technology in cooperation with professional and commercial organizations in Massachusetts.

THE TWO SEMINARS of six sessions each will begin Monday, Oct. 4, 7 to 9 p.m., at three locations, interconnected by telephone. Personnel management will be taught Oct. 4 - Nov. 8, and food purchasing for the food service establishment Nov. 15 - Dec. 20.

The sessions on Monday evenings will be held simultaneously using tele-lectures at the University of Massachusetts-Boston; Essex County Agricultural and Technical Institute at Hathorne; and Western Massachusetts Electric Co. auditorium in West Springfield.

INSTRUCTORS WILL include UMass professors, industry experts, and government specialists, according to Dr. William B. Esselen, head of the department of food science and technology.

Dr. Donald Lundberg of the UMass restaurant and hotel management program, professor in charge of the seminars, said the sessions are being conducted as part of the University's cooperative extension service program to provide an opportunity for food service personnel to obtain continuing education specifically directed to their needs.

The registration fee of $25 for each seminar will include the cost of the program and necessary educational materials. People interested in applying for admission to either or both seminars may obtain further information by writing: Restaurant and Hotel Management Program, Chenoweth Laboratory, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Dick Devarney broke the career 2,000-yds. passing milestone in an 18-7 over Boston Univ., a team which has four of the six YanCon teams on their card this year.

Two league titles and a regional crown went a long way toward being settled at this early date. Kentucky overcame a Southeastern Conference threat Florida, the pick of many for in Mississippi by a 16-7 tally and the title, was beaten by the Mississippi State ground power 18-13 after holding a seven point edge at the half.

That leaves Kentucky and Mississippi State the favorites at this point as the teams to cause LSU the most trouble. The Bayou Bengals have yet to have a league encounter but are still odds on choices.

Georgia holds the lead now on the strength of a 24-10 win over Vanderbilt plus last week's Alabama upset. The Crimson Tide of Alabama handled Tulane another shutout this week 27-0 but will have to beat three tough teams if they are to repeat as champs.

Duke survived a fourth period scare against South Carolina before picking up their second win in the Atlantic Coast Conference. The Blue Devils held a 14-2 lead after three periods but the finale read 20-15.

Indiana featured an unbelievable passing show by Bob Griese in leading Purdue to a 25-12 win over Notre Dame that put the Boilermakers into the fifth spot in the nation and the top if the Midwest.

The upset of the week award went to Georgia last week with no contest, but five teams competed for the goat's horns this week.

The winner is Syracuse who got shut out on their own field 24-0 by Miami, 7-3 losers last week to Southern Methodist. Bob Biletnikoff, who throws as well as big brother Fred catches, passed for two scores but it was the Hurricanes rushing defense that won the game, causing a trio of fumbles and holding Floyd Little to 60 yards.

The overwhelming win by Texas coupled with Notre Dame's loss and Nebraska's 27-7 score over Air Force in a game that should have been considerable higher was enough to put the Longhorns into first place in the nation followed by the Cornhuskers, Arkansas, Louisiana State, Kentucky, Purdue, Michigan, a 10-7 victor over California, and Alabama, Mississippi State, Southern Cal, Baylor, West Virginia and Florida in the top 13.

Mills Birch edged out the Wheeler Trojans 13-12 as Digregorio's PAT provided the winning margin.

McDougall scored all his team's points in a defensive battle which saw the Mills Cherrys defeating the Brett Chestnuts 12-6.

TURNING to the independent fames, the Untouchables proved to be just that as they annihilated the Charlie Browns 50-6. Police completed 14 of 18 and Dick Pulsifer and Pete Bernard did the bulk of the receiving. The Courtesy Taxi club made its presence felt with a 32-12 win over the Buggers. Klaes was superior with 17 for 25 and 4 TD's.

Three quarterbacks combined for sixteen completions in 29 attempts as the Chem Club downed the UM Band 22-6. The Inn Keepers were victorious over the Land Architecture club 19-12 as Froman threw 2 TD's.

The dandy halftime show presented by the band and precisionettes was a tough act to follow. Landry hit Morin with a 59 yard touchdown throw at the outset of the third quarter to make it 41-0, but the remainder of the game gave the fans little to shout about.

Landry led all rushers with 89 yards in six carries. Phil Vandersea and Dick Lewis each averaged over five yards per carry in stellar performances.

Second string quarterback Trbovich, so impressive in his brief appearance, was injured while blocking on an end sweep and will be lost to the team or the remainder of the season. The loss of Trbovich places more weight on the already burdened shoulders of Landry.

Notre Dame Ousted From No. 1 Ranking

The college football season is still in the infant stage as of the past weekend, but already three of the conferences have gotten down to the business of determining a league champion. The rest of the football groups are working on their independent games with two of the conferences coming through their schedules in a breeze.

THE WEEK'S HONORS for independent play go to our own Yankee Conference with five winners in six games. Second place went to the Southwest with a 4-2 record that gives them the overall conference leadership in winning games.

The boys in Texas and suburbs won six of their eight games last week for an overall 10-4 mark. This week they had one league game that Texas won 33-7 over Texas Tech, the first of three hurdles facing the Longhorns in quest of another Cotton Bowl berth. Their remaining two obstacles are Arkansas and Baylor.

The Razorbacks of Arkansas pulled out a 20-12 win over Tulsa for their 14th straight even though it did take them two periods to find out their vaunted rushing defense didn't work with the same results against an air onslaught.

The Baylor Bears found that their air onslaught, behind the gun of Terry Southall, did work fine against the supposedly strong Washington defensive team. Baylor won 17-14. All three SWC leaders won on their own fields.

the Yankee Conference was the result of two upsets, one of major proportions, plus two strong teams that had rinky-dinks on their schedules.

Vermont beat out Massachusetts by one point as high scorer. The Cats killed Worcester Tech 42-0 at Burlington and the AIC Aces fell to the Redmen by one less point.

THE UPSETS were a 14-6 win by Rhode Island over Brown and a big one in Connecticut where the Huskies beat Yale

Intramural Report

by David James

Before the touch football season began several dormitory teams thought the Chadbourne Maroons could be had this year. However, in Thursday's 34-0 shellacking of what was supposed to be a strong Middlesex Braves team, the Maroons proved that they will be as tough as ever.

THE MAROONS unveiled a balanced attack with quarterback Chilson (13-18 with 4 TD's) equally dividing his targets amongst Stewart, Leary, Sears, and Aylward.

The Greenough Garfields coasted to a 24-12 win over the Chadbourne Eagles. Earl Richardson was impressive with 16 completions in 29 attempts, and 4 TD passes to Bill Thomas, who catching lead with nine recepassumed the intramural pass-

IN OTHER GAMES the passing combination of Tom Rossi (8-19 2 TD's) and John Thomas (5 receptions) proved to be too much for the Webster Rams as the Grayson Aces won 21-6.

The Webster Hawks took it on the chin from the Thatcher Redwoods 20-7 as Kagan and Larvey combined for thirteen receptions from the strong arm of Knight.

The Grayson Flaming A's easily caught 7 passes, 3 for TD's.

ROUNDING out the dorm action, the Plymouth Patriots topped the Berkshire Bengals 19-6. The Patriots' quarterback, Carter, had only four completions in fifteen attempts but three of

The Redmen Soccer team won its opening game of the '65 season by defeating the Coast Guard (2-0).

Goalie Larry Martin made twelve saves to turn in the shutout.

Shots came hot and heavy as the Coast Guard goalie was forced to make twenty-five saves in the game.

UNCLE SAM

Does He Want You?

Male students are reminded of the draft information panel tonight at 7:30 in Bartlett Auditorium with representatives of all military branches, the State Selective Service Director and the head of Placement and Financial Aid.

The panel is an attempt to answer questions concerning the new draft quotas and policies. A question period will follow the discussion. One draft official has pointed out "There is

by CFS

With the October and November draft calls the largest since the Korean War, the nation's draft boards are set to look at requests for student deferments with a more discerning eye.

The Selective Service System has no intention of abandoning deferments for students in colleges and universities but, under the tighter policy, draft boards will be picking up some deferred students who are not attending school full time or who are not making satisfactory progress in their classes.

A HIGH OFFICIAL suggested that as the quotas rise (or even if they stay at the present high level for some extended period of time) and the age of the draftee drops, boards probably will not be able to give deferments for longer than a year.

"This would cover a man in his senior year or probably could be extended in order to let a junior finish high school, but it probably would not let the 19 or 20 year-old sophomore finish college before being called for military duty," he said.

He said any students who received an order for induction while in school might be given a I-S classification that would allow him to finish that school year before reporting for duty.

The first thing likely to happen is that probationary or borderline students will lose their deferments as they did during the Korean War. This means draft boards could require a student to meet certain academic levels in order to retain his deferment.

THE GRADUATE STUDENTS' chances of completing his studies before service vary. The state director of Selective Service for Maryland said in a recent interview that graduate deferments were considered by local boards but that deferments were given after asking if the student's study were serving the national interest, health, or safety. The Maryland director, Brig. Gen. Henry C. Stanwood, said he felt the requirement could be interpreted to mean that science, math, and medical students were favored.

Just as there will be a tightening of student deferments, medical deferments will also be harder to come by.

If a man is called to take his physical, the chances are still better than even that he will be turned down. A report from the Army Surgeon General's office indicated that during 1964 only 47% of the 847,511 draftees were accepted.

Of the 53% that failed to qualify, 22.2% were for medical reasons; 16.2% for mental reasons; 11.4% had "limited training ability;" 1.5% had both medical and mental reasons for being rejected; and 1.7% were found to be "morally unfit".

"The criteria for medically determining 'combat fitness' have obviously changed with the changing techniques of warfare," the report said. In some ways, the present standards are more liberal than during WW II.

Still, medical deferments are going to be harder to get in the coming months. Gen. Hershey compares the situation to shopping for tomatoes. "When you go shopping for tomatoes and discover that there is a limited supply," the general says, "you have to buy some with spots if you're to get as many as you need."

THE EASIEST way to get drafted is to be in some sort of trouble with your local board. The highest draftable classification is reserved for those who the local board finds to be "delinquent" under the Selective Service Act. This may be a person who doesn't keep the board informed of his address or his status. The law says a registrant must furnish the board information on any change of status within 10 days. Now there is a new way to be in trouble with the board, and with the law.

Pres. Johnson signed a law Aug. 31 that makes it illegal for anyone to burn or destroy his draft card. Enacted by Congress to counteract student demonstrations that included a public burning and tearing up of draft cards as a protest to the war in Vietnam, the law provides for a $10,000 fine or five years in prison for anyone who destroys his Selective Service card.

COINCIDENTALLY, the new urgency over the draft came at a time when discussions were underway on the future of the draft. There was some pressure to do away with it all together but from experience, officials knew when the Selective Service Act had been allowed to lapse in 1947, the Army was unable to keep a force of 1.5 million men through enlistments.

A Presidential task force reported that by paying competitive salaries the Army could be nothing automatic about a student being drafted. Each case is considered on its own merits with the student's course of study, its importance to the national interest, and the student's scholastic ability."

The October draft call for Massachusetts has been set at 398. Men married before Aug. 27 and fathers will not be ordered for induction. The November draft call will be 1,018.

maintained on a voluntary basis.

During the summer, the Soviet Union announced that it had lowered its three-year service requirement to a year for all men who had completed college. The announcement said this would allow them to place college graduates in more useful jobs more quickly and would keep the Soviet army at a suitable peacetime level.

Fine Arts Council

A Brief Reprise

by Jim Foudy,
Senate Reporter

The University Fine Arts Council, investigated last year by the Faculty Senate, will continue as a Student Tax Fund Organization at least until Oct. 31.

Established by the Student Senate in 1960 with a budget of $38,000, the council came under fire from Faculty Senator Prof. John Hicks who recommended that the Fine Arts Council be put under the Faculty Senate with a 5:3 ratio of faculty to student members.

THE HICKS REPORT also called for a direct tax on students to support the council. Previously the council drew its funds from the Student Activities Tax Fund and had equal representation of faculty and students.

Despite a plea by Senate President Richard Dacey to prevent action pending an alternate proposal by the Student Senate, the Faculty Senate made provisions in its new constitution for a Fine Arts Council and, as President Dacey pointed out, assumed that the Senate would sign over the $38,000.

Dacey, feeling the action "un-

Soph Execs Plot Winter Carni '65

by Al Davis,
Staff Reporter

Sophomore Class President Robert Keough greeted 95 new executive councillors Monday night and announced his plans for the year which traditionally include the soph-frosh picnic and the Homecoming dance.

The meeting followed a general class meeting Sunday, which only 60 sophomores attended.

He also announced his idea for a John F. Kennedy Library benefit concert featuring the "Bach Boys" and explained the new sophomore representative body.

THE SOPH-FROSH picnic this Saturday after the football game will get a new twist this year; along with the usual hot dogs and soft drinks, the Class of '68 will present two bands at two separate, free dances.

The "Boss Tweeds" will provide the music in the afternoon, and the "Pandoras," an all-girl rock n' roll group from Simmons College will be featured that night.

THIS YEAR'S HOME-COMING Dance will star the "Barbarians" and "Barry and the Remains" in a discotheque atmosphere complete with go-go girls.

Keough explained that sophomore Winter Carni plans are still up in the air until certain problems can be solved.

The J.F.K. concert for Nov. 17 is also uncertain, but Keough said he is "optimistic" and expects to be sure of the Beach warranted and dangerous," presented a statement to the Faculty Senate which in effect refused the transfer of the funds.

"WE FEEL THAT any case involving S.A.T. Funds should be under student control or at least be equally represented," Dacey said.

At this point the Faculty Senate was cooperative. The appointment of five faculty to the council extended the life of the "old" Fine Arts Council until Oct. 31.

Dacey commented that by then "we should have some idea of what we want in a Fine Arts Council."

"We feel, as did Prof. Hicks, that in the coming years the fine arts program on campus will need revision, but if you're taxing students they should have at least equal representation."

"WE PRESENTED an ultimatum to the Faculty Senate and they in essence backed down," Dacey said, "... a substantial victory for the Student Senate."

The Fine Arts Council, which Dacey feels has "operated very successfully for the last five years," supervises Marching Band, Chorale, the Concert Association and runs the Fine Arts Festival in March.

Y. I.'s To Register Springfield Negroes

by Sandra Faiman,
Staff Reporter

During the past summer, Springfield, Mass. received national attention when racial disturbance erupted and Negroes charged local police of brutal treatment of persons arrested.

This fall the Negro community of Springfield, through the efforts of the local branch of C.O.R.E. (Congress of Racial Equality), is running two qualified candidates in the city elections. These candidates, Reverend Charles Cobb for Mayor, and Mr. Griffin for City Councilman, say they are attempting to gain a more equal representation for all Springfield citizens.

The Young Independents are participating in the campaign during the week-end of October 2-3. Students will be housed in Negroes' homes and canvass many neighborhoods of Springfield.

They will inform citizens of the candidates who are running, and also will urge people to vote at the November elections.

Since nearly half of the Negro voting population in Springfield has not before participated in elections, the students will attempt to reach these people and convince them of the importance of their national right of self-government.

The Young Independents request help in Springfield during the week-end. A meeting Thursday, Sept. 30, at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union is scheduled to organize the work. Students will leave for Springfield Friday afternoon or Saturday morning. Transportation and housing facilities will be provided.

Talent Search System Revealed By Student Union Official

by Richard Dancu,
Day Editor

A revolutionary new system to help UMass student organizations find interested people has been developed by Mr. Harold Watts, Student Union Assistant Coordinator of Student Activities and Simon Keochakian of Counseling and Guidance, and is now available to interested activities.

The system consists of IBM lists of freshmen divided into different interests and tells whether they were in these activities and wish to continue, wish not to continue or want to start working in these activities.

Interested activities will have immediate access to these lists in Mr. Watts office in the SU. Watts says he hopes that all activities will utilize them.

Most of the activity lists have more than 500 freshmen in them and Watts says "this shows that freshmen are interested, but they need to be contacted."

He also said that organizations are the apathetic people if they don't go out and contact these interested freshmen.

The system assembled information taken from cards freshmen filled out this summer dealing with their interests.

Answers to the 54 questions were programmed on IBM cards and run through the University computer. The result was 330 feet of names and student numbers in three columns of the three types of response.

The lengthy lists, when counted reveal that there are many people interested in many campus activities who never take an active part. More than 850 freshmen, for instance indicated a desire to do newspaper work, and at present less than 50 are working on the Collegian.

Watts said that as far as he knows, this is the first time that a system like this has been used anywhere. He will speak on it at the International Association of College Unions convention in New Orleans next March.

Music to Dine By Proposed at Commons

by Jim Foudy

Since the opening of the South Commons last year, there have been several attempts to provide evening mealtime entertainment.

Folk singers and rock 'n roll groups have been featured on several occasions with audience reaction ranging from apathy to destructive enthusiasm.

Presently background music is supplied by tape recordings but it has been suggested that this type of "electronic atmosphere" could still be improved upon.

Recently a newly formed quartet suggested to Mr. John Martin, Manager of Boarding Hall, Dining Commons, the possibility of providing nightly music free of charge.

Mr. Martin emphasized, however, that the opinion of the regular South Commons patrons should first be solicited.

The band, jazz oriented and consisting of four professional musicians, is now seeking the opinions of diners on the possibility of a trial run.

The band members are: Piano, Peter Fink; Cornet, Gary Anderberg; Bass, Ron Sostek; Drums, Dale Spencer.

Any opinions, suggestions or support of this proposal would be greatly appreciated by the quartet.

Choral Music

New Groups Formed

Dr. Richard duBois, the new director of Choral Music in the music department has initiated two new groups on campus: the University Chorus, and The Madrigal Singers.

The Chorus is for all students, "... who can carry a tune," says Dr. duBois. He aims for a large group able to perform oratorio work. The group already has 100 members. Concerts are planned for this winter and next spring.

The Madrigal Singers developed from a group of students who met together last spring for the purpose of singing madrigals and who approached Dr. du Bois this fall with this idea. This group aims to perform madrigals, and also to do some anti-phonial singing with the Chorus and the Chorale.

Chorale has about 59 members. This group, highly qualified musically, performers technically difficult work, specializing in a cappella material. In previous years the Chorale has given an annual Christmas concert and a Spring concert.

This year's plans include these two concerts, plus an informal pre-concert performance, off-campus concerts and a Spring tour.

The Chorale meets 4 & 5 hours a week, Tuesdays and Thursdays 4:40 to 6:40 and Monday evening, 6:45 to 9:15. The Chorus meets 2 to 5 hours a week, Tuesday nights, 6:30 to 9:00.

Holyoke Bombers Lose By Same Score Redmen Win

by Al Rice

Redmen football fans got a taste Saturday of what it was like on the other side of Alumni Stadium in the afternoon. It was fine to have your team win 41-0, but a lot of them wanted to make a complete day of it and take in the Holyoke Bombers game that night to see if Whelchel, Schroeder, and Company could do as well. They didn't. The score was the same 41-0 but with the New Bedford Sweepers on top.

The New Bedford front five on defense averaged about 260 pounds per man and all of them spent most of the night in the Holyoke backfield. The Sweepers, ACFL Northern Division leaders, were just as strong on offense with an attack that one minute featured Jetstream Smith, once of the Oakland Raiders, churning through the middle and Lee Woltman sweeping the ends. Charlie Green and Don Allard were throwing long bombs for touchdowns.

Jay Lusteg opened the scoring with a field goal (the first three of his 13 points) and Smith capped a 57 yard drive a few minutes later by going seven yards around his right end for a touchdown. The drive took 11 plays with the longest gainer an Allard to Rico Sapienza pass for 15 yards.

Sapienza scored from Allard on a ten yard reception in the second period after Whelchel had been intercepted on his own 17. The Sweepers then cooled off for the rest of the period.

A field goal and 35 yard touchdown pass from Charlie Green, Little All-American last year at Wittenberg, to Gary Farina added ten third period points. On the play preceding the touchdown Farina reached out and grabbed a Green pass at the goal line but dropped it as he fell into the end zone. Farina had been wide open so Green called the play again and it was six more on the board.

Jack Schroeder went in on the next series of plays for Holyoke and threw four completions in five attempts, including two to Doc Holiday and two to Mel Meeks but the drive ended when Meeks fumbled a lateral from Holiday.

New Bedford's first play following the recovery went 11 yards down to the Holyoke 33 from where Green called his favorite pass play: six more points for Farina to make the score 34-0 with Lusteg's kick.

The Bombers then had their only real threat of the night. A Schroeder pass to Holiday following the kick return went 46 yards down to the 23 and 11 more yards on a penalty put the Bombers in the Sweepers front yard. Hopes were shattered when Meeks was cut down for a six yard loss and then Herman Murphy intercepted in the end zone to end the rally. An 82 yard TD pass seconds later finalized the 41-0 score. Steve Albrecht pulled in the reception.

Harriers Set For Season Opener

Coach Footrick is currently putting his cross country team through intensive workouts to prepare for the upcoming season. The team has been training on and around campus, often going up into the hills of Pelham and Shutesbury. The amiable coach has been working the team harder than usual this year, possibly because he is thinking of resigning soon and would like to regain the Yankee Conference crown once more before he steps down. UMass teams have finished second the last two years.

The graduation of last year's co-captains Tom Panke and Bob Ramsay will leave shoes that will be hard to fill. Also hurting the team is the failure of co-captain elect Bob Larson to come out for the squad.

On the bright side last year's sophomores Terry Carpenter and Steve St. Clair are returning. Also back from last year's team are juniors Mike Sheeley and John Andersen, and senior Carl Lopes. Another runner who has looked good in practice is Greg Tsoucalos, up from last year's freshman team. These boys should form the nucleus of the team.

Others on the squad include: Charley Mitchell, Greg Bowman, Jeff Lunn, Bob Craig, Jim Parker, Doug Kibbe, Pete Saunders, Delmolino, Gobiele, and Barry.

Sidelined by injury are soph Dick Stevens, who hurt his knees and will be out for the season; and Bill Thoms, who sprained an ankle and should be back in action soon.

The team's first meet is against Northeastern and Maine in Boston on Saturday Oct. 2. Northeastern is an annual New England powerhouse, and the interesting part of the meet will be to see how the Redmen harriers fare against Maine, always a tough team in the Yankee Conference.

LANDRY DOMINATES YAN-CON STATISTICS

Dick DeVarney, Maine's record breaking quarterback, Rhode Island captain Joe DeFalco, Connecticut defensive captain Gerry McWeeny, and Massachusetts sophomore quarterback Greg Landry have been named the Yankee Conference players of the week following their gridiron performances on Saturday. DeVarney, the top offensive performer, led his team to its second straight win and in the process became the first college player in the history of Maine football to total more than 2,000 yards passing. The 5'8 Laconia, (N.H.) native has now passed for a total of 2,144 yards in his college career.

Intramural Report

by Dave James

Monday night's touch football activity featured several near upsets and a game won on the last play.

ASP came within three yards of pulling off a monumental upset of mighty KS. The Alpha Sigs shocked KS by holding a 12-7 advantage at halftime while consistently holding the star passing and catching combination of Cleary and Neary in check. With less than a minute left ASP had the ball on the KS three yard line but lost the ball on downs and the game 13-12.

SPE received a scare from ZN but hung on for a 19-13 victory after the score had been tied 13-13 at the half. Miller completed 13 of 24 for 3 TD's and Lombardo caught 6 passes for the winners.

In other fraternity games Vic

Larkin continued his fine passing with 16 for 22 and 5 TD's as BKP routed ATG 41-12. Ted Carpenter caught eight passes for the losers. TKE had little trouble in vanquishing PSK 31-6. Garbutt (12-22 with 3 TD's) and Wyser (6 receptions) were the stars of this one.

The Hoovers scored a touchdown in the last second to edge the Hicks 13-12 after the Hicks held a 6-0 halftime lead. Klemansky turned in a fine performance for the losers hitting on 10 of 17 for 2 TD's.

In a defensive battle the Pines broke a 6-6 deadlock with the Hi-Lo's by a late score to win 12-6. An identical score saw the Hickory's down the Lemons 12-6. The Lemons used three quarterbacks in a desperate bid to tie up the game.

Rounding out dorm action the Oaks topped the Limes 28-6 as Dudek sparked with 13-20 and 3 TD's.

Turning to the independent games the Untouchables established themselves as the team to beat with a 27-7 clobbering of the Banshees. Police completed 13 of 20 and Pete Bernard caught 6 passes and scored a TD on an interception.

The Charlie Browns bounced back from last week's 50-6 shellacking to win over the Selohassa's 12-6. After a scoreless first half Rich Moran took over the reins as quarterback and led the Mongrels to 20-0 defeat of the College St. A.C.

The Philosophers romped over the Vets 37-0 as Ken Gerlock threw 5 TD passes.

UMass Defensive End
PAUL MLINAR

FOOTBALL PROFILE

Paul Mlinar

Alternating at defensive end for the Redmen this year is 215 lb. Sophomore Paul Mlinar. Majoring in Hotel and Restaurant Management, Paul came to UMass from Glenhead, New York.

While in high school in Glenhead, Paul participated in football, wrestling and track. In his Senior year Paul was named All Long Island and All Metropolitan Fullback. For four years he was one of the outstanding high school wrestlers on Long Island. He rounded out his sports year by competing in the shot put, and in his Senior year he won 3rd place in a statewide trackmeet.

Before coming to UMass Paul continued his schooling at Mount Hermon School for Boys. While there he was one of the most versatile backs on the team, and was named to the Honorary New England Preparatory School football team. During the winter months Paul was a member of the school wrestling team, compiling a record of 11-0. He placed first in the Class A New England Wrestling Tournament. In the spring Paul was a member of the track team, and here too he was an asset, as he won several meets with his shot-putting and discus throwing.

Here at UMass Paul played Freshman football, despite recurring injuries to his knee and ankle. After his knee healed Paul competed in the Intramural Wrestling Tournament, placing 2nd. This year Paul was switched to defensive end, where Coach Fusia hopes he will help brace the Redman defense.

Upon graduation Paul hopes to go on to Graduate School.

FOOTBALL FORECAST

College & Pro Picks

Presented by

The Amherst Tower Restaurant

VIEWPOINT

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

"Pushover" or "shedule filler" have been the terms applied to Yankee Conference teams in the past.

This year will be a different story.

Last weekend the University of Connecticut Huskies upended Yale 13-6 for their first victory in 17 years over the Bulldogs.

In another Yan-Con vs. Ivy League game, the University of Rhode Island handed Brown a 14-6 defeat. The only Yankee team that succumbed to an Ivy opponent was New Hampshire. Dartmouth tamed the Wildcats 56-6.

In a pre-season scrimmage the UMass Redmen beat Harvard 15-7. This is the same Crimson team that took Holy Cross to the cleaners, 17-7.

The Black Bears from Maine managed an 18-7 victory over Boston University to show that Maine's victory over UMass was no fluke.

Approximately four year ago, UConn was on the threshold of going big time. The men from Amherst now hold that distinction.

Although they play a "small time" schedule, the Vermont Catamounts have defeated their first two 1965 opponents while scoring 40 or more points.

Where does this leave the Yankee Conference forecast? With the exception of New Hampshire any team could cop the beanpot, symbol of the championship.

On the basis of their performance against the Redmen, the edge has to go to Maine. The Pine Tree Staters are led by 5'8" quarterback Dick DeVarney. The tricky field general has a light but aggressive line in front of him and they have shown the desire to win.

The only way UMass can take the championship is if Maine is defeated somewhere along the schedule. This will put the burden squarely on the shoulders of UConn, Vermont and URI. If one of these teams can beat Maine, and if the Redmen can travel the remainder of the route unmolested, UMass would be tri-champions. A lot of "ifs", but the possibility does remain.

This will be the first year in the past three that the Yankee Conference has had multiple contenders. During the season, non-league opponents will learn that the quality of conference competition has greatly improved.

Draft Head says "I'll get you, if..."

by Tom Donovan,
Associate Feature Editor

"Gentlemen, I want you to be at ease. I'm spending a little time here for your own good. Because if you don't do well, I'm going to get you anyway." These were the opening remarks from State Director of the State Selective Service John C. Carr Jr., as he started off the Draft Information Council at Bartlett Auditorium Wednesday night.

Carr's opening remarks were followed by explanations of the various programs offered by the different services. Among the relatively new or unknown programs were: the Environmental Science Services Administration (Coast and Geodetic) for men between ages 20-26 requiring two years active duty; no reserve obligation incurred, although a BS in engineering or an appropriate science is required; and the U.S. Public Health Service (with no age limit) which also has a two year obligation and can be detailed to the Peace Corps, the Agency for International Development (AID) the Bureau of Prisons, or the Indian Health Service.

Following the convocation, the meeting was opened for questions from the floor. Included in the questions and answers were "Is there a minimum of credits a student must take to get his 2S classification?"

"No. If you are enrolled in a graduate or undergraduate program, expecting to get your degree in a reasonable amount of time, and keep your grades up, then you will get your deferment."

"If a man continues his schooling past the age of 26, is he still liable to be drafted?"

"Only if he is a doctor, veterinarian, or a lawyer. These three categories are available up to age 34."

Carr ended with this statement, "What bothers me are some of the articles I read in the newspapers. They say you fellows don't want to go. If I were your age, and doing as well, I wouldn't be enthusiastic either."

"I don't knock anyone who doesn't want to go to Viet Nam. Like I said, I don't want to go either. What I do knock are the draft dodgers. They are two vastly different things."

Football Rally Tonight

Because rain discouraged freshmen from attending the AIC rally, Aephia will sponsor another for the Buffalo game. The team and cheerleaders will be introduced, the coach will say a few words, and the Maroon Keys will sponsor a bonfire.

A parade with the rock and roll band The Hamlets on a flatbed truck with the Keys, Scrolls, Revelers, Cheerleaders, and Adelphis in convertibles will form in the Orchard at 6:15, and begin marching to the Union at 6:30.

The route will run from the Orchard to the front of Van Meter, then to Mills and Brooks then down to the back of the Quadrangle; from there left by Johnson to North Pleasant St. to the Union.

The dance will feature two bands, The Hamlets, a local group, and the Pied Pipers, a great group out of Boston. Admission will be 75¢, and the after the rally.

Senate Refuses Funds

Collegian Delegation Cut

by Jim Foudy, Senate Reporter

The Student Senate cut for the first time a Collegian request for funds to send three staff editors to the Associated Collegiate Press Conference at San Francisco, Oct. 21-23.

The Senate, after approving an Index request for $640 to send two of its staff to the same conference, refused a $413 category change from Collegian's miscellaneous funds to transportation funds.

The category change would have allowed Collegian to send their representative instead of the usual two. As Collegian Business Manager pointed out: "A minimum of three people can only begin to realize any value from the conference."

SENATE SECRETARY Linda Pearlstein explained that the Collegian will probably be taking in $6,000 more than estimated on ads due to the increased efforts of the business staff. This $6,000 or more would be returned to the Student Activities Tax Fund.

"By cutting these funds for the conference we are destroying their initiative," Senator Pearlstein exclaimed. "They have been working hard and all they want to do is improve the paper."

BUT WHILE this satisfied senators who thought two delegates sufficient, others felt the conference completely unnecessary and a binding clause was introduced by Senator Bob Kripps to prohibit the Collegian from spending any of its funds for the convention.

"The conference is so large I don't see what the Collegian is going to get out of it," commented Kripps. "It seems to me like a nice time but not a necessity."

Senator Kripps also felt that the Collegian should "use what they have learned in the past."

SIMILARLY Senator Gurwitz, praising the Collegian as "a top flight newspaper", suggested that the paper should incorporate some of the recent conference ideas before attending others.

Senator Betty Chambers concurred with Kripps and Gurwitz: "The Index could use some improvement, but the Collegian is already a first class newspaper. How many workshops do they need?"

However, Senator Jim Allen pointed out that "people are always learning."

"WE MUST EVALUATE the conference in light of the conference and not in light of the expense," he said. "The Collegian is big business and should be treated that way."

During a five minute recess, Senator Allen found that the money left in Collegian transportation funds fell short of the amount necessary to send even one representative.

The binding clause was then dropped and the Senate, in another long debate, reconsidered the motion and finally approved $520 to cover expenses for two staffers and meet other transportation costs this year.

THE Collegian editors were still disappointed at the outcome and conduct of the Senators.

These were some comments of the Collegian Board of Editors:

Four-College Board Announces Founding of Hampshire College

by Pat Petow,
Staff Reporter

Initial plans for Hampshire College, a new undergraduate, liberal arts institution, academically supported by UMass, Mount Holyoke, Amherst and Smith, were made public Aug. 4, 1965.

The Trustees of Tinker Hill, a clandestine organization formed for the purpose of buying land without inflating values, has purchased for Hampshire College approximately 300 acres of land in the Bay Road area near Route 116, South Amherst.

A charter is being sought from Amherst where selectmen saw aerial maps last Tuesday. Town Manager Allen Torrey said that there were sewer and water services in the area and extension of the utilities will not be difficult.

The site is about six miles from Mount Holyoke and Smith and about five miles from Amherst and the University.

Hampshire's role of extending and strengthening present Four-College programs as well as being a "new college" innovating in curriculum and administration is made possible by a six-million dollar pledge by Harold F. Johnson.

The retired international attorney from Southampton,

Long Island, who was in 1918 president of Amherst's student council, was motivated by the 1958 Four-College study, The New College Plan: A Proposal for a Major Departure in Higher Education.

The report was prepared by a faculty committee "at the request of the Presidents of Amherst College, Mount Holyoke College, Smith College and the University of Massachusetts with the assistance of a grant from the Fund for the Advancement of Education"—a 1965 printing has been made. It will be reviewed in forming Hampshire's educational structure.

Hampshire College, existing now largely as a parcel of land and an interim three-member body, The Hampshire College Educational Trust with Charles R. Longworth the chairman, will be designed to avoid traditional restrictions. Commitments imposed by curriculum, alumni, departmental divisions et cetera will be subordinate to a flexibility to engage "in experiments to determine whether costs of education can be substantially reduced without impairing quality." Support is thus given to the function and independence of a small college in higher education. Tuition is expected to be as high as the most expensive of the Four-Colleges now.

In a statement by the trustees, Hampshire will seek its innovations "under the following advantageous conditions:

- A curriculum designed to prevent unnecessary proliferation of courses and to take advantage of the existence of exchange facilities offered by strong and established neighbors.

Presidential Comments

by Gordon Davidson,
Day Editor

Editor's Note: An appointment was made with President John Lederle for an interview by a Collegian Editor. It was hoped that this might develop into a weekly commentary from the president, but the Editor was told that the president does not grant general interviews, and can only be reached when some critical problem needs to be discussed. The following comments are those of Robert McCartney, Secretary of the University.

It is easy to let a little smoke and dust obscure the real achievements of the past year, President Lederle feels. The 1964-65 year was one of the greatest in the history of the University. It saw the establishment of a new branch of UMass in Boston, with a top-notch faculty, a new Medical School in Worcester despite some controversy all of which overnight gives us a statewide university system.

Last year also saw Phi Beta Kappa come to the UMass campus, the establishment of a Residential College Program with the Orchard Hill Dorms, and the completion of the new football stadium. No other college or university in New England accomplished more last year.

This year, the new South West Dorms are one month ahead of schedule, and the university has been granted 2.8 million from the Federal government for a graduate research center, which will give a great boost to graduate research at the University.

The duties of the President are all those which usually fall on a chief executive. The president represents the University in Boston on legislative committees, in the Governor's office; he talks with legislators, defends the budget, and provides information on University programs.

Further expansion plans for the University include: a new, air conditioned library of one million volumes, a similarly air conditioned east wing to Bartlett Hall, and a new Fine Arts building on the end of the campus pond.

The president is a member of the Hampshire College board of Trustees, as are all the presidents of the four colleges.

President Lederle has been especially pleased with the development of the University Band, and he attends all of the home football games, and as many of the away games as possible.

One of his main concerns is the threat to the natural beauty of the campus which the rapid expansion poses. He feels we have one of the most beautiful campuses in New England, and we must expand with the purpose of utilizing and preserving as much of this beauty as possible.

Fantastiks To Open Theatre Season

Casting is set and rehearsals are underway for the University Theatre's first production of the fourth winter season, The Fantastiks.

Graduate students Ken Borden and Mary Grace Pennisi will head this rifeal fantasy about the difference between love by enchanted moonlight, and love by disillusioning sunlight. Ken has appeared in many previous UT productions and was a member of the summer repertory company. Mary Grace comes to the University with a solid background of theatrical experience from Merrimack College.

Fat Freni and Larry Wilker play the fathers who hold to the theory that the way to get children to do what is wanted is to forbid it. Pat is also a graduate of Merrimack College, and Larry is a graduate student in Theatre at the University.

Francois - Regis Klanfer as the Narrator, not only will hold the freshly pastoral story together with connecting comments between the scenes, but will also play the part of a roving vagabond who is hired to stage a fake abduction of the heroine. Francois is a transfer student from Tufts Univ. Graduate school of Theatre Arts, and was a member of John Austin's Image Theatre.

Special student Sandra Camp will play the mute. A highly important, though non-speaking role of the arranger of props and scenery. Others in the cast include freshman Dan Weir as the tottering old Shakespearean actor who keeps garbling the famous lines that he has been sprouting for years, and graduate student Mike Hench as Mortimer, who has the specialty of being able to die effectively.

The Fantastiks will be presented in Bowker Aud., at 8:15 p.m., Oct. 14, 15, 16. Tickets will go on sale in the Student Union Lobby Oct. 4.

UM, Amherst Panel Debates Civil Rights

Will there be a need for more demonstrations in Southern communities? How much progress has North Carolina made in the area of race relations? What's behind the current voter registration drive in the South?

A panel of students and faculty from the University and Amherst College will deal with these and other questions, relating to the new trend in civil rights action in the South, Monday evening, October 4th at 8:00 p.m. in Hasbrouck 20 (on the University campus). The panel discussion, sponsored by the Campus Religious Council, represents the students and faculty from the Four-College Area who were field workers for the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's SCOPE Project during the summer.

The members of the panel had experiences ranging from teaching political education classes to participating in street demonstrations. They will try to relate their work in Eastern North Carolina to some of the larger issues now being raised by the freedom struggle.

SENATE REFUSES...

"The San Francisco Conference isn't a lark; it is an intensive period of exchange of information and instruction. A minimum of three people can only begin to realize any value from it.

"IF THE SENATE is so short-sighted as to deny a request made on legitimate grounds by capable people, who have been entrusted with the running of the paper, then perhaps the Senators themselves should put out the paper.

Twelve Chosen As Queen Candidates

Twelve undergraduate coeds have been selected to appear in the semi-finals of the Annual Homecoming Queen Contest. They were chosen from a total of 47 girls who appeared in the preliminary judging Tuesday night.

Southwest D, nominated by Alpha Phi Omega; and Barbara Sullivan, Lewis, nominated by Kappa Alpha Theta; Class of 1967—Diane Dube, Crabtree, nominated by Tau Kappa Epsilon; Priscilla Ponte, Iota Gamma Upsilon, nominated by Iota Gamma Upsilon; Judy Sturtevant, Kappa Kappa Gamma, nominated by Kappa Kappa Gamma; and Barbara Taska, Crabtree, nominated by Sigma Phi Epsilon; Class of 1966—Anne Marie Creedon, Johnson, nominated by Adelpheia; and Joan Ford, Leach, nominated by Zeta Nu.

Semi-finals judging will take place Sunday evening in Memorial Hall. The judges are Evan Johnston, Executive Director of the Alumni Association, Robert Doolan, Associate Dean of Admissions, Richard Bresciani, Assistant Sports Information Director, and Alan Sarno and John Webster, Adelpheians.

Information concerning the Homecoming Parade on Oct. 15 is available at the Program Office. There has been a change this year in the route of the parade. This year it will start at Ellis drive and proceed up N. Pleasant St., past the reviewing stand at Pi Phi, to the center of town, turn right up Amity St., take the right down Lincoln Ave. The floats will be parked and the parade will end at the Cinder lot.

This year's parade promises to be better than ever, and as usual awards will be given to the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place winners in each class.

San Francisco Conference? I doubt it.

"We have succeeded, on our own initiative, in putting out one of the best college papers in the country. I sincerely doubt that any of us will allow outsiders, unfamiliar with our operation, to make decisions for us, much less abide by such spuriously derived decisions.

"IF THE SENATE feels we are too progressive an institution to operate under an anachronistic system then something should be done."

Concerning the Fine Arts Council, Senate President Dacey commented that "we (Senate) are looking forward to sitting down with the faculty as mutually interested parties."

"Eventually", Dacey continued, "we hope to evolve a solution to Fine Arts which will be satisfactory to the students and the University community alike."

Greeks Rush '67, '68

by Ken Berk and Paul Ponte
Since the beginning of the academic year, the 16 fraternities on campus have been involved in the phenomenon called Upperclass Rush.

The rush period for upperclassmen, which has no time limit, mainly gives the men of the Classes of 1967 and 1968 and the fraternity men an opportunity to become acquainted with each other.

This year, the Interfraternity Council (IFC) has initiated a policy of early rush for upperclassmen and a delayed rush for freshmen. Sam Armstrong, IFC president, explained: "Freshmen have been excluded from early fraternity rushing to give the freshmen a better chance to adjust to their new environment and the university life."

FRESHMEN RUSH WILL START NOV. 14 with a convocation in the Student Union, while the upperclass rush will continue throughout the year.

"In formulating one's view of fraternities and fraternity life, the rusher should not rely on rumor and hearsay, but should visit the fraternities for himself," said Armstrong.

"A fraternity is not just 'good times', a fraternity is more a group of men whose backgrounds and ambitions are varied. Yet through living together they form a spirit of fellowship in an atmosphere of a home away from home," he continued.

"It is this spirit of fellowship and fraternalism that causes the 'fraternity experience'. Many great and famous men have gone through this fraternity experience, from a former President of the United States to educators and religious leaders.

"Many a fraternity man has stated that the fraternity experience has made him a better individual and that this experience was invaluable.

"There are the ideas that the members of the Classes of 1967 and 1968 should remember as they visit the fraternity houses," Armstrong said.

The fraternities sponsor many smokers in the fall to allow students to meet the brothers of the respective houses. Men should visit several different houses before making any final decision, and keep in mind that he will be living and working with the house he chooses to join.

Berkeley Riots Evaluated Again By Former Profs

by Paula McCarthy,
Feature Reviewer

The Revolution at Berkeley is an anthology containing the opinions of some of the leading commentators on American education. Edited by Michael Miller and Susan Gilmore, both former graduate students and instructors at Berkeley, the views of some directly involved in the uprising are contained herein.

The incident at Berkeley for some weeks last fall threw the entire collegiate community of the United States into a virtual uproar. The students on this California campus were protesting a new regulation which made illegal any political solicitation on campus.

But after the initial excitement had died down the Berkeley campus and its revolution seemed to have been forgotten.

Viewed in retrospect through this anthology, the Berkeley incident seems to have taken on the dimensions of every college and university in the country.

The authors focus special attention on the role of the American student and also on the obligations to him that a university is responsible for. It contains also a deep insight into the psychological make-up of the American student body.

The book is, in essence, a debate concerning the principles of American education and the part that the student should play in the academic community.

UM Prof Creates "a work of art"

by Fran Borovski,
Feature Staff

The university is fortunate to have as a member of its English Dept., Andrew Felter, a native of Riga, Latvia. He is a graduate of Loyola Univ. and received his master of fine arts degree from State University of Iowa.

Felter, whose main interest is fiction, has written his first novel, The Travelers, which is in its second printing. The book has received rave reviews from critics all over the nation. Christian Science Monitor calls The Travelers, "A beautiful fresh novel that elevates and dignifies human-kind...filled with drama, movement, color...the kind of novel one wishes he could persuade others to read. To discover a first novel like this one regenerates one's confidence in the power of realistic, traditional fiction...Felter is a writer of dimension...a remarkable first novel."

The New York Times Book Review praised the book as "an odyssey of the spirit...conveyed in a simple and unadorned style...painting a brilliant picture of an eccentric and believable family...high tribute for a first novelist." The Times added it to their list of "New and Recommended Fiction."

Book Week of the New York Herald Tribune calls Felter's novel "A flawless work of fiction," and adds, "The only way I can suggest the unusual flavor of this novel is to ask you to imagine a Gogol story told by Chekov. Mr. Felter has honored us with a rare work of art."

The Chicago Sun-Times calls it "One of the most entertaining and readable and original novels of recent years," and the Chicago American Book World refers to it as "...a unique and compelling effort...a brooding and intense novel."

THE REPORTER says the novel "...entertains largely while touching deep meaning...it is the whole sense of human joy and misery and spiritual agony and strength, the sheer life of it all, which distinguishes this book."

THE ACTION of the novel is set in prewar Germany. Ivan Solovoy, a staunch Russian anti-Communist preacher, travels across Europe with his family. Ivan is very preoccupied with religious matters, seeming to care little for his family's material welfare.

His children, ages four to twenty-three become resentful, but he is anxious to spread the truth of the Gospel.

He ventures to Finland hoping to send Russian Bibles by balloon to his exiled land where "the happy Russian in Leningrad, starving for the truth, would study the book in cellars by candlelight; they would copy the New Testament on wrapping paper and smuggle the divine story from town to town in loaves of bread."

UMass author

AS THE FAMILY moves on to Sweden, each member goes his own way. Two sons become affiliated with the Nazis; another boy goes to the Russians.

The war crushes Ivan's efforts to spread the word of the Bible. His sudden death comes when he is spiritually disturbed; and the novel terminates with an air of sadness, the coveted virtues of faith and understanding being possessed only by his wife, Anna.

Of Ivan, the Boston Sunday Globe writes: "...a fantastic figure of absurdity, theatrical, melodramatic, farcical, and shameless; yet, he is also a figure of unquestioned sincerity and fiery passion."

The Sum of the Parts

Have you ever gone into an exam unprepared? Have you ever had a chemistry lecture in Peter's Auditorium? Did you live in the Orchard last year?

Well we of Orchard remember studying for finals last semester to the constant accompaniment of those infernal machines dedicated to the production of noise. If the University was unable to supply the Orchard dormitories with running water and other luxuries on opening day, why did they insist upon having the landscaping finished to accommodate Commencement Week events?

The distracting of the student from his business seems to be developing into a precise science at UMass.

Sitting in Peter's Auditorium listening to a chemistry lecture on a hot day is a once in a life time experience. It is difficult enough feat for the non-scientifically minded student to concentrate on a chemistry lecture, without the additional burden of sitting in an auditorium that lacks air conditioning.

One point to our advantage was aired by a lecturer who gave students permission to leave at any time if the combined effects of chemical calculations and sweat became overpowering. Those who failed chem. in Summer School will receive a SBMOC badge (Suffered the Biggest Misery on Campus,) to wear while repeating the course.

Th classes held in the Orchard also present problems. Instead of stimulating intellectual curiosity they are in fact an experiment in audio perception, and in the faculty's maximum vocal capacity. While straining to hear a lecture on Homer, one might have the additional good fortune of counting the number of unanswered telephone calls that come into Grayson House.

At the same time, the attentive student might be able to listen to a wonderfully noisy lawn mower at close range. So engrossed can one become in these fringe benefits that he might fail to notice the instructor's distress when he is compelled to dismiss the class ten minutes early.

UMass has the distinction of benefiting the whole, while neglecting the sum, of its parts. The recent structural additions to the campus reflect UMass' apparent dedication to the best interests of its students. Namely, where they live and play and not where they learn.

Isn't there a law in one of those math books your leaning on that says the whole is equal to the sum of its parts?

Do You Know Who You Are?

Dr. Janowitz, director of the Mental Health Center at the infirmary, believes the main cause of emotional problems on campus to be the transition from adolescence to adulthood. The college-aged student can no longer depend upon his childhood set of standards and actions to guide his life but must acquire new and more mature patterns of thought to fit the adult world he is entering.

Part of this transition, Dr. Janowitz believes, involves the process of looking for identity—a new identity that says more than just who your parents are and where you live—an identity that says what you as an individual are and believe.

During this period many problems may arise. While trying a new set of standards in search of one that will suit him and his life, a student may become unsure and confused. Mistakes he has made, or fears of making them, may worry him and, as a result, upset his studies and possibly his relationships with his peers.

Dr. Janowitz and the University faculty as a whole believe that one of the best ways to help students in his area is to provide an atmosphere on campus in which there is an awareness of this transition and its possible resulting problems. The student must also be made to feel aware of and to accept the need to assume more adult attitudes.

Doctors at the infirmary have a deep understanding of the students' position in regard to this adjustment and learning period, and they try to help those students whose problems stem from it to make a smooth and successful transition.

Progress toward becoming an adult and acquiring an identity during the college years is somewhat indicated by the fact that only about one-fourth as many seniors come to the infirmary with problems as do freshmen. The nature of problems of freshmen and seniors also differs significantly. Freshmen come with problems involving dating and studies-clearly adjustment problems; whereas seniors are more concerned with what they as individuals think and need.

Letters To The Editor

WHY. WHY. WHY?

To the Editor:

Requirements! What a finality. One only has to turn to any directory of courses and he will see the words, "majors must take..." This phrase is a discouraging and unfortunate declaration made by every department. To many it is a type of death sentence and to others it is a stay of execution.

Why should, let us say, a government major be forced to take a biological science? Why should any liberal arts students be forced to take two years of a language which gives him nothing but an introduction and four semesters of worry and cramming? Why should a math major be forced to take German? The usual answer is "to give the student a well rounded education". This proposition does give the student a well rounded education. This proposition does

Does a course such as Chemistry III give a sociology major a better outlook in the interaction of people? One can give numerous examples, but the point to be made is that many of these courses fill up gaps of time rather than gaps of knowledge. A distinction has to be made as to what requirements are needed.

It is an unfortunate situation when a liberal arts student is unable to cope with two years of language and is forced to enroll in the School of Business Administration in order to "get out of the requirement" of a foreign language. In many ways this individual is sacrificing his long range outlook or future for a requirement. How ironical it is since most of these requirements are just introduction courses. These, in many instances, have no bearing on the individual's major.

One also has to look on the other side of the problem. Many students take advantage of the situation and use requirements as an easy way of getting through four years of college. There are still courses in which one can still get an easy "B". This is nothing more than a stay of execution for these individuals.

However, the tragedy lies with the serious student who is literally imprisoned. Alternatives... he has none. One suggestion would be to alter the language requirement. Can there be real benefit from having only two years of a foreign language? The student should be given the alternative as to either becoming proficient in a particular language or not taking it at all. Another suggestion would be to have only one year of science; either physical or biological as a requirement for liberal arts students. Why a year in each one?

Something must be done. Until the administration of this university takes a hard, critical look into this very real problem, the student will, unfortunately, not have "a well rounded education."

Proprieties?

To the editor:

Tuesday, September 21, the first Student-Faculty night was held and an enjoyable and profitable get-together was had by all. There was, however, a noticeable lack of refreshments, and this highlights a problem that all departments of the University have. Namely, that funds are not made available for the normal social amenities that such events require. Certainly, the small sum of money required should not prohibit us from observing the proprieties at educational-social gatherings.

As I See It

Editor's Note: The author of this column Mr. Georgios Pan Piperopoulos, is a graduate exchange student from Greece. He has served since 1960 as the U. S. correspondent for the Drasis Press Organization in Greece, and last year was an editor with the Atlantic Greek Daily in New York. He has been invited by the Editorial Chairman of the Collegian to write a series of guest editorials. This is the fourth installment of his first article.

Yours for the Asking

by Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

In the realms of the political life it seems as though even the children around the world take a part, but in America a visitor is faced with what is usually labelled as "apathy". "The Americans are very 'naive' on the stage of International diplomacy", goes the slogan. And it seems to be convincing even to the average American College student. "We spent millions of dollars for you", I have heard time and again, "and yet you all hate us." This may or may not be the case, and I am referring to hate. National and individual pride may be hurt some times and thus hate follows. And then at other times, the money goes to support a Government in a country where people do not want it, and thus discontent emerges.

* * *

"How can we make sure that the money reaches the people?" I was asked recently by a friend. I can't answer this question. Even where Governments are willing to use this money for the benefit of their people the good is not achieved overnight. . . . But I gave him a "naive" answer: "Educate the people. Make use they get an education. Then they will be able to appreciate the help you provide, and even more, they will be able to see more clearly the dangers of Communism and not fall prey to sweet talk of division of wealth and a "chicken in every pot" when the Communists come."

Faith is non-existent, morals are collapsing, the youth is going I think that to an extent they are right. But these are not problems exclusively American. Delinquency is more or less a matter of definition; morals are suffering in most places all over the world; and the youth has replaced long range goals for short term kicks in other parts of the earth too. It is more evident in America, simply because the automobile has become accessible to the teens, and the money to spend is more available . . .

Understanding the American Myths

How does our American way of life relate to and define man's authentic self-understanding amidst the revolutionary mood of our time?

This is a question that will be raised this Sunday Evening at 7 p.m. when the Wesley Foundation of Amherst presents "Contemporary American Myths," an evening of folk music and dialogue with Barbara Webster.

Barb is a local folk singer who is concerned with the relevant problems of our new age, especially the illusions that have crept into the new morality of our "Great Society." Barbara has sung at the U. of Mass. Vietnam teach-in last spring and the University Sunday Music Hour. The Sunday evening program will also include a 50c supper served at the Student Center on the hill behind the Wesley Methodist Church at 6 p.m.

Close by, the pilot's equipment was placed in readiness for the coming event. Everything timed, everything checked, it resembled a supersonic bull ring."

USAF Displays Art at UMass

A travelling collection of U.S. Air Force art will go on display at the University of Massachusetts this week-end for an eight-day showing. The 43 paintings are part of a 2,500-painting United States Air Force Documentary Art Collection, and include valuable historical works as well as dramatic portrayals of the Air Force in action today.

The exhibition will be open to the public without charge on the second floor of Memorial Hall from 2 to 10 p.m. on weekdays and from noon to 6 p.m. weekends, Oct. 2 to Oct. 10.

The works exhibited are some of those donated to the United States by artists of the Society of Illustrators of New York, Los Angeles, and San Francisco.

Closed Circuit TV for Student Observation

A closed circuit television station, complete with professional equipment, will soon enable education majors to observe on television the classes being taught in the Mark Meadow Elementary School. Dr. Saul Scher, who will teach a course in television workshop in the spring semester, expects the studio to be in operation at that time, but only with the aid of a group of students interested in gaining skill in the use of professional television equipment.

Dr. Scher anticipates a need for five, possibly six, students to fill positions as cameramen, floor manager, assistant director, technical director and audio director. Each student will have the opportunity to act in every capacity, as the positions will rotate. No previous experience in the field of television broadcasting is necessary—just the curiosity to investigate and a desire to learn the skill of broadcasting.

Facilities, now under construction in the Education Building, will be excellent, with a control room and tape library separate from the studio itself. Equipment includes two cameras with a full series of lenses and monitors and control panel for directors' use.

Though hours will at first be irregular, the skills gained should be well worth the effort. Thinking of television as a possible career? Searching for a new outlet for your energies? This may be for you. Contact: Dr. Saul Scher, Room 8, Education Building, Extensions 2076 and 2681.

Blasko Comments on Game

Chief Red Blasko commenting about last Saturday's parking and traffic situation around the A.I.C. game said that everything turned out well, although the newly accepted North lot at the stadium was chewed up a bit.

He said, "We parked about 2,200 cars and had enough room except for one car that got stuck so that we had to pull it out with a wrecker."

We wish the students would refrain from walking across the newly seeded areas in front of B, C, and D dormitories on their way to the game, because they will ruin the landscaping and the University will be held liable.

Finally, Red said, if the students would keep off North Hadley Road and adhere to the sidewalk they would eliminate a serious traffic hazard.

'Martyred' Casting

"It's hard for people to realize the work that goes into making a good team" said Ellen "and everyone seems to feel personally responsible if they lose."

Milt is a hero, the traditional college football hero—why? Because he does his job and does it well. But he's also a student, husband and more than a jersey with a number on it every Saturday during the season.
Everyone connected with football works hard, from the band to the team. And as Ellen watches him at a game in the seats behind the bench she doesn't mind sharing Milt with his other love—football.

Even though UMass was defeated at Maine, Milt displayed the form that placed him in the Little All-American ranks.

boring institutions.

- A campus and plant not the result of accretion, but designed for efficiency.

- The elimination of extraneous and costly features such as intercollegiate athletics and fraternity houses."

The first board of trustees will include the Four-College presidents; the president of Hampshire, Charles W. Cole, president-emeritus of Amherst and former ambassador to Chile; Winthrop S. Dakin, Amherst attorney; Harold F. Johnson, and several others whose means of selection has not been decided. Six trustees will be elected by alumni ten years after the first class graduates.

Longworth had indicated that it will take a year—during which educational policy will be determined—before construction can begin. Architects will not be consulted actively for several months; some firms have nonetheless, indicated their interest. Between 12-20 million dollars may be required for completion of the College.

Longworth said recently that the trustees are "taking ideas we have for Hampshire College to foundations" in the hope that they will be of assistance. Although he would be reluctant to propose means by which Four-College students might express their support, he said their involvement would be helpful to the new college, as perhaps an "expert opinion" to offer foundations.

Plans call for a freshman class of 250 sometime after 1968 with perhaps the full number of 1100 students by 1973. Hampshire College Classes will not use the physical facilities of the other institutions while awaiting its own. But the new college will cooperate as a fifth partner after its independent operation has been inaugurated.

An example of this type of cooperation is suggested in The New College Plan. Instruction for credit in foreign and ancient languages may be taken at Four-College institutions with appropriate leave from fulfilling some Hampshire requirements. Then Hampshire's relatively fewer instructors will offer intermediate and advanced work in literary and philological and cultural aspects of the languages. "The trial proposed may show that it is not primarily required elementary language study that leads students to achieve effectual advanced work with languages, but rather desire to follow advanced interests in art, culture, history and philology."

Future articles will describe the findings of the Plan and the use made of them by New College, Sarasota, Florida which opened its doors in 1964 to 1,200 students.

"Bogey" 's Back in 'Casablanca'

Appreciation for the acting talents of the late Humphry Bogart has come with a rush. All at once, this cinema tough guy has become the idol of cinema addicts across the nation.

On Monday, Oct. 4, the Young Independents are presenting Casablanca, the first in a series of six Bogart films to be shown weekly. These were chosen from his ten best, known as the "Bogart Canon."

These films show the Bogart of the raspy voice, the stern poker face, the cynical sneer, the colloquial expressions, the self-confident, I - don't - give - a - damn manner.

INDEX Old Format Returns

The Index, although greatly involved with campus activities on the whole, has always been primarily for the Senior class. The largest section in the entire publication is the Senior Section, devoted entirely to portraits of the members of the Senior class.

Last year, the Index made a major change in format; portraits were separated from the activity write-ups. This change met with a great deal of dissatisfaction on the part of the entire campus community. This year, the write-ups and the portraits will appear together on the same page, as they have in the past. We have taken this step in an effort to please the student body as a whole.

If you have not yet signed up to have your Senior Portrait taken, there is still time. You may sign up in the Index Office between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. every weekday for the next two weeks.

Did You Know...

that stalcant comes from the Anglo-Saxon word 'stelan'—to steal? It originally meant 'worth stealing'. As applied to men, the expression meant 'good at stealing'. In olden times, the practice of force and theft upon an enemy was considered a virtue.

What comes after winning the cup? Lifting it, natürlich.

When German-American soccer players and their friends have a big victory to celebrate, they don't stand around like this for very long. Now that they've stopped kicking the ball, they're ready to have one.

There'll be a certain amount of spielen und singen und tanzen, with perhaps a little trinken. And that's where another winner comes into the picture. Those steins they're lifting are full of Rheingold Extra Dry, the beer that

New Yorkers celebrate with more than any other.

It's a fact that in New York City, where you can work up a thirst with bocce, tennis, jai alai, baseball, and other games from all over the world, Rheingold scores consistently with the sporting crowd and every other crowd as well.

Why is that?

Tropical Plants for Umieland?

by Pam Metaxas

If you long for the exotism of other lands, you don't even have to leave the campus to travel. A visit to the tropical greenhouse directly adjacent to the South Commons should satisfy you temporarily.

Here visitors will find a small pool with a fountain surrounded by lush green tropical plants. Giant Birds of Paradise with bright blue and orange blossoms grow here along with Monkey Puzzles and the tree-like Indian Hawthorne.

A plant called Monstera grows with large cuts in its broad leaves and the Zebra plant has thin stripes. Further on the visitor will see the African Iris and the Hare's Foot Fern.

From the West Indies is the Spider Lily and the Powder Puff plant. There are several Spanish plants, two of which are Spanish moss and the Sweat plant—a thick wet grass. And, of course, there are a wide variety of citrus plants—a Banana, fig, pineapple and Valencia orange tree and the small green fruit of the Liman ponderosa.

These are only a few of the fascinating plants. The rest may be seen any weekday from 10-5. But be careful. Behind that door is another dimension of sight and sound—the rain forests of the tropics.

UM to Add Computer Course to Program

UM will add a computer orientation course for engineers to its program of continuing education for Western Mass. residents this semester.

The 9-lecture course will stress the practical application of the computer to traditional as well as new engineering problems, and is open to all engineers in the area.

Co-sponsored by the Western Mass. branches of the American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE) and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers (ASME), the course will illustrate the reduction in computation time required in specific professional engineering situations.

The course will begin Oct. 7, Laboratory building. Classes will be conducted every Thursday evening, holidays excepted, until Dec. 16.

The first five lectures, dealing with programming and fundamentals of the 1620 computer will be delivered by Prof. John Goda of the University computer science staff.

They will be followed by four lectures by members of the civil and mechanical engineering faculty dealing with practical applications to engineering problems.

Fee for the non-credit program will be $15 for members of ASCE or ASME, and $20 for non-members. Checks should be made out to Western Mass Branch of ASCE or Western Mass Branch of ASME, and sent to George R. Higgins or Robert K. Patterson at the UMass Engineering Building, Amherst.

VP Aid at UMass

John G. Stewart, administrative assistant to Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, will speak at UM next Monday, Oct. 4.

The public lecture, "Breaking the Deadlock: U. S. Congress, 1965," is sponsored by the government Dept., and will be presented in the School of Business Administration building, room 120, at 8 p.m.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., Stewart was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Colgate Univ. in 1957. He received his masters degree from the Univ. of Chicago in 1959, and is currently a candidate at that university for his Ph.D. degree.

He became Humphrey's legislative assistant in 1962, and conducted research for the 1964 Humphrey campaign for the vice presidency. He became administrative assistant to the vice president earlier this year.

Robert Frost--A Four-College Library

Dedication of the new Robert Frost Library at Amherst College—now open for use by students and faculty has been scheduled for October 24, almost exactly two years after the day when the late President Kennedy participated at this ground breaking.

The ceremony, scheduled at the Library at 2:30 p.m., will include an address by Frederick H. Wagman, librarian at the University of Michigan, and remarks by poet Richard Wilbur and by John J. McCloy, chairman of the Amherst Board of Trustees. All three are graduates of the College. Participants will also include Amherst President Calvin H. Plimpton, College Librarian Newton F. McKeon, Prof. G. Armour Craig of the Amherst English Department and Harry W. Knight of New York, chairman of the Amherst Capital Program.

The Frost Library, the first general library in America to be named for a poet, replaces Amherst's Converse Library, which was erected in 1917 and became overcrowded and inadequate. It is the gift of an Amherst alumnus who contributed the $3.5 million required for construction and who agreed that the structure should be named for the late poet. Mr. Frost had a long association with the College as teacher and lecturer.

The Robert Frost Library may be used by students and teachers at Amherst College, by faculty members of Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges and the University of Massachusetts, and by students enrolled at those institutions who are taking courses at Amherst under the Four-College Cooperative Program. During the academic year an inter-library delivery service operates twice daily between the four institutions and during the summer three times a week. The Library also participates in the national inter-library loan system so that volumes not included in local collections can be secured for authorized borrowers.

Designed by the architectural firm of O'Connor and Kilham of New York and constructed by the George B. H. Macomber Co. of Boston, the Library now houses 370,000 volumes, but can accommodate 180,000 more. There are three stories above ground on the front (south) elevation, five to the rear, and a sub-basement below ground. If more book space is needed, the sub-basement can accommodate another 300,000 volumes, thereby providing a total potential capacity of more than 850,000 volumes. There are 60 faculty studies and 702 carrels and study places for undergraduates scattered throughout the Library's open stacks. The entire building is air conditioned.

Just inside the main entrance stands a bust of Robert Frost sculptured by Walker Hancock, and opposite the entrance, on the north wall, hangs the portrait of Mr. Frost by Gardner Cox, on loan to the College by the artist. To the left of the entrance are the circulation desk and general card catalog, and to the right is the periodical reading room. Administrative offices, the reference collection (including bibliography), and a typing area are also located on the main floor.

The College's Frost Collection is kept in one of the Special Collection Rooms on the A level (one floor below the main entrance). In this area, which replaces the Converse Library Rare Books Room, are several other collections, including a variety of manuscripts, papers, letters, and books of Emily Dickinson, William Wordsworth, Clyde Fitch, Leigh Hunt, Eugene O'Neill, and Richard Wilbur; the College's general collection of rare books and manuscripts; and the Lepidoptera and Drama Collections.

The Library is open from 8:00 a.m. to midnight Monday through Thursday, 8:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. on Friday, 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on Saturday, and 2:00 p.m. to midnight on Sunday.

Ground for the Library was broken October 26, 1963. Among those who took part in the ceremony was the late President Kennedy who said, "Libraries are memories, and in this library you will have the memory of an extraordinary American, but more than that, really, an extraordinary human being. Also, you will have the future, and all the young men who come into this library will touch something of distinction in our national life, and, I hope, give something to it."

Band To Salute Redmen

In honor of the Redmen and Coach Fusia the University of Massachusetts Marching Band will salute the mighty warriors and their chief tomorrow at the Buffalo game. Growing with the University have been the strength and the power of the mighty Metawampe who will be portrayed in one of the band's formations. Leading our Redmen to greater victories is head coach Vic Fusia, last year's N. E. coach of the year. His four years of leadership have brought our Redmen to an all-time high in Eastern Football Circles. The band's finale will be a traditional march, featuring "Them Basses".

Registrar Richard E. McLaughlin today reminded the motoring public that only two weeks remain in which to have motor vehicles inspected in compliance with the compulsory motor vehicle inspection law.

"Two-thirds of the inspection period have passed and to date only one-half of Massachusetts cars have been inspected and carry the green sticker on the lower right-hand corner of the windshield. This leaves approximately one million vehicles to be inspected during a two-week period," said Registrar McLaughlin.

"Motor vehicles without the green sticker and those which bear the red rejection sticker will have to be taken off the road after October 15

Afro Students.

Officers Elected

The African Students' Association (Amherst chapter) held its first meeting for the 1965-66 year last Thursday. The most significant accomplishment of the evening was the election of new executives: President: Mr. Aloysius Biribonwoha; Gen. Secretary: Mr. Sylvanus Odu-rukwe; Treasurer: Mr. Peter Makhambura; Social Secretary: Mr. George Gikonyo.

The African Students' Association is peculiar in that it is an R.S.O. organization but embraces the four colleges. Its aims are contained in the constitution are five-fold:

- To create a meeting ground for all African students enrolled at the four colleges,

- To foster the spirit of unity among African students,
- To bring African students together with people of other nationalities,
- To bring African students into direct confrontation with the needs and problems of the continent of Africa,
- To create an authentic platform for the dissemination of African culture.

Membership is at the moment thirty African students from nine different countries, plus six associate members who are non-African.

The Association in addition to throwing formal and informal parties organizes informal discussions on international issues.

UMass Crew Fights Despite Leaky Shell

by Dave Clarke, Sports Staff

UMass is on the water again. Not since 1871 has the university offered a rowing program to the student body. In 1870 this university put together a crew team that defeated a strong Amherst college crew and then the Mass. Aggies went on to defeat Harvard and Brown Universities in one of the biggest upsets ever recorded in the history of rowing. For one year the Mass Aggies reigned as the fastest crew in the country.

Presently the UMass crew is composed of about fifteen dedicated oarsmen who have been rowing from five to seven miles a day, classes permitting. To date their equipment consists of eight weathered oars, and a rather leaky vintage shell donated by Yale University.

The coach's launch is an even leakier row boat powered by a rented motor. The present crew house is a tobacco barn located near a mud bank on the Connecticut River, which is presently serving as their docking facilities.

They plan to continue rowing till it either becomes too dark or the river freezes over. Oarsmen do not mind snow. By next spring the crew hopes to be moving into better quarters and to have acquired better equipment.

Any student that feels he may be interested in rowing is invited to attend the crew meeting to be held this Monday, Oct. 4, in the Council Chambers of the Student Union. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. A film of the 1964 Tokyo Olympics will be shown.

Viet Leaders To Broadcast Live From Toronto

A committee of local citizens has made arrangements for live radio coverage of the foreign policy debates on Vietnam and the Dominican Republic on Saturday Oct. 9, 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The Four-College FM radio station, WFRG-FM (88.5mc), will carry the broadcast for Pioneer Valley listeners by means of a special hook-up with Toronto.

For Amherst residents without FM radios, a listening room has been set aside in the University Student Union on the day of the broadcast.

The Toronto debates will be international in representation, with spokesmen from both North and South Vietnam, the FLN (Vietcong), Cambodia England, the United States, and other countries. All speeches will be in English. This is probably the first opportunity most Americans have had to hear government leaders from Vietnam.

Sen. Neuberger to Discuss Welfare

Sen. Maurine B. Neuberger of Oregon, a leader in promoting federal social welfare legislation, will be at Amherst College October 6 to speak on "The Government Role in Public Health." Her talk is scheduled in Johnson Chapel at 8:00 p.m.

The first woman Senator elected from her state, Mrs. Neuberger has sponsored legislation dealing with Federal aid to schools, cancer research, grants for handicapped children, extended social security benefits, housing for lower income families and the aged, consumer protection against fraud and deception, conservation measures, maritime adjustment, and congressional reform. She is the author of the book, Smoke Screen: Tobacco and the Public Welfare published in 1964, and numerous articles in national magazines on consumer affairs, congressional reform, health and welfare, air pollution control, and natural resource conservation.

INTRAMURALS . . .

showdown will come next week when the Philosophers meet the Untouchables.

Tuesday's action saw a near upset of the Chadbourne Maroons by the Baker Barracudas. The Maroons trailed 2-0 at the half but they rallied their forces behind Olson's 3 TD passes to win 19-2.

THE GREENOUGH GRANTS
receptions and 3 TD's, scored an easy 31-13 decision over the Middlesex Braves. Ed Polchlopek was a one man show as he caught four passes, scored 3 TD's and completed nine of twenty passes as the Baker Bruins massacred the Chadbourne Eagles 32-0.

The Grayson Flaming A's scored an impressive 28-7 decision over the victory-starved Webster Rams as Verreault had nine receptions for the Flaming A's. The Grayson Aces remained Thatcher Hemlocks 25-7.

The Grayson Apples tipped the Webster Hawks 27-20 despite the fine passing of the Hawks' Fitzgerald and Ness. The pass catching combination of Oldham and Larvey combined for 14 receptions as the Thatcher Redwoods blanked the Grayson Phallics 25-0.

McDougall and Davis (13 receptions between them and scoring all their team's points) led the Mills Cherry to a 22-21 squeaker over the Berkshire Bengals. Jenkins 3 TD's led the Middlesex Redmen to a 24-12 win over the Brett Chestnuts.

IN OTHER DORM games the Plymouth Patriots downed the Mills Birch 19-12 and the Wheeler Trojans romped over Brett Slippery Elms 45-6.

BASEBALL OUTLOOK

by Richard Kurwin

As usual the American League season has been a one team race, while the National League has had four possible winners going into the final week. With four games remaining there are still two teams battling it out.

The only difference in the junior loop is that the Minnesota Twins, who nobody really expected to win, have upset the apperant and taken the pennant. The perennial top spot Yankees have fallen to the number six position.

Although the Giants led through most of the latter part of the season, a late rush by L. A. has put the Dodgers on top by two games with only four games left.

The Giants must lose no more than two out of their remaining games while the Dodgers drop four, or the Giants must win all of them while the Dodgers drop two for three to be a tie. Should this improbable tie occur the Giants have the edge for they have never lost to the Dodgers in post season playoffs throughout their long rivalry.

Cincinnati, a strong pre-season pick for top honors, has been dropped to the number three spot, but they still play an important role in the race. They open their next series against none other than the Giants. Milwaukee is the other key team playing the Dodgers.

The American league has been a major disappointment this year. Along with a fairly dull race, there have been few outstanding players. Jim Grant has won twenty-one games, but there are no other twenty game winners.

The batting championship was won by Tony Oliva with an average less than .325. The next highest average is around .310. There has also been a desparingly few number of home runs with the highest being 32 at this moment from Tony Conigliaro.

Even with the rather feeble output from the American League as compared to the senior loop, it still would be nice to return the flag to where it has been for most of the last years. If St. Louis could beat the omni-potent Yankees last fall, then the power slugging Twins could beat the Dodgers in the 6th game of the Oct. classic.

FOOTBALL . . .

son jitters and ready to show that it can perform to the expectation of Redmen followers.

It will take a top effort by UMass to defeat Coach Dick Offenhamer's Buffalo team. The Bulls are hungry for their first victory of the season, following a loss to powerful Boston College and a tie with Tampa, and have the material to fight the good fight with the Redmen Matadors.

Unlike UMass' previous opponents this season, the Bulls are loaded with beef. Buffalo will match the Redmen pound for pound in the line and will prove very difficult to run against.

Spearheading the Bulls' forward wall is All-American candidate E. Greenard Poles, an aggressive and heavy (230 lb.) tackkle who runs like a halfback. Poles is accompanied on the Buffalo defensive unit by a host of equally strong, large and tenacious Bulls.

Included in the Buffalo defensive herd is middle linebacker and captain Joe Holly, another potential All-American, who is very highly esteemed among Buffalo fans but not by the enemy ball-carriers who endure the bruises he inflicts.

Coach Offenhamer has placed ten lettermen on his defensive unit, while relying greatly on sophomores to run the Buffalo offense.

Sophomore Rick Wells, the Bull quarterback, likes to run with the ball and is very dangerous after turning the corner. Passing is not a Wells forte, however, and the Bulls' offense depends on a strong running game. A heavy, mobile line will do the blocking for Wells and running backs Tom Hurd and Dennis Przykuta.

Fusia, less Landry & company will have their hands full Saturday in what could be the most exciting Bull session of the year.

AEPi Shocks Kappa Sig in Biggest Upset of Season

Redmen Prep for Rick Wells, Buffalo QB

by Dave Jarnes

The mighty have fallen! AEP turned in a stout defensive performance to edge the defending champion KS team 6-2. The two KS quarterbacks could only complete 4 passes in 26 attempts. Ace pass receiver Jim Neary had only one reception. If the last two games are any barometer, the Kappa Sig's have real problems in the quarterback position. Paul Feinburg, who received a broken jaw in this hard-hitting affair, Bruce Krasker, and Howie Schlosberg were defensive standouts for the victors. John Parnell scored the only touchdown of the game.

PSD rolled over a hapless SAM club 47-20 as Benson broke the intramural record by scoring 27 points. BKP romped to its third straight win 40-0 as Vic Larkin was once again impressive with 11 for 21 and 5 TD passes.

McShane staged an impressive offensive show by completing 14 of 19 for 5 TD's as TC topped ZN 34-24. SPE won its third straight by beating TEP 32-13. Miller (18-32 5 TD's) was outstanding for Sig Ep. Jim Donahue riddled the QTV defenses by throwing for 3 TD's and scoring two himself as LCA remained undefeated by winning 34-21.

ASP, which nearly upset KS Monday, fell victim to TKE and their fine quarterback, Garbutt (19-29, 4 TD's) to the tune of 25-0. In a battle of the also-rans, ATG edged PSK 6-2 in a defensive game.

The Hills North Hoovers had their third straight one-point victory by squeaking by the Hills South Hi-Lo's 7-6. Another tight one saw the Gorman Oaks eke out a 14-13 win over the Gorman Pines as Dudek completed 11 of 17 for the winners.

THE HICKS WALKED over the Butterfield Limes 33-6 as Pedro (8-14, 5 TD's) and Butler (6 receptions, 3 for TD's) starred. Rounding out Wednesday's dorm action the Butterfield Lemons were victorious over the Gorman Maples 15-6.

Turning to independent action the Untouchables continued to live up to their name by clobbering the winless College St. A.C. 33-0. Police threw four TD's all to Pete Bernard. The Philosophers' Smith scored all his team's points in an 18-6 win over the Banshees. The big

The UMass varsity eleven will show what it is made of Saturday when a herd of Bulls from the University of Buffalo stampedes into Alumni Stadium.

The Maine game did not truly indicate the quality of the Redmen. Coach Fusia's teams are perennial slow starters, for some unknown reason, and this year's club was no exception. The Redmen could not shift out of first gear against the Black Bears, and, before they could get the necessary lubrication, Fusia's boys found themselves in jeopardy of losing the beanpot.

Against AIC, the Redmen tried to show that their loss to Maine was unjustified. True, UMass won the game 41-0, but considering the weakness of their opponent, Redmen fans will certainly not remember the AIC game as a display of superior football by their idols.

Former CIA Director First DVP Speaker

Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, Jr., former executive director of the Central Intelligence Agency, will speak on "The Central Intelligence Agency and National Security" Monday, Oct. 4, at 8 p.m.

A native of Rochester, N. Y., Mr. Kirkpatrick is a graduate of Deerfield Academy and Princeton University's School of Public and International Affairs.

Prior to World War II, he worked for the U. S. News Publishing Corporation, and during the war he served in the Office of Strategic Services and with the staff of General Omar Bradley's 12th Army Group as Intelligence Briefing Officer.

At the end of World War II, he returned briefly to the U. S. News as an editor of "World Report," and then joined the staff of the Central Intelligence Agency.

In the CIA he served in a variety of positions, including division chief, assistant director, executive assistant to the director, inspector general and executive director. He resigned from the CIA several weeks ago to accept a position at Brown University as professor of political science.

In June, 1964, he received the President's Award for Distinguished Federal Civilian Service, the highest award that can be bestowed on civilians for the U. S. Government service.

first guest this school year to address the University community under the student-sponsored Distinguished Visitors Program.

The Distinguished Visitors Program was established by the student body as a means of bringing to the campus "outstanding persons in the various fields of human endeavor." Stipends for speakers are provided out of student tax funds voted by the Student Senate.

The program is administered by representatives from the student body, University's trustees, faculty, administration, and Associate Alumni.

by Ellen Levine,
News Editor

In 1960 the Massachusetts' house passed on to the Senate a bill to establish a $17 million medical school in Boston, as a branch to the University of Massachusetts.

After Legislative approval of the proposed Medical School, investigation, debate and controversy ended with the decision by the Board of Trustees of the University to place such an addition to the school in Worcester.

The events leading up to the decision were marked by many developments.

Booze, Allen consultants researched the many possible locations for a Med School. Their results placed Amherst at the top of the list followed by Springfield, Suburban Boston and Worcester.

Optimistic faculty and citizen interest groups began to anticipate eventual construction on the UM campus. However, in a 12-10 vote, the Board of Trustees selected Worcester as the site for the medical addition to the University.

The decision led not only to student and faculty disapproval but more noticeably, to active protest by the citizens of Amherst, who under the leadership of Dr. Albert Goss of the UM Psychology Dept. and other UM faculty members undertook to convince the Board of Trustees to re-consider their initial decision.

In a number of Citizen's Committee reports, the group repeatedly listed their many reasons for the location of the Medical School in Amherst.

At a Press Conference in Amherst late in July the Committee summed up to members of the communication media their views on the Med School site and their hope that the Trustees, who were meeting the following week, would reconsider.

Dr. Goss, at this conference, called the idea of building a Med School elsewhere than Amherst a "strip tease". The result he said "would be a stripped university."

Faculty members of the University, including Dr. Thomas Wilkinson, Sociology, Dr. Harold Rauch, Zoology and Dr. Louis Price, Behavioral Sciences expressed their opinion that the Med School was necessary if the Amherst campus was going to be the site of a complete, integrated, whole university.

On Wed., July 28, the Board of Trustees met in Boston to hear appeals to their decision of June 11 to place the Med School in Worcester.

Chairman Frank I. Royden opened the meeting and recognized a delegation of state legislators headed by John F. Thompson. The former speaker remarked that for many years both political parties had forseen UM as a strong and great institution of learning. "Now, he continued, all this is seriously threatened by the decision to place the Med School in Worcester."

Delegations were also heard representing the academic deans, faculty senate, Worcester, and the Amherst Citizen's Committee.

The meeting was continued the following week and at that time the Board of Trustees voted 12-10 not to reconsider its decision of June 11 to locate the proposed Med School in the city of Worcester.

Later the Board of Trustees formally approved a proposal to locate the multi-million dollar Med School on the grounds of the Worcester State Hospital.

At that time a three stage development plan was outlined.

During the next year a small Med School staff would be recruited and would draw specific recommendations aimed at obtaining matching federal funds.

The next 2 1/2 years would be devoted to completion of architects' work.

The final year would see the complex occupied and equipped and the faculty brought up to full strength.

Also approved was a $2,784,000 Med School budget for submission to the State Legislature. The budget would be for the fiscal year that began July 1.

The Citizen's Committee, although relatively inactive, during the summer months, following the Trustees refusal to reconsider, is now contemplating further action for the future.

Dr. Goss has restated the original aims of the committee;

- push for a Willis type commission to survey health care needs of the Commonwealth — including the obligation to continue the location of the first Med School and decide when and where a second Med School should be located.

- explore the possibility of a simultaneous Med School program.

Buffalo Bulls Stampede 18-6 Over UM Redmen

by Howie Davis,

Sports Editor

A stampede of Bulls from the University of Buffalo struck for two first period touchdowns and then dug in to beat the University of Massachusetts 18-6.

In the first quarter, Paul Milnar, the UMass punter, was forced to kick from his own seven yard line. The punt was taken by Buffalo's Hurd and returned to the Redmen 12. Rick Wells, the Bulls quarterback, took it in for a TD four plays later.

Later in the quarter, another short punt set up what was to be the second Buffalo touchdown. With Terry Swanson doing the kicking, a 25 yard punt was downed on the Buffalo 33. Two plays later Wells hit his end Ashley on a look-in pass. The end outran the secondary 54 yds. for a 6-pointer.

THE REDMEN scored their lone touchdown with no time left on the clock in the first half. UM quarterback hit Swanson on a 53 yd. pass to the Buffalo four. Landry hit fullback Dick Benoit for the TD.

The second half looked like a different story. The Redmen defense, led by Bob Santucci, Bernie Dallas and Dave Kelley, was fired up to the extent that the Bulls were only able to muster two first downs in that stanza.

Buffalo's socker - style place kicker, Ocsodal, boomed a 28 yd field goal with less than five minutes remaining in the game to close out the scoring.

UM had the opportunities, but couldn't capitalize. In the third quarter Landry hit end Milt Morin with a pass that carried to and a hospital on campus along with schools in other health related professions such as dental, nursing and veterinary medicine, the University will not achieve stature as a major institution and the health care needs of western Mass. will not be met adequately," said Dr. Goss.

Dean Soutter, Dean of the Med School issued a memo that suggests two Med Schools, the first built here in Amherst and the second in suburban Boston.

The ending to a story that began with the recommendation of an Education Committee to the Legislature early in 1960 has not yet been written.

Volunteer Firemen To Give Displays

by Alan Grigsby,
Police Reporter

As a part of Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 3-9, the UMass Volunteer Fire Department will offer fire extinguisher training, present displays in the Student Union and give coloring posters to the Marks Meadow school, said Chief Leon Alford.

He announced that any campus group, especially those fraternities and sororities with wooden structures, should obtain instruction in the proper use of various fire extinguishers. Dry chemical, carbon dioxide, soda and acid, and pressurized water extinguishers will be demonstrated by a member of the UMass fire department on pots of oil and piles of rubbish simulating various fires, he said. Those interested in this training should contact Mr. Edmund Goetzl, Fire and Safety Officer on extension 2123.

As far as fire prevention on campus goes, he said, safety rules to remember are:

- Do not smoke in bed.
- Use large ashtrays.

- Use metal wastebaskets.
- Use heavy duty plugs in rooms.
- No extension cords for dryers.
- No illegal electrical equipment.

- No open flames (i.e. candles).

Other activities on campus include, Alford added, two men from the University fire department that man the rescue truck during home football games to administer first aid and provide fire protection. The truck, he said, is loaned to us from the Amherst Fire Department and is driven by one of their men.

Alford concluded by giving a breakdown of the time spent by the students during last year, man hours spent at fires 695, man hours at drills and meetings was 424, and man hours at other functions was 127.

Trotting to Music...

"My God, half a building just rode by!"

This was the reaction of a professor as he saw half a mobile unit being driven past his Bartlett classroom window last winter. Five white aluminum units brought in halves to the UMass campus are located near the building.

Day or evening, music and singing emanate from Trailer Haven, a "temporary" headquarters for the music department—until the expected construction of a Fine Arts Building in 1968. The Old Chapel, formerly used for this purpose, is now a practice area and still houses the music library.

The interior of each mobile unit is attractive. The offices are well-furnished and carpeted as well as having fans and electric heating.

"Rage, rage against The Dying of the Light"

Mr. Willis was back again. Over the last few years, he had entered the hospital innumerable times with a diagnosis of diabetes, asthma, nephritis, hardening of the arteries and heart failure.

This time, the doctors added another condition to his massive list of ailments: multiple fractures. For Mr. Willis had jumped out of the second story floor of a nursing home.

Why?

Medical advances have lengthened life expectancy, but because we haven't dealt with the problems of old age, many people don't want to live long lives.

LIFE, AS WE HAVE ARRANGED IT, offers little taste of honey to the old. What does it offer? Pain. Suffering. Worry. A feeling of uselessness. Idleness. Loneliness.

Often, the spouses of older citizens are dead or they are unable to live with them. One woman, Bessie Miller, languished in a hospital for months with a severe heart condition. The social worker suggested that she and her husband both enter a nursing home. Her husband refused. He wanted his wife to come home. But she couldn't take care of herself, let alone him.

ONE MORNING, a nurse found Bessie crying. When asked the reason for her tears, Bessie sobbed, "There's no one to cook for my husband."

As these people approach old age, their friends and relatives begin to die. They are left very much alone. Aznive Azadian, a sixty-year old Armenian exile, wrote this letter to a friend a few weeks after her discharge from a psychiatric hospital.

"I was planning to go to work in March. But a cousin of mine who was a major in the Air Force he got killed in a crash. This put me all the way back. It was his choyce he wanted to be what he was. I say this million time but still it hearts too much. I feel very close to him because I do not have any sisters, brothers no body. Please excuse me for telling you all my troubles. Once I get read of this awful feeling I'll be fine."

So old age is not usually a peaceful and contented period. The image of a grey-haired old lady surrounded by loving grandchildren is all too unrealistic. More often, these people spend their last years alone, suffering and preoccupied with death. Nurses cannot count the number of times they have heard statements such as these.

"Just lay me down and let me die. There's nothing left in this world for me."

"My life is over."

One patient, because of a stroke, was disoriented. She still expressed the death wish.

"I was coming home from the graveyard last night and I got tired, so I laid down in the cemetery and fell asleep."

Dr. Robert W. Gage, Director of Student Health Services at the Infirmary, believes that this problem will become increasingly serious as a larger number of people reach old age. In order to help these people, we must find significant activities for them. Older citizens need a purpose in life to relieve their hopelessness.

Once these older people find a relevancy in life, some of their other problems will be solved.

ARTERIES MAY CONTINUE TO HARDEN, but the spirit will be flexible enough to adjust.

The health profession, Dr. Gage believes, must do more than care for run-down bodies; they must care for run-down spirits as well.

Are we going to help these grandparents, or must future oldsters continue to express the bitterness of old age as Mrs. Sangster did:

"You remember how things were while you're waiting to die, and the taste comes to you and it isn't sickly and the smell comes to you and it doesn't stench. Oh God, before my memories fill me too, take me home."

Of Peaceful Antagonism

The picket line and strike have long been the favorite weapons of labor, and in the 1940's Ghandi proved the effectiveness of non-violent revolution, but it is the 1960's that have witnessed the true arrival of what future historians may label as the era of peaceful antagonism.

Demonstrations, from the picket lines to sit-ins, seem to have become the chief means of trying to solve all problems. The great March on Washington of a few years ago and the student riots at Berkeley are only two examples of the many incidents of public protest which can be cited. Many communities, schools, and offices are finding that principles, laws, and regulations they have always considered legitimate are now being questioned and scrutinized by others.

Two factors are thus pointed out by this huge wave of demonstrations:

1) A growing political and social awareness among citizens of the United States. This is especially true of students and Negroes, two large but formerly powerless groups, who now realize the influence they can have on society by joining their numbers into united and active organizations.

2) Coinciding with the above is a widening gap between the various social groups that comprise American life. The average middle class American no longer sees the slums and oppression near his home, or, if he does, considers them completely irrelevant to his own security. Thus, it is becoming increasingly more difficult to solve modern day problems through the old methods of conciliation and compromise, such as the conference table, simply because the members thereof often do not recognize that the problems exist.

Whenever a social group feels that its attempts at betterment are being frustrated, whenever all other channels of communication are closed, whenever there is no other way to bring its troubles to the attention of the general populace, the ultimate resort is always public demonstration. Hence, when members of a school board refuse to discuss de facto segregation in educational institutions, Negroes will protest until said school board members are compelled to sit down and talk about the situation; and when a college administration refuses to recognize political freedoms on campus, students will riot until said administration is also compelled to sit down and do something about the problem.

An obvious solution would be to activate boards and panels consisting of members of the conflicting groups, whether it be students and professors or Negroes and whites. But the frailty of human nature usually complicates such simple proposals. Therefore, it appears that the protests, riots, marches, sit-ins, sit-downs, and demonstrations will be continuing for a long, long time.

Will the Real You Please Stand Up?

You say that you always wanted to meet other people. You see that you were really nothing more than a social animal. Communication with many or with one in particular, you realize, was your social life, and at times you found this more a necessity than anything. Then what was it that made social life so important? You wonder how it lasted.

When a school has a population of about twelve thousand you had to survive somehow. The thing you usually did was to identify yourself with a clique, fraternity, sorority, or some organization. It was a war of survival; you against twelve thousand. How simple it was.

For this reason, then, you found yourself doing almost anything to be accepted. Usually you began to dress in a particular fashion; you began to associate with only certain people; you began to form a new language. In short, you had conformed whether it was to your liking or not. You had made the decision: to sacrifice your old moral code for a new one.

For the next year or two you believed you had found the answer. Many you could have called your friend. You had a place to go to on Saturday night and someone to go with. Finally, you had been accepted and had the security of knowing it. How satisfying. No worries had you.

Then as time went on, let us say by your senior year, you began to ask certain questions. Doubt began to creep in, and you found yourself asking whether it was worth it or not. Maybe your old friends were your real friends. Maybe your old dress was more comfortable. Maybe your own personality was more suitable. Maybe your old self was your own self.

You now see that you had learned a valuable lesson—sincerity. How discouraged you are now because so many around you have not learned the same. Now and only now do you have the rights to say, "what a pity!"

Old Dorms Unite!

It seems like everyone is moving into new residence halls now-a-days. A new experiment in living is spreading over the college campus. Dorm profs have become the ideal. All a student has to do is roll out of bed and amble down the hall to the nearest study lounge. Presto! At eight o'clock the dorm is transformed into the classroom. Students are made to feel like citizens working in a growing community. They eat together; study together, socialize together. This is indeed an excellent way to build a sense of responsibility in a person.

BUT WHAT ABOUT THOSE OTHER STUDENTS? You know, the ones who are living in the slightly mellowed dorms of UMass. What is being done to give them that spirit of belonging? Not enough! However, this fault does not lie with the faculty, on the contrary, it lies with the students.

We are living in an age of protest and participation. So, if students in the old dorms want to swing with the rest of the campus, they've got to regain that spirit they once had. Most dorms offer various programs throughout the year—faculty teas, guest speakers, sings, mixers. The first activity generally goes well, but by the middle of October counselors are usually down on their hands and knees begging kids to participate. After all what poet likes to read his works to an audience of one?

Although the students at UMass are kept pretty busy with scholastics everyone should become involved in some activity within their dorm. The new dorms have been getting all the headlines lately. Let's show UMass that the Old Dormers are in step with the times too!

Attention Commuters!

To the commuters:

Are you aware that the commuting students comprise 10% of the student body?

Are you aware that there is an organization on campus interested in the needs of these commuting students? This organization, the Non-Resident Student Association, could be a powerful force in working for the commuters in trying to secure their needs. There is certainly enough complaining about parking conditions, and the need for a facility for commuters on campus, yet few people are interested in working to help solve these problems. Mailboxes, and an official bulletin board located outside the Lodge in the Student Union have been secured for commuter use. This is only a beginning much more could be done.

Are you aware that there are six senators elected to represent the commuters? It is hoped that the newly elected senators, as well as the incumbents, will take an active interest in the constituency that elected them by showing an interest in, and working through the NRSA.

A handful of people cannot speak effectively for 1400 students, we need the support of all the commuters. What can you lose by supporting the NRSA? Judging from the facilities which the commuters have thus far obtained on this campus, Nothing!

Kick the dull driving habit. Step out in a lively Dodge Coronet.

Isn't it time you joined the Dodge Rebellion?

Forget all you've seen and heard about '66 cars. Because Coronet is here . . . sharp, smart and sassy, the greatest thing from Dodge since Year One. Loaded with luxury the higher-priced cars haven't caught onto yet. With a choice of five engines, each one designed to make the walls of Dullsville come tumbling down. And with a whole slew of standard equipment that used to cost extra. Like an outside rear view mirror. A padded dash for extra safety. Variable-speed electric windshield wipers and washers. Backup lights. Turn signals. Seat belts, two front and two rear. And, as some extra frosting on the Coronet cake a 5-year or 50,000-mile warranty.*

Enough said to get you really tempted? Now let's get away from the look-alike, drive-alike, first-cousin cars with Coronet, a car with a lively personality all its own.

CHRYSLER MOTORS CORPORATION

'66 Dodge Coronet

*HERE'S HOW DODGE'S 5-YEAR, 50,000-MILE ENGINE AND DRIVE TRAIN WARRANTY PROTECTS YOU: Chrysler Corporation confidently warrants all of the following vital parts of its 1966 cars for 5 years or 50,000 miles, whichever comes first, during which time any such parts that prove defective in material and workmanship will be replaced or repaired at a Chrysler Motors Corporation Authorized Dealer's place of business without charge for such parts or labor: engine block, head and internal parts, intake manifold, water pump, transmission case and internal parts (excepting manual clutch), torque converter, drive shaft, universal joints, rear axle and differential, and rear wheel bearings.

REQUIRED MAINTENANCE: The following maintenance services are required under the warranty—change engine oil every 3 months or 4,000 miles, whichever comes first; replace oil filter every second oil change; clean carburetor air filter every 6 months and replace it every 2 years; and every 6 months furnish evidence of this required service to a Chrysler Motors Corporation Authorized Dealer and request him to certify receipt of such evidence and your car's mileage. Simple enough for such important protection.

Dick Rader and for Pitt, Eric Crabtree scored a trio with a 43 yard reception, a 71 yard run from scrimmage, and a 92 yard kickoff return. Pitt trailed at halftime 28-20 and scored two each in the last two periods. West Virginia was held to one TD in the third stanza, but notched four in the final period for an astronomical total of 111 points.

The week's top 15 shapes up with Texas, 27-12 victor over Indiana, in first place, Nebraska, 44-0 shutout over Iowa State in second Arkansas, 28-0 over TCU, in third. Followed by Georgia, Michigan State, Duke, Mississippi State, Southern California who dumped conference rivals Oregon State 26-12 Saturday night, Florida, Notre Dame, Alabama, West Virginia, Oregon, Syracuse, and Purdue.

Student Aid Needed for Northampton Hospital

The Northampton State Hospital provides care for the mentally ill and retarded. The hospital's aim is to serve the special needs of every individual patient. To provide this care, the hospital has many specialized facilities.

Northampton houses 2600 patients. The great majority of these remain confined on the hospital grounds year round, many abandoned by their families. Thus, they lose contact with the outer world and the reality that goes with it. When this occurs, these patients lose their determination to recover and to return to society.

This should not happen. But a limited staff trying to cope with 2600 patients can not provide completely adequate treatment. With intensive care, many of these patients can be helped. This year volunteers from eight colleges are converging on the hospital to help. Their presence brings the patients into contact with new faces while it relieves the staff of some of the burden of caring for the less serious cases. The colleges represented in this program are UMass, Amherst, Smith, Mount Holyoke, Springfield College, Holyoke Junior College, AIC, and Our Lady of the Elms College. No experience is needed, and there is a variety of programs open to volunteers, ranging from dance therapy, remediation, and recreation therapy (including bowling, billiards, and cards), to individual case aid.

On Tuesday, Oct. 5, there will be a special Orientation Night at the Northampton State Hospital. Rides will leave from the S.U. lobby at 5:30 p.m. Sandwiches and coffee will be served, followed by a short tour and a meeting to learn about the various activities offered. Interested students may sign up on the Northampton Volunteers Sign-Up Sheet in the main lobby of the S.U.

Priest Held By Russians To Address Newman Club

Father Walter Ciszek, S. J., for many years a prisoner of war behind the Iron Curtain, will be the main speaker at a Newman Club General Meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 5th at 8:00 p.m. in the Newman Center social hall.

Father Ciszek returned to the United States on October 12, 1964, after nearly 24 years in Siberia.

Father Ciszek, a native of Shendoah, Penn., was ordained in the Byzantine rite in 1938 in Rome and, after volunteering, was sent to Poland.

After the Russians took over his sector of Poland and turned the Jesuit Mission into a dance hall, Father Ciszek crossed into Russia in 1940 to work as a priest among those deported to the lumber camps in the Ural Mountains.

Arrested there and sent to Moscow's Lubyanka prison, he was sentenced to hard labor in the Siberian concentration camp.

Until 1955, he had been officially presumed dead. In 1955, however, news came through that he was still alive. Last October, Father Ciszek was returned to the United States in exchange for two Soviet agents.

Bombers Win No. 2

by Al Rice

Jerry Whelchel continued to prove his talent in pro football by directing the Holyoke Bombers to four touchdowns in their second win of the year 27-21 over the Harrisburg Capitols Saturday night in Holyoke.

The ex-UMass star threw a nine yard TD pass to Jack Janiszewski in the first period and directed scoring marches of 73 and 72 yards in the second quarter with halfback Mel Meek scoring at the end of each. Meeks bulldozed two yards for the first and then scampered 29 yards for the second one. Bombers' newcomer Chuck Markham kicked the points after Meeks' pair but had his attempt on the first TD blocked.

Whelchel added to his lead with another long drive early in the third period that finished the evening's performance of the Bombers offensive unit. The defense took over and held on in the last period when Harrisburg scored two more. The Caps had been able to generate no offense at all in the middle two periods, but they got untracked midway through the fourth and rolled downfield 74 yards with halfback Willie Holland, the league's fourth leading rusher, busting three yards for the score.

A Holyoke fumble deep in their own territory led to the second score by the visitors in the last quarter. Pete Pompey raced 15 yards for the TD and Ollie Ross, the Caps triple

Purdue Ties SMU; Texas, Arkansas, Nebraska Win

by Al Rice

The list of unbeaten college football teams around the nation after Saturday's action got blown apart with the force of a 50 megaton nuclear explosion. The Big 3, Texas, Nebraska, and Arkansas, all came through the day in their usual fashion, but the rest of the top ten had a rough time.

Baylor, Boston College, Clemson, Kentucky, Louisiana State, Michigan, Purdue, and Washington State all had perfect records smashed. Only Michigan was bumped out by another unbeaten team, the surprising Georgia Bulldogs. Purdue managed a tie, but considering it was with Southern Methodist, they are hiding their faces as much as Washington State, losers 17-13 after two wins over Big 10 teams.

Last week's number four and five teams from the Southeastern Conference both dropped their unbeaten status in league play which presently leaves Georgia and Mississippi State in the driver's seat. Louisiana State fumbled twice too close to the goal line and it cost them a 14-7 game to Florida who already had a loss to unbeaten Miss. State.

Kentucky had its strong passing attack working enough for three touchdowns but they couldn't stop Auburn's Tom Bryan who directed a balanced passing and running attack as the Wildcats suffered a 23-18 loss. Alabama kept in the running for the league title by beating Mississippi but it took ten points in the final period to do it 17-16. The margin of victory was an extra point to Steve Sloan's touchdown with 1:19 left to play that the Tide's never miss kicker David Ray booted across. Ray's foot accounted for 59 points last season and 19 so far in 1965.

A pair of Big 10 schools fired poorly Saturday as have most of the Big 10 outfits all season in inter-conference play. Purdue managed a touchdown in the third and fourth periods to tie the dormats of the Southwest, Southern Methodist, and it was only by blocking a field goal late in the game that salvaged that much for the Boilermakers.

Michigan lost only once last year and was the pick of many as power of the year in the Big 10, but they looked below par in their first two games even though they won. Georgia, one of the very few SEC teams in years to go into the north country, showed Michigan they didn't belong in the top 10 by beating them 15-7. Running quarterback Preston Rhulehuber's 22 yard scamper in the fourth period set up the go-ahead touchdown. He then threw to Pat Hodgston for the score. Hodgston caught the conversion pass two weeks ago that stunned Alabama.

Though things were glum in Ann Arbor, in East Lansing, Michigan State behind Steve Juday, odds on choice for All-Big 10 quarterback this year, beat conference foe Illinois by ten points to stay unbeaten and move up in the rankings. Another win by Duke assured the Blue Devils they also will be climbing up this week. They creamed Rice 41-21 and have scored 82 points in three games. Scotty Glacken threw three scoring passes to Dave Dana in a game that had only two second half touchdowns. Glacken threw only seven TD's all last season.

There was a game in Morgantown, West Virginia that didn't lack for scoring in the second half, however. And how it didn't lack! The two teams have been meeting each other off and on for 60 years and the series has come to be one of the throw the book away rivalries. So instead of throwing the book away, they wrote a new one. West Virginia went into the game third in the country in scoring, second in total offense, and sixth in passing offense. Pittsburgh had a rightly regarded thrower in Kenny Lucas and not much else.

The 35,000 people at the game saw what they expected but on a little bit larger scale. Allen McCune outdueled Lucas with five touchdown tosses and one scored to two and one for Lucas in a 63-48 win for the Mountaineers. McCune threw three to

by Rob Gilbert

On October 8, the University of Massachusetts Freshman Football team makes its debut versus Rhode Island.

This 2:30 contest, to be staged at Alumni Stadium, will test the efforts of the forty-five man squad after only ten practice sessions.

The Massachusetts Freshman Football program allows only three workouts per week so as not to overburden the Frosh athletes so early in their college careers. Nevertheless, this system, under the supervision of Coach Frank Shields, has continued to produce well drilled, winning teams. The 1965 squad will be out to extend the UMass Freshman unbeaten record over Yankee Conference rivals to six years.

This year's roster presents promising prospects at every position. The ends are led by Steve Freeland, Bill Manning, Randy Robinson, and Nick Warnock. Most notable at tackle are Joe Amico, Don Collins, Bob Crotty, and Ed Sherman. The guard squad consists of George Crane, Jim Creek, Al Gasuk, Charles Hersey, Jim Passanisi, and Noel Schablik.

The middle of the line is bolstered by Chris Crosbie, John Jerszyk, and Brian Silveira. Among a "good crop" of halfbacks are Steve Chew, Tim Driscoll, Tim Schmitt, Paul Vaccaro, and Al Yesue. There is quite a bit of depth at the fullback slot with Bruce Cochran, Ben Freitas, Dan Mazzola, Joe Serafini, and Tom Wales all set for action. The starting quarterback position is still being contested between Ron Coltin, Pete Foote, Mike McArdle, and Frank Tavolacci.

The Frosh will be put to a rigorous test when they contest Rhode Island this Friday and then immediately swing into action the following Tuesday, again at home, with the opponent being Boston University. These two contests will surely determine the ability and depth of the squad since both opponents are boasting of their best Frosh teams in recent years.

had a tough time before subduing the Chadbourne Eagles 13-12.

Lynch (13-19, 3 TD's) played his first game at quarterback and sparked the league-leading Plymouth Patriots to a 33-13 whipping of the Brett Chestnuts. Mills Cherry remained in a first place tie with the Patriots with a 27-0 whitewashing of the Brett Slippery Elms as Gibbons starred (18-25, 3 TD's).

The Middlesex Redmen were led by Ahern's 5 TD passes in their 31-13 win over the Wheeler Trojans. The Berkshire Bengals absorbed their third straight defeat, 25-12, at the hands of Mills Birch as Conry caught 10 passes for the winners.

In independent action the rapidly improving Charley Browns were victorious over the Vets by the score of 25-12. Ricci only completed 5 passes, but four of them went for touchdowns. The Hampshire Hardnoses defended the Chem Club to the tune of 20-6 by allowing only 5 completions in 30 attempts.

Courtesy Taxi stopped the Inn Keepers offense cold with a 19-0 decision. In a battle of winless teams UM band edged the Bugers 19-8.

With the touch football season about one-third gone every league on Campus is still up for grabs. Crucial games among the contenders will sift out the champions. Several such games will transpire this coming week. Keynoting these games will be Monday's battle between the Philosophers and the Untouchables in the Independent league. LCA vs. TC and BKP vs. AEP highlight the fraternity program.

Remember, Lacrosse team entries must be in by this Wednesday, October 6. The intramural cross-country meet will be held on Saturday, October 16th (Homecoming Day) at 11 A.M. Awards will be given the Campus team champion and the first three individual finishers.

the Bulls five. The only trouble was that Morin fumbled when he was tackled.

With only seconds gone in the final period, the Redmen had a first and goal situation at the Buffalo seven. Landry fired to Morin in the end zone, but the big end couldn't hang on to the pigskin. The ball slipped out of Morin's hands into the hands of Buffalo's defender, Capuana, for a touchback.

UMASS WAS HURT in this game with the 15 yd. penalty. Early in the game Landry hit Morin for 28 yards to the Buffalo 35 yd. line, but the play was nullified by a clipping penalty.

In the first half alone Landry was forced to eat the ball eight times for 51 yds. in losses. This was the first game of the season that the soph quarterback lacked good pass protection.

Many of Landry's bombs were on the button, but his receivers couldn't hold on to them. The Redmen lost two of four fumbles and were intercepted twice.

Dick Cain, promoted to second string quarterback, tried to spell Landry for a while, but was equally unsuccessful in sustaining a drive...

Once again the attendance (10,200) was far less than expected...

After the game head coach Fusia said that the Redmen are primarily a soph-junior ballclub and the inexperience is hurting the team. He also said that the story of the game was the costly mistakes in critical situations.

The University of Buffalo is now 1-1-1 on the season and 1-1 in their series with UM. The two teams will not play again until 1968. The Redmen are 1-2 and face Yankee Conference foe Connecticut at Storrs next week.

Intramural Report

by David James

After a wild week featured by many upsets, near upsets, and records broken, Thursdays games were relatively quiet with few surprises. However, a record was set for most participants (274) for a single night's program, which again emphasizes this year's enthusiasm.

In the north dorm league both Webster teams scored their first wins of the season. The Rams won their first game in two years of competition by edging the Grayson Apples 13-12. Heatherly did a good job for the Rams at quarterback by completing 12 of 18. Meanwhile, their compatriots, the Hawks, trounced the Thatcher Hemlocks 26-6.

The Grayson Aces passing-combination of Rossi and Thomas again proved to be the difference as the Aces maintained their league lead with a 26-13 win over the Grayson Phallics. A balanced attack enabled the Grayson Flaming A's to keep pace with the Aces by topping the Thatcher Redwoods 31-20 despite the efforts of league leading passer Knight (14-2) and league leading receiver Larvey (9 receptions, 3 for TD's).

The Chaddourne Maroons continued to show their power with a 24-0 victory over the Baker Bruins. The Maroons don't have any individual stars, but they do have a balanced offensive attack and a defense which has yet to allow an opponent to cross its goal line in three games.

Bill Thomas caught 8 passes and Earl Richardson completed 13-24 for the Greenough Garfields, but it wasn't enough to beat the strong Baker Barracudas, who scored a 20-6 decision. The Baker Buffaloes remained undefeated with a 26-6 win over the Middlesex Braves. Also remaining unbeaten were the Greenough Giants, who

Washington Aide Praises LBJ's Congressional Moves

by Pat Petow,
Staff Reporter

"Breaking the Deadlock: U. S. Congress, 1965," the first public lecture this semester in the Government Department series, was given Monday evening at SBA by John G. Stewart, administrative assistant to Vice-President Humphrey.

Stewart, agreeing upon the historical Congressional disregard for presidential (legislative) leadership, described the remarkable success of President Johnson.

He warmly enumerated Johnson's achievements in major 19-65 legislation in the areas of: voting rights, elementary and secondary education, housing, a department of housing and urban affairs, Appalachian aid, immigration, air and pollution. "I think it would be difficult to make much of the fact that Congress has been ignoring," Johnson," he said.

"What is the nature of the change in the Presidential-Congressional relationship in the last two years and why did previous presidents face deadlocks?" he asked.

Leaving aside Burns' answer, Stewart found

- the very Constitutional separation of powers
- that "particular kind of animal," the American party system.

In the party system, he observed, there "really are no free agents"—its "weakness and glory." Thus the task before the president is to get Congress working for, or with, him as the members do for others who make demands.

IN LYNDON JOHNSON, who enjoyed a longer apprenticeship in Congress than any other president Stewart asserted, is a rare understanding of the American party system and a special understanding of Congress. Since Johnson, he said, found the little fragments of power as majority leader inadequate, he devised a supplementary intelligence network.

By the diligence of Robert "Bobby" Baker, Johnson had at his command the knowledge of which senators were interested in which bills, which bills were in or out of committee, which special groups were interested in what, which issues affected which Senators locally, which projects Senators were pushing and so on.

As President, Johnson's efforts have a "kind of similarity," and he has found a concern for the members of Congress and interest in their problems, the "principal mechanism for producing a successful outcome," Stewart observed. In his opinion, the dynamic role of Johnson, sometimes called arm-twisting, is an "asset rather than liability" to take to the people.

WHAT EFFECT does Johnson's leadership of Congress "mean in the long-run?" Stewart avoided identifying the last two years as a permanent change. For example the temporary District of Columbia resident, cited the defeat of D.C. home - rule as the Congress - defying - the President with a "tailor-made" freedom from constituent censure. Stewart said, in addition to remnants of institutional hostility between the branches, a second debunking of a "permanent" change is that much of the legislation approved this year, admittedly long - overdue and good, "has been around a long while." Its adoption is not a radical submission to Presidential whim.

However, the recent responsiveness of Congress, he thought has led to a "marked lapse" in efforts to reform the proceedings.

Stewart forecast that new and revolutionary proposals for solution of problems now facing us, as in urban areas, might truly test the nature of the broken deadlock. Although the "notion of deadlock may be a thing of (Continued on page 5)

The Grass Is Always Greener

by John Cooney

The most important feature of the University's new Alumni Stadium, a marvel of gigantic concrete design, is the playing field itself and it is just as different from the old field as the concrete seats are from the old wooden bleachers.

As Dean McGuirk recounted, not the least important aspect of the $1.4 million project was developing enough grass with strength to withstand the constant digging and tearing of players' cleats, something the old field had not been able to do.

The grass in the old field was known as Rhode Island Bent. Because the roots extend only 1½ inches into the soil, the running and kicking of football players tore large squares of grass from the field, thus requiring constant replacement.

Four years ago, with the decision to construct a new stadium, consideration was given to using a new type of grass. The project of recommending a type which could withstand the rigor of a football game was placed in the hands of the University's agronomy department. The researchers there had to decide on a grass that not only could bear the stress of the furious action of football, but also would look attractive to the fans.

The appearance of the grass might be considered a minor - even a laughable - problem, until one remembers the unfavorable publicity directed at the Houston Astrodome for the unnatural appearance of its grass.

The agronomy department chose a site in South Deerfield next to the Connecticut River because of its excellent irrigation facilities used in growing grass which would not be used until four years later. The department decided on a type known as Merlot Blue grass. The grass is attractive, not unlike the Kentucky Blue grass noted for its color. In addition, it is deep-rooting (3½ inches) and, besides being resistant to tearing, is also a dethatching grass. This means that as roots extend into the soil, they spread and bind the soil, making the turf even more difficult to uproot.

Several weeks before the opening game, large strips of grass were transported from the South Deerfield site on huge rollers. The grass was deposited in five inches of loam, but only two-thirds of the field could be laid then because construction was still being done in the end zones and on the west side of the new stadium. This resulted in a delay of two weeks until the grass was completely deposited.

Fall is the best time for planting grass and, although this season was unusually dry and arid, the field has an underground irrigation system which insures excellent growth conditions.

In the weeks immediately before the first home game, there was concern about the first test of the playing field. There was no doubt concerning the grass itself, but it was an untested grass and only the actual conditions of a game could determine its durability. But with the first game completed, the stadium and the playing field have proven equal to the beating given to it by the 41-0 victory of the University's football team. The grass itself is still hardly ever after the Redmen's 18-6 loss last week.

Volunteers Help The Retarded

by Richard Danca,
Day Editor

"I feel kind of scared; I don't know if I can do anything at all," said a freshman girl. She spoke for most of the other 70 UMass volunteers arriving at the Belchertown State School who, like herself were there for the first time.

For most of the mentally retarded "kids" at Belchertown—from three weeks to 93 years old—the weekly visits of the UMass volunteers and those from the other four colleges and Westover A.F.B. are the only outside contact.

Only about 500 of the nearly 1600 students there are ever visited by their families and then maybe only at Christmas.

ONCE THE UMass Saturday program is in full swing, volunteers will be playing basketball with the kids, teaching them to write or even just taking them for walks.

Name The Cannon

Every major college and university has their symbol of spirit. Last year the Scabbard and Blade, a military honorary society, here on campus, gave to the student body a small temporary cannon to be fired after every Redmen score.

A permanent replica of a Civil War Cannon has replaced the small one. It got a real work-out at the AIC game. Now you can help name it.

The contest starts today and runs until Monday, Oct. 11. Ballot boxes will be in the Student Union Lobby, locker room at Boyden Gym, and Dickinson Hall.

The winner of the contest will receive two tickets to a University function of his or her choice, which is held during the 1965-66 school year.

Discussion Format Listed For SWAP Conference

The program for discussion for the 1965 S.W.A.P. Conference, Oct. 22-23, is now in its final form.

By presenting the topics ahead of time, it is hoped that the representatives involved will consider the problems of their particular area in order to prepare for discussion at the conference.

Again it is stressed that the representatives should report back to their respective groups on conference suggestions.

Science Foundation Gives UM $113,900

Four grants totalling $113,900 for research in botany and physics have been awarded to UMass by the National Science Foundation, it was announced by Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger of the College of Arts and Sciences.

A three-year grant for $32,200 was awarded for the support of a research project on "A Conspectus of the Families, Genera and Subgenera of Hepaticae" to be conducted by Prof. Rudolf M. Schuster of the botany department.

The University also received a two-year grant of $10,700 for support of research entitled "The Anatomical Pattern of Tuber Formation in Phaseolus," a joint project by Edward L. Davis, associate professor of botany at UMass and Lawrence Kaplan of the department of botany at Roosevelt University, Chicago.

A $41,000 grant will support a research project entitled "Problems in Theoretical Physics" by Dr. Robert L. Gluckstern, head of the physics department, and Dr. Shin-R Linn, assistant professor of physics.

The project is a study of the problem of electron scattering, particularly to see the effect of electronic shielding and the magnetic structure of the nucleus on the scattering.

A $30,000 grant is for "Endor Studies of Radiation-Induced Free Radicals," a two-year project by Raymond A. Patten, assistant professor of physics. The Endor (electron nuclear double resonance) technique, according to Prof. Patten, has 20 to 50 times more resolution than conventional paramagnetic resonance techniques and allows more accurate information to be obtained.

The molecules under study have been damaged by gamma radiation and are called free radicals. Precise knowledge of the nature and extent of this damage can be used in radiation effect studies, he said.

More Scores For Beer?

Thorncombe, England — "Rex Cocksley became tired of the local football team losing so many games and offered the players a free pint of beer at his tavern after each winning game. The team hasn't lost since," the AP reported.

Upon being questioned about his reaction to a similar move on the University of Massachusetts campus, the manager of a local tavern replied, "It would be all-right I guess if he (the tavern owner) was betting with them."

"As for the UMass team, most of the boys are under 21. As you know, the legal age limit for drinking is 21, so that makes the idea prohibitive."

FOLK: or how to impress friends

by Nancy Abrams,
Feature Staff

Many people in the outside world think that the campus is a hotbed for folk music. This is absolutely false; the college student listens to the same music that the well-bred twelve-year-old listens to. However, for those who wish to impress friends back home, a summary of the folk scene has been prepared.

FIRST OF ALL, FOLK MUSIC today rarely has anything to do with folk music. Until a few years ago, folk music brought to mind a child sitting on mama's knee learning songs that had been sung in his family for generations. Now folk music means big business.

There are currently three trends in the folk industry: traditional, political, and pure entertainment. All singers and folk publications must fit into one of these trends, although it is permissible to mix and match them.

THE FIRST TREND IS "traditional." Reigning supreme are kazooos, dulcimers, and The Little Sandy Review (a magazine that reviews folk records, paning anything that does not follow this trend). The password is "ethnic." Singers include those who actually learned their repertoires on mama's knee and those who have learned genuine folk songs from books and records. Professional singers in this trend include Jim Kweskin and the Jug Band, the New Lost City Ramblers, and all the boys singing Negro blues.

The second trend is "political," typified by pickets, demonstrations, and Broadside (a magazine that prints original protest songs). The password is "non-violence." This group includes all budding editorial writers who have not as yet been asked to join the New York Times and all singers who want to warble something "significant for today." Top bananas are Phil Ochs for writing and Judy Collins for singing, but the parade of angry young men and women is endless.

Third is "pure entertainment," in which contracts, copyrights, and fads are all-important. The password is "money." This trend does not have its own magazine, since its news often is found in the large-circulation publications. The latest craze, as everybody knows, is folk-rock. Tomorrow it may be eskimo music played on bronzed icicles. The singers in this group range from the Kingston Trio to Johnny Cash to Donovan.

NOW WE COME TO mixing and hopping trends. The magazine here is Sing Out!, which tries to give equal space to all three trends and preaches brotherhood among the warring factions. Singer Peter Seeger is a perfect example of one who mixes traditional with political. Joan Baez, a blend of all 3 trends

UM Dames

Putting Hubby Through

by Karen Morin,
Feature Staff

One extracurricular activity on campus requires a degree for membership. It's called the Dames Club and membership requirement is an MRS.

The first Dames Club, originated by Mrs. Peabody at Harvard University 60 years ago, had 19 members. In 1900, Mrs. Davenport from the Harvard group started a Dames Club at the University of Chicago. Soon after, clubs sprang up at the Universities of Ohio and Iowa. A national constitution was ratified in 1933 and there are now more than 100 Dames Clubs in the country.

The University of Massachusetts chapter was begun in 1954 by Mrs. J. Harry Rich and Mrs. J. Paul Mather. Before joining the Dames Club on a national level, student wives at the University first organized the Veterans' Wives Club and then the Student Wives Club. In 1956, the Student Senate ratified the University Dames Club constitution, making the club a member of the RSO (Recognized Student Organization).

Wives of undergraduates and graduates and student-wives are welcomed into the organization. The Dames Club has well over 65 members, most of whom are full-time workers or mothers. There are a few rare cases where the wives are also students.

Dues for the Dames are $1 a semester. The money from this along with money earned from bake sales, bazaars, and rummage sales go toward a scholarship fund for married students.

Other Dames activities include children's Christmas and Easter parties, a Halloween dance, a dinner-dance for the Dames and their husbands, a family picnic or barbecue, a yearly get-acquainted tea at the home of the UMass president's wife, and a monthly newsletter. There is also the PHT

"Oh boy, now I've got him and a PHT."

(Putting Hubby Through) degree awarded to every Dame upon her husband's graduation.

This year the club also has formed knitting, bridge, and French conversation groups.

Mesdames John Lederle, William Field, Robert Hopkins, and Oswald Tippo are all honorary members of the Dames Club.

Dames meetings are every third Thursday of the month in the Farley 4-H house behind Machmer Hall. There is usually a guest speaker at least once a year. The Dames also have a local obstetrician or pediatrician in for a talk.

The setting is informal and very "wifey." New members are readily and gladly accepted into the group — so long as they have their degree—MRS.

Brooks Has A Senator

by Lois Cohen,
Feature Staff

Brooks House was the only dorm that had no candidate in the UMass Senate elections. When asked for an explanation for this, Brooks' head counsellor answered, "The girls just don't feel they have the time to devote."

The day the election results were posted, however, one girl from Brooks inquired if she could run for the vacant position. The late-comer submitted her name to Senate President Dick Daley. Special elections will be held and Maryann Brown will be Brooks' senator within two weeks.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Editor's Note: Due to a mix-up and an editorial oversight, a cartoon was published on Monday's Collegian depicting a student being turned away from the Infirmary. It was not the intention of the Editorial Staff that this cartoon, penned years ago, be re-run in the last Collegian.

As most students are aware, the Infirmary is open 24 hours a day, and doctors are always on call. The Collegian apologizes for the mistaken appearance of the cartoon and takes this opportunity to reaffirm its faith in the University Health Services.

An Ounce of Prevention

With all that has been said and written about the traffic situation on campus one person has been rather neglected. He is the pedestrian.

Everyone complains about parking and towing but how about walking. The average student does a lot of walking in the course of a week. When one realizes the tremendous number of students and faculty on campus, one can see that this has developed into a disconcerting situation.

However, this problem can be solved without too much expense to the University. Surely everyone has noticed that there are few crosswalks on the University streets. People cross anywhere that is convenient, endangering themselves and motorists who try to avoid hitting them. The University owns a machine designed for the purpose of painting crosswalk lines. It should be used. Within one week all the needed street lines could be painted.

Contributing to this problem is the lack of proper traffic signals at the intersection near the North Dining Commons. The present blinking light system is inadequate; the reason that it has not been changed to a pedestrian sequence is the delay in replacing a burned-out part in the control mechanism.

Until definite steps are taken to alleviate this problem, mutual cooperation between motorists and pedestrians will insure the safety of all.

Letters To The Editor

The Senate Replies . . .

To the Editor:

As two of the Senators directly concerned with the story in last Friday's Collegian, concerning the Senate discussion on the upcoming Associated Collegiate Press Conference in San Francisco, we feel that we must comment on the article.

It has been our belief that the policy of the Collegian was to use the front page of the paper for news, and to save the editorials for the Editorial Page. The article as it appeared was not the news, it was a one sided, gross misrepresentation of the facts and had no place on the front page of a publication that calls itself a newspaper. It was news out of context in the worst sense. We feel that our side of the story has a right to be heard.

For one thing there was no mention of the factors which caused the proposed binding clause. These factors were as follows:

1. The Collegian has attended many conferences in the past few years, and in our opinion should take time to incorporate some of the ideas gained from them.
2. The Collegian having attended this same conference for the past few years should have initially incorporated the money that they would need when they formulated their budget.
3. Members of the staff of the Collegian had attended a two week conference and school this summer at student expense.
4. Two of the people planning to attend the San Francisco Conference were the same people that attended the program this summer.
5. All the proposed representatives were seniors, so that there would be no carryover of ideas to next year.

6. The Collegian had misrepresented to the Senate the amount of SAT Funds available to them for conferences.

7. The Senate is running a very tight budget this year, and has to allocate any remaining funds where they will do the most for the campus as a whole. We cannot continually favor one group.

These were the reasons for the proposed binding clause.

Another misconception should be straightened out. The Collegian implied that the binding clause just died on the floor. This is not the case. In actuality Sen. Cripps, who proposed the binding clause, tried to withdraw it after hearing some very good arguments against it. Not succeeding, he immediately brought it to a vote, with both himself and Sen. Chambers voting against the proposal.

We wish it known that our voting against the proposal was a result of our believing that it was a bad proposal, and was setting up a type of censorship which we wanted no part of. We were not in any way bowing to the threats voiced on the floor to the effect that if we passed the binding clause the Collegian would stop working. This idea is ridiculous.

We hope that this explanation sufficiently explains the other side of the story which the Collegian neglected to do. We further hope that in the future the Collegian will carry out the duty of a newspaper and print the entire story.

Senators Cripps and Chambers.

As I See It

Editor's Note: The author of this column Mr. Georgios Pan Piperopoulos, is a graduate exchange student from Greece. He has served since 1960 as the U. S. correspondent for the Drasis Press Organization in Greece, and last year was an editor with the Atlantic Greek Daily in New York. He has been invited by the Editorial Chairman of the Collegian to write a series of guest editorials. This is the last installment of his first article.

Yours for the Asking

by Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

As far as I can see it, American religion has at least realized that mysticism is not possible to attract and survive in a highly industrialized society, and it has thus substituted reason and understanding where blind faith used to reign supreme.

Why all this criticism then? Why all this pitiless tearing-up of American institutions and ethos by the foreign students?

Let's be careful about it. There is a difference between destructive criticism that serves no other purpose but alleviating the individual's psychological frustrations stemming from his own problems of adjustment in a new socio-cultural environment, and that of the quiet admirer of the American democracy and the American people, who wants to see that the leader of the free world reaches a stage of full realization of her potentials as a society and a nation.

It is expected of a mature individual to realize that people can be judged on an individual basis; that nations should be appraised or condemned not merely from the outcome of their efforts, but for the ideology and convictions that characterizes their earnest hopes in undertaking such efforts.

That many things are wrong with America and its people is a reality that one may know by reading newspapers and magazines in Athens, or Cairo or New Delhi. But then an educated person is always aware of the fact that a multitude of things are just as wrong in his country and with his people.

It is possible only in America that one can tear up governments and people, church going and television watching, love making and family life, and instead of getting either punched or imprisoned, or deported, one merely faces a dark pair of eyes which with wonder and quiet sadness inquire politely: "Why do you accuse us so severely?"

WFCR Will Air Toronto Teach-In

A committee of local citizens has made arrangements for live radio coverage of the foreign policy debates on Vietnam and the Dominican Republic on Sat., Oct. 9, 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 2:50-5:30 p.m. The Four-College FM radio station, WFCR-FM (88.5 mc.), will carry the broadcast for Pioneer Valley listeners by means of a special hook-up with Toronto.

The Toronto debates will be international in representation, with spokesmen from both No. and So. Vietnam, the FLN (Vietcong), Cambodia, England, the U.S., and other countries. All speeches will be in English.

This is probably the first opportunity most Americans have had to hear government leaders from Vietnam. The program is sponsored locally by the Four-College Committee on Problems of War and Peace made up of students and faculty of Smith, Amherst, and Mt. Holyoke Colleges and UM in cooperation with WFCR-FM.

A listening room has been set aside in the Student Union for those who do not have an FM radio.

Prop Man Is Actress

Ohioan Sandy Camp has both the shortest and the longest roles in The Fantasticks, the satirically romantic musical comedy opening at Bowker Aud. Oct. 14 at 8:15 p.m.

It is short because her lines are at an absolute minimum—none, since she is portraying a mute. But she is also on stage longer than any of the other actors, and has more than 400 cues to memorize!

She is the musicals "property-man" who, in full sight of the audience will re-arrange a vast collection of boxes, planks, ribbons, scarves, and other paraphernalia to indicate changes of scene, and she will scatter vast amounts of confetti and colored cards at appropriate moments.

She is herself a prop from time to time. For example, she will have to hold her arms straight out for a full 8 minutes without moving to indicate a wall.

The Fantasticks will be presented Oct. 14, 15, 16 in Bowker Aud., 8:15 p.m. Tickets are on sale in the lobby of the Student Union. Admission $1.50, students $1.

YR Seeks Members

The UMass Young Republican Club last week touched off the new academic year with a highly successful membership drive.

This drive marks the beginning of what will be a very active year for the group, according to Pres. Fred Cenedella who plans a number of guest speakers and social events, in addition to participation in local and state-wide Republican affairs.

The highlight of the year will be the appearance, sometime during spring semester, of Gov. Mark Hatfield of Ore., a leading light in the party often mentioned as a dark-horse candidate for the 1968 Presidential nomination.

Aside from regular meetings and fund raising activities, such as a cake sale, a newsletter was published and a sizable delegation sent to the annual Mass. Young Republican Assoc. convention in Boston. The newsletter will be continued this year, as will attendance at MYRA conventions. The club is now the most prominent Young Republican group in the western part of the state.

Meetings are held each Thursday at 8 p.m. Anyone is welcome to attend, and views currently represented run from "18th Century Conservative" to "Creeping Socialist Liberals".

The only political knowledge required is a belief in the two-party system. SU Lobby Boards list meeting room.

the past," he thought it "rather unlikely".

Expanding on Burns' concept of two parties both divided into Presidential and Congressional wings, Stewart said the description was difficult to see readily. He found classifying those who supported Presidential programs as in the Presidential party and those who opposed in the Congressional unsatisfying.

IN THE COURSE of answering nearly a dozen questions, ranging from Humphrey's role to Washington gossip, Stewart explained at some length the use of quorum call in a filibuster such as threatened the repeal of Section 14 B of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Finally, he discussed Humphrey's role in regard to Congress, in which the Vice President understands he is no longer a Senator. Stewart said that it makes a difference on the Hill: "I suppose it's psychological."

VOLUNTEERS . . .

the present volunteers are students majoring in education or nursing.

Buses leave the North Commons every Saturday at 1:15 for Belchertown. Interested students should sign up at the Volunteers board near the Student Union Post Office.

At the introductory session for the year, Mrs. Barbara Valliere, Volunteer Director, explained the details of the program:

"ALTHOUGH THE ULTIMATE goal in most volunteer projects is a one to one volunteer-student relationship," she said, "this is not required and many volunteers see different students each Saturday."

"Even on the one to one program, no volunteer is left alone with a retarded child until both the volunteer and the volunteer office are sure the volunteer is ready."

Mrs. Valliere also stressed the difference between retardation and mental illness. Retardation, she said, is incurable, but the retarded person can usually be educated to some degree.

Volunteers, if they wish, can teach students how to tie shoes, write or play the piano.

In addition to the volunteer program, the students at the school have weekly movies, religious services, and observe all holidays.

Liberal Arts Majors Announcing the Professional Qualification Test for outstanding career appointments to National Security Agency

Registration Deadline: Wednesday, October 13

If you expect to receive a liberal arts degree before September 1966, don't miss this opportunity to qualify for a rewarding career with the National Security Agency. All liberal arts applicants must take the Professional Qualification Test (PQT) as a prerequisite to NSA interviews for employment.

THE DEADLINE FOR TEST REGISTRATION IS WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13 . . . THE TEST ITSELF WILL BE GIVEN ON CAMPUS ON SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23.

Challenging Career Program Areas

A unique agency functioning within the Department of Defense, NSA has a critical need for imaginative people. You can make immediate use of your college-acquired capabilities without first accumulating years of "experience." Your specific academic major is of secondary consequence as long as you relish and meet the challenge of extremely complex research problems that frequently will take you beyond the known and accepted boundaries of knowledge.

You will work on programs of national importance, in such areas as:

- Cryptography . . . the making of codes and ciphers
- Analytic research
- Language research
- Data systems design and programming
- Administrative management (finance and accounting, personnel, training, engineering administration)

The PQT Bulletin at your Placement Office outlines these areas further.

Advancement, Training and Educational Opportunities

NSA promotes from within and emphasizes orderly career development, awarding substantial salary increases as you assume greater responsibility. The environment is academic, and NSA stimulates professional and intellectual growth in many ways, including intensive formal and on-the-job training in new disciplines and methodology. Advanced study at any of seven area universities is partially or wholly reimbursed through NSA Fellowships and other assistance programs.

Attractive Location and Other Advantages

Located between Washington and Baltimore, NSA is also near the Chesapeake Bay, ocean beaches, ski resorts and other popular summer and winter recreation areas. The location permits your choice of city, suburban or country living.

Policies relating to vacations, insurance and retirement are fair and liberal—you enjoy the benefits of Federal employment without the necessity of Civil Service certification.

Where to go...What to do

First, pick up a PQT Bulletin at your Placement Office, the sooner the better. It contains a brief registration form which must be received in Princeton, N. J., by October 13. You will then be mailed a ticket admitting you to the Test on October 23.

Taking and passing the Professional Qualification Test in no way commits or obligates you to anything. But we urge you—even if you are not fully certain of your career interests—to investigate NSA opportunities now. The Test will be followed by on-campus interviews with NSA representatives.

Please note: You must be a U. S. citizen, subject to a character and loyalty check.

Prof. Lauds Quakers

by Pam Metaxas

An informal lecture on the Quaker religion was given by Dr. Ross of the Physics Department last Thursday evening at Eugene Field House. The lecture was attended by residents of Field and Grayson.

Dr. Ross is a member of the Methodist Church but attends Quaker meetings regularly. During the meetings, he explained, complete silence is observed. One speaks only if he feels he has something worthwhile to say. "I've never been mistaken for a Quaker," was Dr. Ross's comment.

The purpose of silent meetings is to achieve a "sense" of the meeting, a feeling that Dr. Ross described as one of community. He explained that achieving a sense of oneness requires "great spiritual sensitivity."

Tracing Quaker history, Dr. Ross pointed out that there was a major schism in 1825, less than 200 years after the founding of the religion by John Fox.

Modern Quakers have abandoned the traditions of conformity of dress and characteristic usage of Quaker speech.

Dr. Ross emphasized that a good Quaker must "believe in the fundamental importance of every human being." He must recognize human equality and be willing to implement his beliefs with action.

In closing, Dr. Ross mentioned the Quakers' opposition to liquor, tobacco, and physical violence. Hence, he concluded, "To be a good Quaker one must be an absolute pacifist." The Quaker believes in acceptance of people and their spiritual values.

Caesura Cries For Works From Umies

The deadline for submitting original work for consideration for the next issue of Caesura is Friday, Oct. 8. Anyone who has creative work which he wishes to submit should bring it to the Caesura office in the Student Union.

Written work must be type-written and double-spaced; art work, including photographs, drawings, paintings, designs, etc., should be submitted in the form the artist wishes it to be considered.

Names must be on a separate sheet of paper, since all work is considered anonymously. The secretary will assign each piece an identification number. Any student wishing to have his work returned should pick it up at the office after the board has reviewed it.

Caesura also has six staff openings for editorial assistants. These positions are designed to acquaint interested students with the editorial board and to train them to fill vacancies on the board as they occur.

Those selected will assist the regular board members in their duties. Anyone interested should submit his name, class, major, and campus address to the secretary in the Caesura office along with a short explanation of why he is interested in becoming an editorial assistant. Deadline is Monday, Oct. 11.

Swanson and Toner Chosen To Receive M-Club Awards

by John Cunningham

Halfback Terry Swanson and tackle Ed Toner were the recipients of the M Club Award for top offensive and defensive player, respectively, for the UMass-Buffalo game played last Saturday at Alumni Stadium.

In the game Swanson made a tremendous catch of a Greg Landry bomb that carried 53 yds. to the Bulls' four. This play set up the only Redmen touchdown of the game.

Swanson also helped the Redmen by his fine punting. He now is second in the Yankee Conference in punting with a 37.5 average for 9 attempts. Ed Toner anchored the Redmen line that held Buffalo to three points in the second half. After the defense settled down, they, with the help of Toner, showed the brand of play that Redman fans of the last three seasons have been accustomed to seeing.

The 6'2", 225 lb. Toner made it hard for the running attack of Buffalo to get started. The Bulls gave up trying to crash the line and spent most of the day passing and attempting end runs. Buffalo was held to 82 yds. rushing.

Both Swanson and Toner were elected to the Yankee Conference all-star team of the week for their fine performances.

World Series Opens Today; Dodgers Rated 7-5 Favorites

by Richard Curwin

For most managers, such as Billy Herman, Johnny Keane, and Herman Franks, a long season has ended and it's time to begin thinkink about the off-season. But for Sam Mele and Walt Alston the season begins today. The World Series which is still the greatest and most thrilling sports event in the world begins in Minnesota with Jim Grant, the best pitcher in the American league this year, facing Don Drysdale.

The consensus is that Los Angeles' speed, pitching, and defense will wipe out the powerful Twins in about five games. The experts from Las Vegas have installed the Dodgers as 7-5 favorites.

HOWEVER, what most people fail to realize is that the Twins also have a very fine defense. Jimmy Hall, Tony Oliva, and Bob Allison are capable outfielders. The infield, spearheaded by Zoilo Versalles at shortstop, does the job well.

Earl Battey has lost some of his youth and gained a little weight during the last few years but is still one of the finest defensive catchers in baseball.

L.A.'s pitching is definitely stronger than Minnesota's. Sandy Koufax might be the best pitcher in baseball history. He is figured to pitch in three games. Drysdale is also a star performer, and with these two hurling there will not be many runs scored against the Dodgers.

Expected to start for the Twins are Grant, Lefty Jim Kaat, and Camilo Pascual.

Hitting is a different story. The Twins were the best hitting team in the American league this year. Throughout the lineup there are batters who hit for average and power. Red Sox fans can recall the way that the Twins remodeled the Fenway park wall this year.

The Dodgers rely primarily on getting one or two runs ahead and count on their fine pitching to hold on. Usually if a speedster like Maury Wills or Willy Davis gets on base they will score a run.

The series rivalries shapes up

Intramural Report

by David James

IN MONDAY night's feature showdown battle between the Untouchables and the Philosophers in the Independent League, the plucky Philosophers fell victim to the muscular Untouchables by the score of 18-12. Police, receiving superb protection from his blockers, completed 12 out of 24 passes for 2 TDs and scored one TD himself.

Other Independent action saw the College St. A.C. annexing its first victory with a 30-6 decision over the Charley Browns. Bob Eddy was nearly perfect with 11 for 14 and 3 TD passes. The Ban-shees ran roughshod over the Selossas 34-0 as quarterback Hugh Longmore accounted for all his team's scores.

AEP, giant killers of the Fraternity League, did it again. This time BKP was the victim. Johnny Parnell riddled the BKP defenses with a superlative performance of 12 for 20 and 4 TDs. A TD in the last minute broke a 20-20 tie and provided the clincher for AEP.

TKE was nearly upset by winless PMD but an advantage in first downs gave TKE a fluke win 14-13, after the game ended 13-13. Leading passer Garbust had another fine night, hitting on 17 of 26. The win, coupled with BKP's loss gave TKE sole possession of first place in the B division.

IN A KEY BATTLE the unbeaten LAC came on top of TC in a defensive struggle 14-0. SPE kept pace with LCA in the A League by turning aside upset-minded PSD 20-13. Al Sagess's Herculean efforts at defensive end saved the game for Sig Ep.

KS got back on the winning track with a 28-0 win over ATG, Godak, playing his first game at Quarterback, did a good job by completing 9 of 18 for 4 TDs.

In a contest of the winless, TEP whitewashed QTV 13-0. ASP evened its record at 2-2 by trouncing PSK 21-0. ZN clobbered helpless SAM 28-0.

Bill Urging Student Resistance Defeated By Senate

by Karen Rose,
Senate Reporter

A bill concerning faculty control and consequent student resistance to the functions of the University Fine Arts Council was soundly defeated by a roll call vote at Wednesday's senate meeting. The bill was the work of Senator Dick Wimberly (Brett).

Wimberly suggested—by way of this bill—that if faculty control of the Council does evolve, the student body should resist by boycotting Fine Arts Council functions, picketing such functions and using "other peaceful, non-coercive measures."

The senator thought it was the general feeling of the Student Senate that if the Faculty Senate takes over the Fine Arts Council it will ultimately involve Faculty control of student funds. "The spending of student funds without a working student majority will result," Wimberly commented.

THE REPRESENTATION ON the Council board formerly stood 5 to 3 favoring the student, but in light of the recent Hicks report this representation has been reversed.

This action was taken by the Faculty Senate acting without the knowledge that the Student Senate had been granted a grace period until Oct. 31, 1965 to remedy what the faculty terms poor handling of the council.

When the Faculty Senate deemed itself capable of taking over the Council from the students, debate arose and Wimberly's bill resulted.

VOICING HIS OPINION Senator Bob (Cripps) (Mills) said that Wimberly's bill would only "create great antagonisms" and would impair student-faculty relations.

Siding with him, Senator Jerry Benezra (Fraternity Senator) suggested that such a bill would "kill Fine Arts" and stated that the aim of the Student Senate is to "make the situation better — not worse."

Benezra went on to say that, "What goes on (concerning this situation) this next month will mean an awful lot to this University."

"We should go to the bargaining table with good intentions—not threats," he concluded.

"I am sick and disgusted that such a bill has come to the Senate Floor," commented Senator Lewis Gurwitz (Married Students). "It has no value, is really bad, and has come at the wrong time. This bill would be a complete slap in the face to the faculty," he remarked.

In other Senate action:

• A bill concerning the distribution of money from the vending machines was tabled for three weeks.

This bill, also the work of Senator Wimberly, proposed that one half the machine monies be distributed to the accounts of the campus dormitories and the other half be placed in a proposed Student Library Fund.

• Senate President Dacey explained to newly elected senators installed at this meeting, that vending machine money is no longer in the hands of the Athletic Council. The $55,000 is now in the hands of the trustees.

Also in connection with the Athletic Council, Dacey mentioned his proposal to the council for $2500 for the crewing team.

Such an amount is necessary if the team is to participate in intercollegiate competition. If this amount is approved it will save that much out of the Student Activities Tax Fund.

• Also tabled was Senator Cripps' bill to revise policies concerning dorm dues. Included in the bill was the suggestion that a set dorm dues payment amount be included in the student's semester bill.

Cripps feels that the new cultural-social influx in dorm life requires a uniform fee for generally similar programs in each residence.

Thus if the amount were standardized ("dues now range from $1 to $8" Cripps said) the dorm could hold more events. As it stands now, Cripps pointed out, "Dorms dues make for a lot of bookkeeping and a lot of misunderstanding."

• Senate President Dacey addressed the new senators, welcoming them with the statement that the Senate "always needs new blood and new ideas." Dacey further stated that this senate year "if not a good year will at least be controversial."

"No Federal Control" Says Rep. Green

WASHINGTON (CPS)—The chairman of the House special subcommittee on education says there is still not federal control in education but that there are some danger signs.

Rep. Edith Green (D. Ore.) and the ranking Republican on her committee, Rep. Albert H. Quie (R. Minn.), held a special press briefing on the problems of education early this week (Oct. 5) during the Education Writers Association meeting here.

Mrs. Green said she is concerned about "the ability of an administrator to run his institution as he thinks best with federal aid." As an example, she cited what federal matching funds have done for education.

A SCHOOL might feel it needs a new humanities building, she said, but find matching funds available for a science building. So the school takes what money it has, gets the matching funds, and builds the science building.

Rep. Green said there is always a phrase in every education bill that says no federal agency will have control over the curriculum of any institution getting federal funds. "It is a nice phrase," she said, "and schools need to see that it is enforced."

Mrs. Green disagreed with "some colleagues in the House who want to investigate local school situations." She said she would not feel that she should even go to the school board in her home community and demand as a member of the House to investigate local problems.

Along the same lines, she said she felt the statement this summer by Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel that discrimination in sororities and fraternities could be grounds for schools losing federal monies "went beyond the federal interest," Mrs. Green said she felt the language of the Higher Education bill, now in a Senate-House conference committee, reflects the feeling on this.

One of the points of contention on the bill in committee is just how far discrimination in Greek letter organizations will affect a school's federal aid funds.

The progress of the bill itself is in doubt, Rep. Green said. "It depends almost solely on what happens with the legislation to repeal section 14b of the Taft-Hartley Act that's now on the floor of the Senate and whether

International Teach-Ins To Debate Viet-Nam Affairs

TORONTO, Ontario (CPS)—An international teach-in on world affairs will be the setting for a face to face confrontation between official representatives of the National Liberation Front of South Vietnam (Viet Cong) and of the Saigon government this weekend in Toronto. (Oct. 8-10).

WFCR-FM will carry a broadcast of the debates Sat. 9:30-11:30 a.m. and 2:30-5:30 p.m. for Pioneer Valley listeners. A listening room has been set aside in the Student Union for those who do not have an FM radio.

The teach-in is being sponsored by the Inter-university Committee for Debate on Foreign Policy with the University of Toronto acting as host.

Twenty-seven schools will be part of a continental telephone hook-up that will bring the teach-in to their campus. In addition, nine radio stations will carry the teach-in debates live or on tape.

Participants in the first public meeting between the Saigon government and the Viet Cong will be Dinh Ba Thi, representative of the NLF in Czechoslovakia; Pham Ban Chuong, representative of the Liberation Press Agency of the NLF; Nguyen Thu Duc, ministerial advisor to the United Nations for the Saigon government; and Doan Bac Ang, advisor to the Saigon minister of foreign affairs.

The Johnson administration has said it will send an observer to the session on Vietnam but the representative has not been named. The North Vietnamese government had indicated that it will also send a representative. The committee had no response to an invitation to the People's Republic of China.

Amherst Students Eliminate "Rat-Fink" Social Clause

by Gordon Davidson,
Day Editor

Students at Amherst College have won their battle to eliminate a so-called "rat-fink" clause which would have made all residents in each dormitory responsible for reporting violations of the social code. There has still been no settlement of the Student Council recommendation to extend the hours when women are allowed in the dorms to 10:30 p.m. during the week, 11:30 on Friday and Sunday nights, with no change in the 12:30 Sat. curfew.

Student protest had taken the form of college-wide discussions and letters to the Amherst Student. About 100 students refused to hand in signed honor code cards, by which a student indicates he is willing to abide by the social code, including the "rat-fink" clause.

The Student Council organized a poll of all students on the social hours issue, and from the results of the poll made recommendations to the Inter-Dorm Council. The Council passed all four recommendations and submitted them to Dean Swartzbaugh, who approved the first two, and will consider the final two at a meeting of the faculty next Wednesday.

The recommendations were as follows:

(1) To eliminate the card which the students are required to sign promising obedience to the social code.

Joe & Eddie, Swingle Singers Highlight Homecoming Concert

Two exciting groups will highlight the Homecoming weekend Concert. Joe and Eddie, one of the hottest folk duos in the business, and the Swingle Singers, a French group which specializes in an up tempo interpretation of Classical music.

Although the Swingle Singers sounds very English, all members of this group are French citizens with the exception of Ward Swingle after whom the group was named.

The group was formed in Nov. 1963 when the singers decided to record their first album making them practically famous overnight. However, the singers had frequently seen each other before while working on many different jobs in the numerous recording studios of Paris. Their love for good music and desire to work on something they all enjoy, brought them together.

The first album, which is selling at a phenomenal rate, had been produced with the intention of completing only this one album and no more. They did not, by any means, want to give concerts; on the contrary, they wanted to remain anonymous, but their success compelled them to introduce themselves to the public and reveal their identities.

The group consists of four women—two sopranos and two altos—and four men—two tenors and two bass-baritones. Ward Swingle also sings as the director of this unique combination of voices.

THE MOST exciting vocal duo to appear in many moons features two exceptional young men who go by the ordinary names of Joe and Eddie.

Joe Gilbert and Eddie Brown, both 21 years old, began singing together at Willard Jr. High School, Berkeley, Calif., but had no formal training until they entered Berkeley High School where they were tutored by Dr. Earl B. Blakeslee, director of the Acapella choir at the school, and one of the guiding forces in their career.

Joe and Eddie became a team when they decided to enter a talent contest some eight years ago. They were fast friends and didn't welcome the idea of competing against each other. The only solution, then, was to enter as a team. They did; they won; and they've seldom been more than five miles apart ever since.

Joe & Eddie record for Crescendo records and have the great single recording of "There's A Meeting Here Tonight." They have three albums out on the Crescendo label, their first one simply entitled "Joe & Eddie," the second, "There's A Meeting Here Tonight," and the third and most current album, "Joe & Eddie, Coast to Coast."

They have a philosophy about their careers; "We like what we are doing. If we can sing and get paid for it, all the better; but we're going to sing, no matter what!"

Commuters Discuss Plans For Future

Details for the upcoming Inter-Collegiate Commuters Association Convention, the annual blood drive and plans for a Homecoming float highlighted the commuters' meeting held yesterday in the Student Union Council Chambers.

Sharon Stowell, Pres. of the Non-Resident Students Association (NRSA), said delegates from the six charter member and 20 guest schools will attend the ICA conference to be held Nov. 5 and 6 at UM.

"The convention will aim at helping other commuting students with their organization problems through our own experiences and at setting up inter-collegiate functions for commuters in both the academic and social spheres," she explained.

Opening Friday night, Nov. 5, with the arrival and registration of 24 charter member representatives, the convention will include a general business meeting and a main meeting divided into discussion groups.

This is the first time an ICA conference will be held in Amherst. UMass is a charter member of the association. The other charter chapters include URI, Tufts, MIT, Pembroke, and Brown.

On the local level, the Activities Committee confirmed commuters' plans to build a float for the Homecoming Parade. Also, ten recruiters were asked to volunteer for work on the annual Blood Drive later this month.

Interested commuting students should attend meetings Oct. 14 or 21 at 11:15 a.m., when further details will be given.

"Music is me, man!"

by Don Stewart

ERIC ANDERSON, a young folk singer from New York whose experience reaches from coffee houses to Carnegie Hall, is presently billed at the Pesky Sarpent coffee house at 612½ Page Blvd., Springfield.

In an interview between sets, Eric, who seems more at ease on stage than off, had much to say about himself and his music, which he considers as one. "Music is me, man," he said sincerely. Anderson has been singing since he was thirteen, and his plans for the future point toward more of the same, perhaps with an attempt at writing plays.

When asked who his greatest influences have been, Eric named people from Elvis Presley and Jerry Lee Lewis to Pat Sky and Phil Ochs. "I guess Buddy Holly and Lightening Hopkins have been the most important," he added, which seems to illustrate the range of his interests and abilities.

PROTEST SONGS? Anderson tells what happened at the Newport Folk Festival panel discussion on the topic, which included Tom Paxton, Mark Spoelstra, Phil Ochs and others. When an anonymous gentleman stepped to the stage and shouted that all modern folk songs are garbage, Eric Anderson, rising young folk singer, whose interests include Buddy Holly and Elvis Presley, will soon appear in this area.

Ochs replied, "I protest, I protest!"

Eric went on to quote T. S. Eliot, who said, "To be great poetry it must approach the song, and to be a great song it must approach the dance." He added that he feels that Bob Dylan has come closest to such an art.

In conclusion, Anderson, whose second album will soon be released, expressed the feeling that he is only beginning to realize the power of music: of what it can say and do. And finally, as Eric Anderson put it, "Music is just out of sight, man!"

UMass To Feature Woodwork

Amherst, Mass.—A unique collection of wood blocks, including a sample from nearly every country in the world, is now housed at the University of Massachusetts.

The collection, 2700 different specimens including such items as a 5200-year-old piece of cedar and an oak specimen taken from the hull of the United States frigate Constitution, came from the late Patrick J. Slowey of Holyoke.

A sampling of the collection, 84 pieces of wood in various colors from every continent, will be on display in the main lobby of the University's Student Union until Oct. 15, and can be seen daily from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.

The large collection was donated to the University by Mr. Slowey's daughter, Mrs. Rita S. Johanson of Massapequa, L.I., New York, in 1964, the year of Mr. Slowey's death.

Among Mr. Slowey's woodworking projects was an emblem of Rotary International, a Rotary "wheel" made from woods of the 112 countries then represented by the organization. Mr. Slowey was a prominent member of the Holyoke Rotary.

Mr. Slowey wrote to officials all over the world in an effort to get different samples to add to his growing collection. He numbered each piece consecutively as received, and recorded the common and scientific names of each, and the source of the wood. The collection was co-indexed alphabetically by common name and country of origin, a feature that helped in filling and sorting the valuable collection.

Unique Frat Holds Smoker

Phi Kappa Nu, a unique, "spontaneous" Greek colony on campus, held its first open smoker last night in the Student Union.

According to PKN President, Gerald Pellegrini, the turnout was somewhat less than expected due to the general unknown nature of the budding colony.

He continued saying that there will be another open smoker next week. The date will be announced early next week.

Sports Car club members help plot routes during Spring Rally.

Sports Car Club To Open Season

The University of Massachusetts Sports Car Club will open its season Oct. 14th, by welcoming new members to its first meeting. The purpose of the club is to foster interest in sports cars and this November, a rally will be conducted for sports cars and foreign sedans.

In last spring's rally, drivers competed for optimum time, not speed, over a course of approximately 100 miles through Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Vermont. A trophy was awarded to the winner.

According to Alex Dean, treasurer, the Oct. 14 meeting will be held in the Nantucket Room at 7:00 p.m. and will include the nomination and election of officers for the coming year. Interested persons may also seek membership at this time.

Three types of membership are available: regular membership available to all members of the undergraduate University community who own sports cars; complimentary memberships to interested students who don't own cars; and associate memberships to graduate students, University employees, faculty, area residents, and students from other schools. A minimal membership fee is necessary to cover the costs of the non-profit organization.

All those interested in sports cars and the Sports Car Club, are urged by Dean to attend Thursday's meeting, Oct. 14, in the S.U. Nantucket room at 7:00.

Brazilians Sing In Six Languages

Tuesday evening, October 5, a small but appreciative audience was treated to a concert of moving music by Madrigal da Universidade de Bahia, Brazil. The group sang sacred music by such composers as Claudin, Villa Lobos, and Randall Thompson. The second half of the program included American spirituals and Brazilian folk songs. The group sang in six languages, entirely without accompaniment.

The singers' voices were clear and perfectly controlled, producing a balance in quality and among the parts. They used no microphone and needed none!

The group was eye-catching on the stage; the men in charcoal grey suits, the girls in red or blue suits. The singers stood arranged in groups of four; consisting of one tenor, one bass,

Of, For, And By The Students

We are admitted free to University football games, we are admitted free to University basketball games, and we are admitted free to University baseball games. As a result, we become very well versed in the fine points of the games. Unfortunately, while we are becoming experts at play, we are completely neglecting the cultural offerings of the University.

Most of the programs which are of true benefit to the starving intellect require an admission charge. As a result, the comparatively few students who would like to attend these events are scared off. This is not to say that we should not support the Athletic Council's program of admission by I.D. to all athletic events. What we should do, is support other programs, such as University Theater and Operetta Guild through the Student Tax Fund, and allow all students free admission to these programs.

Instead of discouraging attendance we should encourage it. Instead of scaring people off, we should draw them in. Through a program of pre-paid admission, not only would the students be more inclined to go to the performances, but the groups would have assured funds to work with in putting on the productions. As a result there would be more money to support their efforts, which would lead to a higher quality performance.

The improved quality would, in itself, lead to an even greater patronization.

There has been some argument, however, that students are not qualified to handle any increase in funds. Some even feel that they control too much money now. It would seem that these people have not looked realistically at the situation. If the increased funds were to be used for purposes such as described above, there could hardly be any dissention. In fact, it should be apparent that it is the student body who is providing the stimulus necessary to make us a truly great University!

These programs should be supported, and they should be supported by the students for whom they are being put on. For, only in this way can we hope to graduate a truly well-rounded, thinking and knowledgeable citizen.

Weary Groans And Expressions

Weary groans and strained expressions are the standard responses of students to the noises of construction and its resultant inconveniences.

Students seem to be letting minor problems of living and working take on the magnitude of major catastrophes. They say it's almost impossible to study with that banging going on outside their windows. They can't, so they claim, concentrate in class because of noise, heat, cold, lack of air, and one thousand and one other physically disturbing features of construction.

What students fail to realize, subconsciously or purposely, is the reason behind the temporary inconveniences. The construction obviously can't last forever. It is a means to an end—the end being better classrooms, better living quarters, better facilities for the students.

Humans grossly underestimate themselves. Their capacity for endurance is much higher than they like to believe. All a person needs (in most cases, and this one is no exception) to accomplish something is the will to do it.

If students just stopped sighing and feeling overburdened long enough to consider all aspects of the situation—even subjectively—their attitudes would probably shift in the positive direction. After all, it only requires a little more effort to concentrate on studies and ignore the noise. This effort will only be necessary for a relatively short amount of time, and in the end facilities for students on campus will be worth a few months of slight inconvenience.

Line Forms At The Rear

After nearly a month of constant inconvenience at the North Dining Commons, it is time that some questions be raised about the present set-up. As of now one must consume at least twenty minutes standing in line at supper. For students who generally have heavy work loads, these long waits are very unwelcome.

However, the situation is not as hopeless as some people might think. Although it would be impossible to eliminate these lines entirely, the present dilemma could be somewhat alleviated.

The primary cause of the long lines at supper is the dorm dinners. One entire room (Line 1) is set off for one of the Orchard Hill dorms each night. The purpose is that students have a chance to meet faculty fellows and fellow students in a congenial dining atmosphere. As a result of these dinners, students of other dorms, who normally eat in Line 1, have to be rerouted to Line 5, causing the congestion and lengthy lines already mentioned.

Although dorm dinners are well-intentioned and created for student benefit, the simple fact is that few students attend, either because of disinterest or scheduled conflicts. Students can always meet faculty fellows at other functions held in the dorm, and they therefore forego these dorm dinners. The result is a handful of people in one room and overcrowding and waiting in the other.

Since these dorm dinners are bringing confusion and aggravation to all, perhaps it would be best to do away with them entirely and concentrate on faculty-student relationships in the dorms and in the classrooms. This is certainly not to say the dinners are valueless, but rather that they are not fair to the students eating in other lines.

It goes without question that if students were evenly distributed throughout the Commons, lines would be faster-moving and shorter, and eating would be a more pleasant experience for all.

Beating The Drum

To the Editor:

It seems like everyone is always beating the drum for participation in activities now-a-days. Being a student isn't enough. One must be an enthusiastic participant in a myriad of insignificant tea parties, or one must certainly be a miserable, ill-adjusted, forlorn individual whom counselors, scrolls, and friends must "encourage" to blossom into a professional tea-sipper. After all, one is quite socially inadequate if he doesn't enjoy these things.

However, what some people can't seem to get through their heads is the fact that other people might like being dull, forlorn individuals who pay rent to sleep and study in a dorm. Furthermore, these individuals might not be bubbling over with excess loyalty to the place where they sleep. (HORRORS!) These individuals might even derive enough satisfaction from their studies to sustain their intellect. (What a ridiculous idea.) As a matter of fact, they might really like living in a dorm where they enjoy a quiet, uneventful existence.

If the message hasn't gotten across yet, O ye faithful participation-mongers, ponder a moment on the fact that "counselors are usually down on their hands and knees begging kids to participate." Does this not suggest to you the idea that perhaps, perish the thought, they don't want to participate? Of course it is your duty to see to it that they do, for their own good. Maybe they don't respond to your ardent efforts, but after all, what can you expect from unhappy, maladjusted, misanthropic, social misfits? Tsk, ts, poor things.

In conclusion, I would like to say that old dorm residents don't seem to be screaming injustice because they are left out. For some, the old dorms are actually a SANCTUARY at UMass. SO GO AWAY AND LEAVE US ALONE. RAH! RAH!

A socially deficient junior

We Have To Learn!

We have died in the pass at Thermopylae, the village of Waterloo, in the ovens at Dachau, the woods at Fredericksburg, the jungles of Guadalcanal, the rubble at Nagasaki. Yes, we—mankind—have slashed our way through a shocking consistent and recurring succession of bloody wars and conflicts, and weathered even the worst of these; yet, we seem to have weathered them all in vain. For we have yet to learn—indeed, experience—the true meaning and fulfillment of lasting "peace."

Today we are dying in the rice paddies of Viet Nam and in the mountains of Kashmir. We are vascillating in a world which is crying for peace but slipping toward war. Yet amidst this din of conflict and confusion—this colossal lack of the world's nerves—a seed of wisdom and reason has taken root. It must be fed, nourished, and encouraged before it dies. This seed is the United Nations, the world body dedicated to the peaceful settlement of international disputes through negotiation. It must grow in both power and prestige, and it must grow quickly for the threat of nuclear, bio-chemical, and biological global warfare is indeed a sobering one.

This age of nuclear warfare is hardly an environment conducive to the healthy growth of such a seed, but we have stepped beyond the point of no return by developing the ultimate in destructive armaments—capable of destroying the victor as well as the vanquished. We have no choice but to settle our international differences at the conference table, or perish. The United Nations is the conference table and this is the crux of the matter called, "peace."

We must support the United Nations. We must have faith in it if we are to continue to have faith in mankind. We must surrender to it judicial powers commensurate with the purpose of its existence. We should, as an enlightened community in a shrinking world, take it upon ourselves to live, think, and work as cosmopolitans as well as Americans, Russians, Africans, or Chinese. We will have to learn to live peacefully with and for each other if we are to avoid our last Thermopylae, Waterloo, Dachau, Fredericksburg, Guadalcanal, or Nagasaki. We must have peace.

To the Editor:

Well, we've heard Amherst's arguments. Now, let's hear Worcester's. So Worcester used a bit of politics? How did Western Massachusetts retort?

If truly "THE STATE IS OUR CAMPUS" then let us have a state university to benefit all the state, university to benefit all the state, not just Western Massachusetts.

Did it ever occur to anyone that Worcester has six hospitals and, in neighboring Shrewsbury, the world renowned Worcester Foundation for Experimental Biology? This, of course, is not to mention its four major colleges. Worcester Polytechnic Institute, Clark University, Holy Cross, and Assumption College.

And please, in the future, keep opinionated articles such as this on the editorial page.

An Interest In Music?

To the Editor:

What's wrong with the students on this campus? Tuesday night I heard one of the best musical performances ever given on this campus: how many people attended? 115!! I am referring to the concert by Madrigal da Universidade da Bahia, Brazil. As a member of the University Chorale which sponsored the group, I had the privilege to get to know the students who composed this group. They spent at least 10 hours a week for weeks and weeks, and all of their vacations to prepare for the participation in the International Choral Festival. They have missed 22 days of school, and will have to make up all their work when they return!

They were so good that they were the only group in the International Choral Festival asked to perform for a record! They were by far musically superior to any singing that has been done on this campus in my experience! In this concert, they sang in six languages, had perfect control of their voices and of the total effect. They were in perfect pitch, although they sang entirely without accompaniment. To my fairly experienced ears, they made no mistakes in voice production, and thus produced as beautiful a sound as I have ever heard before! And yet, "good 'ole" UMass managed by the skin of its teeth to turn out just over 100 people for this unmatchable performance. At least the students could have shown respect for the time, effort, and money put into this undertaking!

Before they left, one girl said to me in her moderate English: "You don't have very many people interested in music, do you?" Embarrassed and angry for my school, I did not tell her that UMass students are too bound up in their own narrow worlds to experience something as new and wonderful as the Madrigal da Universidade da Bahia, Brazil!

It's so cold out, you...

To the Editor:

It seems that everyone has been writing you letters about the things that they have found in their food at the dining commons. They say that variety is the spice of life. This letter concerns something I can't find.

As the weather is now on the cold side, it seems altogether fitting and proper to wear a jacket. So I do. Tonight was no exception. I wore my brand new $17 jacket with MASSACHUSETTS spelled out in big letters on the back to dinner at the South Commons. Apparently someone didn't and thought my jacket was so sharp that he took it. I hope he was warm in it because I froze myself all the way back to the dorm. Needless to say I was mad.

It's not that I mind the cold so much or the loss of the coat, but rather that I have lost faith in my fellow students. If I can't trust my fellow students with a jacket how can I afford to leave my room unguarded!

There's not much I can do except hope that Santa Clause puts charcoal in his stocking.

Coldly,
The Iceman

Kirkpatrick Lectures
On CIA Growth

"We have evolved a highly effective, highly sensitive central intelligence service which is completely responsible to the U.S." This was the way Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, Jr., first guest of this year's Distinguished Visitors Program, summed up the position of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Speaking last Monday night in the S.U. ballroom, Kirkpatrick, who served with the Office of Strategic Services during the war and later became executive director of the CIA under John McCone, traced the growth of central intelligence in the U.S. He described our intelligence service before WW II as being "very meager".

As early as June 1942 plans for a peacetime intelligence organization were begun by William J. Donovan, termed by Kirkpatrick the "father of central intelligence", and a permanent intelligence system was established by Pres. Roosevelt in 1946. The C.I.A. was established under the National Security Act of 1947.

OUR PRESENT SYSTEM, according to Kirkpatrick, "is not perfect but has steadily improved and matured over the last few years."

"There is no absolute value as to what is perfection in intelligence," he pointed out. "We know that Russian intelligence is very good; they train personnel exceedingly well. However, I think that U.S. intelligence is better."

it is worthy of the responsibility that it holds."

Kirkpatrick used the Cuban missile crisis to point up the capabilities of U.S. intelligence. He told the audience that the first missile site was discovered and determined as such within 72 hours after it was possible to do so.

Said the former director, "The or war ultimatum to U. S. intelligence—to decide what Russia would do if we demanded removal of the missiles. The U. S. Intelligence Board calculated that Russia would remove them, and we all know the ultimate outcome of that decision."

Explaining the role of central intelligence, Kirkpatrick commented that, "It does not do what Ian Fleming would have it do. Bond stories are good adventure but not consistent with intelligence operations."

The responsibility of the C.I.A., Mr. Kirkpatrick said, "Is to pull together all the information of the various intelligence agencies, analyze it and if possible give a projection of what is going to happen on a given matter."

EMPHASIZING the need for a central intelligence agency, Mr. Kirkpatrick stressed the incident at Pearl Harbor at which time, he said, "our information on the Japanese was excellent."

"If we had been analyzing it in a central place the disaster might have been avoided," he commented.

Kirkpatrick was unable to give any budget process or personnel information about the C.I.A. but said that they were set up similar to other government organizations.

He explained that there are approximately 30 members of Congress on C.I.A. sub-committees and pointed out, "These members of Congress have full knowledge of the C.I.A. which they care to inform themselves of."

"There is no question left unanswered," he said.

Kirkpatrick stressed firmly his conviction that "intelligence is a major peacetime institution."

"If U.S. intelligence can keep this nation informed it can be one of the most permanent factors for peace on this earth," he concluded.

by Jim Foudy,
Day Editor

The first meeting of the newly formed Collegiate Flying Club was held Mon. night, Oct. 4. Elections were held and the club was formally organized.

The purpose of the club is twofold:

- to provide the opportunity for those who are interested in learning to fly to do so inexpensively, under the guidance of government-approved instructors
- to provide the experienced pilot with well-maintained equipment to fly for business or pleasure.

The club welcomes all students and faculty-members from Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, Smith and U.M. It will be based at Pilgrim Airport in Hatfield where it will four-place Cessna 172.

Both planes have tricycle gear and are equipped with radio. Plans for the future include use of a Cessna 150 later in the year. The airport is open all winter, and the club will be active all year.

The next meeting of the organization will be held Monday night, Oct. 11, at 8 in O'Connell's apartment, 6A, Presidential Apartments, Rt. 116, N. Amherst.

The club invites all interested fly a two-place, Piper Colt, and a members of the Four College Community, inexperienced or experienced pilots, to attend. Anyone needing a ride from any of the four colleges should contact either Dick McGee, 584-8318, or Jon Caron, 253-9131.

UMass Alumnus,
Dr. Waugh Retires

Dr. Frederick V. Waugh, University of Massachusetts alumnus who has won national honors in the agricultural statistics field, has retired after nearly 40 years of service with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C.

Brought up on the University campus, Dr. Waugh is the son of Prof. Frank A. Waugh, who established and developed the UMass landscaping and horticulture curriculum in the early years of this century.

Dr. Waugh's brother, also a UMass alumnus, is Sidney B. Waugh, who has won international honors as a sculptor and a designer for the Steuben Glass Company.

After obtaining his B.S. degree at UMass in 1922, Dr. Waugh received an M.S. at Rutgers University in 1924 and a Ph.D. at Columbia University in 1929. He also did graduate level study at Harvard University and spent a year in Europe under a Social Science Research Council fellowship.

He served in a variety of posts with the U.S. Department of Agriculture from 1928 until his retirement Sept. 30 of this year. In addition, he was secretary of the New England Research Council on Marketing and Food Supply and director of the Massachusetts Division of Markets.

Crowded North Commons Conditions To Improve

"It's not all that bad," comments one junior from the complex.

"I guess not," her friend agrees. "I like the ice cream better at the North Commons, anyway."

The residents of the Orchard are beginning to accept the fact that they must eat at the "old" commons and that it isn't a disadvantage. Many students agree that with the new path under construction, the walk to dinner takes about the same amount of time that it did last semester. Most of the path which winds down to the dining commons from the west side of Emily Dickinson, has been paved already and temporary lights have been strung up.

The proximity of the Orchard Hill residents to the North Commons, due to the construction of the path, is one of the main reasons those students, rather than the residents of Brooks and Brett, were chosen to eat there for the first semester.

According to Gerald Grady, business manager of the University, this fall semester carries the heaviest load of students in the two commons in a span of ten years from 1962 to 1972.

Last year we had 4800 students eating at the commons and expected from 5400 to 5600 this year," he states. "However, we now have over 6000 students carrying meal tickets."

The commons is now seating almost two persons to every one it accommodated last year. The lines, unless due to a necessary delay such as the obtaining of a new tray of food, are supposedly moving at the rate of 12 persons per minute and it looks as if everyone has been able to find a seat, Grady said.

As Jack Martin, the director of the dining commons comments, "We're not overcrowded until there are no more seats available."

The only problem concerning long waiting lines seems to occur Monday through Thursday evenings when one of the Orchard dorms uses line 1 for a dorm dinner. At first the residents of the complex had to eat in lines 4 and 5 and the end of that line had seemed far out of sight at times. The commons managers, realizing this problem, have now arranged for the students of Eugene Field and David Grayson to "float", that is to be served at any line in the North Commons.

Despite the many complaints and so-called inconveniences, Mr. Grady assures us that the Southwest Dining Commons will be ready in February. The new dining hall will be the first of three dining halls to be constructed in that complex; the second commons there is scheduled to open in September, 1966.

Dining in the North Commons certainly does not defeat the purpose of the Orchard Complex. The students have not been separated, but incorporated. If anything, perhaps this shifting around will make the students on the hill feel that they are members of a whole university and not just a section of it.

It must be remembered, moreover, that the South Commons was not built expressly for the students of the complex, but rather to cope with the needs of an expanding university, Grady stated.

Summer trips Is Topic On Sunday Eve

Two University students will report on their summer Christian mission projects this Sunday, Oct. 10, in the Student Center behind the Wesley Methodist at 7 p.m. following a 6 p.m. supper.

Gwen Hamill, a junior, served as a guide with a group that conducted tours throughout Europe. The group served primarily high school age students. This year's work was a result of Gwen's last summer work in an Italian student work camp called AGAPE.

Mary Sayre, a sophomore, spent the summer serving on a Methodist mission in Lahaina Maui, Hawaii. Mary worked on various projects and with various age groups.

That students are called to concern in this world will be the general theme of these reports. In their illustrated reports, Gwen and Mary will show what it was like to become involved in the world's problems.

one alto, and one soprano. All the singers were very poised, and the group was in full command of the stage and audience.

The entire audience was impressed by the intricacy of the music and was caught up in its mood. After two encores, the Bahia, Brazil was congratulated heartily by the audience for an evening of unsurpassable beauty.

Marines Offer Summer Training

Captain William B. Williams and Sergeant J. A. Archambault of the U. S. Marine Corps Officer Selection Office, Boston will visit the University of Massachusetts on Oct. 18, 19, and 20.

Students interested in obtaining any information are invited to discuss the various available commissioning programs with the Officer Selection Team during their visit on campus.

The Platoon Leaders Class program (Air or Ground) is open to freshmen, sophomores and juniors. This program is accomplished without military classes, drill or other interruptions during the regular school year. Candidates attend two six-week summer training courses at Quantico, Virginia, and upon graduation from college are commissioned Second Lieutenants.

The Officer Candidate Program (Air or Ground) is open to college seniors and recent graduates. After graduation and upon completion of a ten-week training cycle at Quantico, Virginia, candidates are commissioned Second Lieutenants.

While on campus members of the Officer Selection Team will be located in the Lobby of the Student Union.

How do the Irish unwind after a reel?

When an Irish-American goes back to the auld sod, his friends don't let him slip away quietly. No, indeed. There's got to be a little noise when they wish the departing voyager Sonag agus slan abhaile go h-Eirinn, "Happiness and a safe return to Ireland!"

Certainly the rest of his return is going to be a lot safer than the wild jigs and reels he's dancing right now. But our traveler is allowed a breather now and then, and the brew that refreshes him will very likely be Rheingold Extra Dry. It's amazing how Rheingold helps people say "Godspeed," "Welcome home," or anything else you can think of in any language at all. But it's a fact that people in New York City say it with Rheingold more than with any other beer.

How come?

We don't know. But we must be doing something right.

The newly completed Q.T.V. fraternity house is typical of the fraternities' expansion to meet the growing needs of the University community.

The antique brick structure is built to house 48 and feed 75 Q.T.V.'s. The building is equipped with individually controlled heat, a raised hearth fireplace, and wall to wall carpeting among its many features.

Q.T.V. has been growing with the University since 1869, as one of the first Latin Fraternities in the country.

Skip Hall, president of Q.T.V., announced the house will be ready for occupancy by Homecoming.

Funds Available for Student Assistants

The undergraduate assistantship program, in its third year at UMass, involves 275 students of the three upper classes whose jobs may vary from correcting exams to simple filing.

"However," says Lynn Edward Santner, director of the work scholarships, "we hope that the student will be learning about his vocation from his jobs, not merely performing routine assignments such as filing."

Financed entirely by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the undergraduate assistantship requires that the student work an average of eight hours a week in exchange for $200 credited to his semester bill, or $400 for the academic year. All told, $11,000 is available at the University.

During the late spring and early summer, each department may request undergraduate assistants to serve as faculty assistants, lab assistants, research assistants or readers. The department's requisition goes to the Placement office where the financial aid staff matches scholarship applicants with an assistantship opening in the student's major field, or in a related field.

Requirements for an undergraduate assistantship, which are comparable to the graduate school's fellowships, are a 2.5 cumulative and the financial need as determined through the College Scholarship Service computation of family finances.

No undergraduate assistant is expected to work during vacation periods or final exam periods. These students are also eligible for monetary scholarships which do not require work.

Past Exams On Sale In Univ. Store

Win Cummings, manager of the Student Union Book Store, has announced the sale of "Actual Past Examinations" in Zoology (101), Chemistry III (1) and Botany 100 and 101 (1).

These tests are expected to be used by the students as a method of introduction to the form of testing involved in these three courses. They will also serve as helpful review material for study in the respective courses.

The basis behind acceptance and execution of this plan by the administration and department heads primarily is the thought that self-help would be greatly facilitated.

Other personnel have commented that access to prior examinations would give the student another means of coming in contact with similar, if not the same material that is used in lecture and laboratory.

Talk On Student Life Planned At Colorado

BOULDER, Colo. (CPS)—A "Bitch-In on the Multiversity," a vocal referendum on the problems of student life, has been scheduled early in October at the University of Colorado.

Modeled after the teach-ins on Vietnam, the bitch-in will be aimed at attacking what the student thinks is wrong with the university, why, and what can be done about it.

Unlike the teach-ins, however, there will be no formal, planned speeches. All comments and criticism will come directly from the students themselves.

As each student enters the auditorium, he will be given a numbered IBM card which he will be encouraged to bend, fold, staple, or mutilate. In numerical order, each card-holder will have five minutes to sound off. Only the ordinary rules of good taste will apply; subject matter and position will be wide open.

Sponsored by the national affairs commission of the Associated Students of the University of Colorado, the bitch-in is intended not only to allow the individual student "to get it off his chest," but to provide a set of goals and priorities for action on the problems of students.

The committee planning the bitch-in said that the meeting would not be closed to the positive aspect and those who had praise for the university and the university system would also be welcome to speak.

'65 Sophia Circus Comes To Smith

Sophia's Circus 1965, taking its theme from the Wizard of Oz, will offer a variety of wares and games both traditional and new. Visitors may wander the booth-filled ways of the Emerald City scheduled to rise on the lawn of Chapin House on October 13 from 3 to 6.

Sophia's Circus will begin, appropriately, with a circus parade on campus to herald the opening of the 16 game stands and the 8 food booths. The parade will assemble at 4 p.m. in front of the Quad and 38 Dorothys, representing the various campus houses, will march. One of these will be chosen to rule over Sophia's Circus.

In addition to the ever-popular auctioning of treats and services to the college houses, Sophia's Circus will sponsor booths such as the wicked witch's jail, faculty weight guessing, and "Give the Tin Man a Heart." Among choice items to be auctioned off are a raccoon coat and the use of a red Mustang for one weekend. The food booths will feature samores, gingerbread, cotton candy and candy apples. There will be a Chinese auction, faculty wives food booth and the traditional used clothes booth.

Come to the circus on the lawn of Chapin House. In case of rain, it will move to Scott Gymnasium. Tickets are 50c and everybody is invited. Entire proceeds go to the Service Organization of Smith.

These cadets must also take a personal interview conducted by a board of the unit's senior members.

U.S. State Department To Send Grads To So. Vietnam

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (CPS)—The University of Michigan is embarking on an experimental program with the U.S. State Department to send graduate students to study in war-torn Vietnam.

The students are to bridge a 20-year gap in educational cooperation between the United States and South Vietnam as an "intellectual peace corps."

One University of Michigan student and four other American universities have been selected to receive the academic fellowships for a year's study at the University of Saigon, Saigon, South Vietnam.

Dr. L.A. Peter Gosling, director of the University's Center for South and Southeast Asian Studies, said the program is a new attempt by the State Department's Bureau of Cultural and Educational Affairs to place American students overseas.

"Government officials have felt for a long time that the Bureau should involve the universities and make use of their experience, teaching and selection of students for overseas study," Dr. Gosling said.

Dr. Gosling said he was amazed at the number of excellent students who applied for the new fellowships evidencing a keen desire to study in Vietnam.

"In setting up the program, I suddenly realized that it has been impossible for students to get to Vietnam for the last 20 years," he pointed out.

"There simply was no way for interested students to do it. The foundations were keeping away because of the changing political developments, and no program encouraged scholarly pursuits between the American student and the Vietnamese people."

The University of Saigon originally requested the State Department to set up a program enabling American students to study there.

The students selected for the program are interested in researching topics ranging from the social sciences to the humanities, Dr. Gosling said. They will spend 10 months at the University of Saigon, possibly extended periods if they wish.

Hunsberger Awarded For Physics

Two National Science Foundation grants totaling $71,000 for research in physics have been awarded UMass according to Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger of the College of Arts and Sciences.

A $41,000 grant will support a two-year research project entitled "Problems in Theoretical Physics" by Dr. Robert L. Gluckstern, head of the physics department, and Dr. Shin-R Linn, assistant professor of physics.

The project is a study of the problem of electron scattering, particularly to see the effect of electronic shielding and the magnetic structure of the nucleus on the scattering.

A $30,000 grant is for "Endor Studies of Radiation-Induced Free Radicals," a two-year project by Raymond A. Patten, assistant professor of physics. The Endor (electron nucleus double resonance) technique, according to Prof. Patten, has 20 to 50 times more resolution than conventional paramagnetic resonance techniques and allows more accurate information to be obtained.

The molecules under study have been damaged by gamma radiation and are called free radicals. Precise knowledge of the nature and extent of this damage can be used in radiation effect studies, he said.

Bicycles To Be Auctioned

Fifty abandoned and unclaimed bicycles will be auctioned off tomorrow at 11 a.m. on the south terrace of the Student Union.

Proceeds of the auction will be used for scholarships. The auction is being sponsored by Maroon Key, men's sophomore honorary-service society at UMass.

The general public is invited to bid on the bicycles which have been accumulated over the past several months by campus police. All have been declared officially abandoned or unclaimed.

Prospective bidders will be given a sheet listing makes, descriptions, and any defects in the bicycles. Mr. Horold Watts, University program officer, will be auctioneer.

the book by Bella and Samuel Spewark.

Performances will be Oct. 22, 23, 28, 29 and 30 at 8:15 in Bowker Auditorium. Tickets will go on sale on Oct. 11.

The play is directed by Joel J. Friedman, choreography was arranged by Marilyn Patton assisted by Sharon Moser. The musical director is Paul Bartsch.

As Kiss Me Kate opens, in Baltimore, producer Fred Graham (David Kidd) assembles his cast on stage for final instructions before the opening of Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew. (Another Opening, Another Show). In the cast with Graham are his former wife, Lilli Vanessi; Lois Lane, a singer in whom Graham is deeply interested; and Bill Calhoun, who is Lois' primary interest.

Graham and Lilli, reminiscing nostalgically about other shows in which they have appeared together, offer one of the show's favorites, Wundabar.

ON STAGE The Taming of the Shrew gets underway (We Open in Venice) as Lois (Kelley Schwartz) as Bianca and Bill (Ray Poole) as Lucentio discuss Bianca's inability to marry until her older sister, Katherina, played by Lilli (Patricia Kelley), has been affianced.

Petruchio, played by Graham, who has come to Venice in search of a wife, agrees to marry Katherina. However, she isn't the wife of whom he has dreamed (Were Thine That Special Face).

As the revival continues, Petruchio, although just married to Katherina and beginning his tempestuous wedded life, starts to yearn for his life as a single man (Where Is the Life That Late I Led?).

OFFSTAGE BILL discovers Lois flirting and reproaches her. As she explains that she is Always True to You in My Fashion, he counters with a charming expression of affection for Bianca, the character she plays in The Taming of the Shrew.

A subplot of Kiss Me Kate involves Bill and two gangsters. Bill signed Mr. Graham's name to a $10,000 I.O.U. in the "most respectable floating crap game in town." Just before the curtain falls on the first act of The Taming of the Shrew, the players are accosted by the two gangsters who have come to collect.

However, all situations are resolved by the finale. Because of a sudden change in gang administration, the gangsters tear up the now-worthless I.O.U. and pause to pay a decidedly unusual tribute to Shakespeare (Brush Up Your Shakespeare).

Lilli, in Katherina's words, expresses her intention of returning to Graham (I Am Ashamed That Women Are So Simple). She and Graham are reunited. Lois and Bill, too, reach their own understanding.

Intramural Report

by Dave James

Wednesday's light schedule was featured by the Lemon's 6-0 upset of the previously unbeaten Hoovers. The Hoovers had managed to steal 4 straight games by the slender margin of one point. Dobson scored the only touchdown of the game.

The Oaks rolled over the Hi-Lo's 34-6 as Ferron completed an almost unbelievable 88% of his passes (21-24) for 5 TD's. The Maples held the Limes to no completions and no first downs in triumphing 15-0.

Rounding out the South league action, the Hickories defeated the Pines 25-7 behind Enzinger's strong arm (12-24, 3TD's.) In the only other game played Wednesday, the College St. A.C. edged the Selohasa's 14-13 in an exciting independent league game. The Selophasas came from behind with a late TTD to tie the game but the A.C.'s won the game on a first down advantage.

ON TUESDAY THE Chadbourne Maroons' seemingly impregnable armor started to show cracks as the Greenough Garfields gave them a surprisingly tough battle before bowing 25-18. League-leading pass receiver Bill Thomas of the Garfields caught 6 passes.

The Baker Buffaloes rallied to top the Chadbourne Eagles 12-9 after a scoreless first half. After taking a 21-0 halftime lead the Baker Bruins cruised to a 27-18 win over the Middlesex Braves. Libby's fine passing (915 and 3 TD's) helped the Baker Barracudas whip the Greenough Grants 26-6 and complete a Baker sweep for the evening.

Despite a 19-6 halftime lead the Trojans had to hold on for a wild and woolly 26-24 decision over the Bengals with the all-important PAT's providing the difference. Crowley threw 4 TD passes and Perkins had 8 receptions for the Trojans. Gibbons (21-30) and McDougall (11 receptions) kept the Cherries rolling with a 20-14 triumph over the Redmen after the Cherries trailed 14-7 at the half.

The starry combination of Knight throwing (19-29 and 3 TTD's) and Larvey catching (7 receptions) led the Redwoods to a 19-13 win over the plucky Rams. Fitzgerald's passing (19-25) led a 24-0 Hawks' white-washing of the Phallices.

Turning to Tuesday's independent games, Ricacher took over at quarterback after a scoreless first half and guided the Chem Club to a 12-0 decision over the Innkeepers.

The underdog UM Band put up a game battle before losing to the Courtesy Taxi club 34-6. The UM Band only trailed 7-0 at the half but the power of the undefeated Taxis was too much. Klaes completed 17 of 30 for 5 TD's.

In a contest of the also-rans the Hampshire Hardnoses romped over the Land Architecture team 25-6.

big homer and the six run outburst that ended the Dodgers hopes.

In the second game the Twins again proved to be a well-run ball-club. The game was a scoreless duel between the Dodgers' ace Sandy Koufax, and eighteen game winner Jim "Kitty" Katt.

Koufax pitched extremely well in the first five innings from a mound that offered poor footing due to rain. But in the sixth he gave up three straight hits and an error which led to two Twin Scores. He was removed in the next inning for a pinch hitter. The Dodgers got one run back later, but Perranoski could not keep the Twins close as he gave up three additional runs.

Bob Allison made the play of the series when he grabbed Lou Johnson's long fly with a man on. Allison caught the drive at his shoe-tops and slid headfirst in the soggy outfield grass.

Errors have hurt the Dodgers so far in the first two games. In the first game an error set up the big third inning. The second game saw four errors and a wild pitch set up four of the Twins runs.

But the biggest surprise of all has been the lack of the superb pitching that brought the pennant to L.A. Koufax struck out nine batters in his six inning stint, but failed to come up with the stopper in the two run sixth. Drysdale looked extremely poor in his outing.

If the Dodgers are to come back from this undesirable position they will have to halt the great hitting of the Twins. Nobody expected the Dodgers to

VIEWPOINT

'World' or 'U.S.' SERIES?

by Howie Davis,
Sports Editor

A certain television station in Connecticut has a sport show each night that gives a legitimate recap of the important sports news.

Wednesday was no exception. The most important item on the minds of all sports fans is the best out of seven fall classic known as the World Series.

However, if you turn on your "watching machines" to Channel 3 you will hear this sporting event referred to as the "United States Series."

Sportscaster Bob Steele feels that the name "World Series" is inappropriate since teams from other countries are not invited to participate.

It was pointed out that Japan and many South American countries have representative teams that could compete with United States teams.

You don't have to look too far to notice that many star performers in the major leagues are from south of the border. Where would U.S. baseball be without Tony Oliva, Roberto Clemente, the Alou brothers, Zoilo Versailles and all the Pedros and Jose's?

Mr. Steele has a point, and a good one at that. What would happen if a real "World Series" were organized? For what country would the American stars perform? Not only would this present a contract crisis, but international developments might occur.

One merely has to recall the aggravation the San Francisco Giants had when they tried to contract Japan's star pitcher, Masanuri Whatshisname.

If the major league baseball teams set a precedent and did initiate such a tournament, this would place professional baseball and football in an embarrassing situation; for the Boston Celtics and the Cleveland Browns refer to themselves as the "World Champions."

Mr. Steele, unfortunately, is fighting a losing battle. When a sports fan tunes in to his program and hears the annual autumn extravaganza referred to as the United States Series, he will stop to think; but he will continue to call the winning team the World Champions for fear of social excommunication.

Before leaving for the game all the radio equipment must be both checked and double-checked, for failure at a far-away press box could result in embarrassment to the announcers and to the technicians back at the station along with many perturbed Redman fans.

Having arrived safely at the site of the ball game with equipment and personnel in tact, first on the agenda is for the telephone line to be checked out. The operator assures us that the testing board is closed down because it is Saturday. We assure her that it can't be because hundreds of football games are being played all across the land. After quite a verbal battle the testing board is in contact with us and no, the line is not working properly. Sure, we know the game will be exciting but what can match the thrills of knowing that "air-time" is in ten minutes and chances of being on aren't good. But of course as in all good stories, the situation is remedied and hundreds of UMass fans are able to follow their beloved Redmen.

Tune in Saturday at one-twenty to see if we make it.

Redmen in 'Must Win' vs. UConn at Storrs Twins 2-Up after 5-1 Victory Over Dodgers

by Howie Davis, Sports Editor

The University of Connecticut will be the formidable opponent of the University of Massachusetts tomorrow when the Redmen travel to Storrs for a 1:30 game.

UM will be without the services of defensive tackle Dick Qualey who is sidelined with a bruised sternum. Other than that the Redmen will be in perfect physical condition for this important Yankee Conference clash.

The Huskies are led by quarterback Dave Whaley who kicks, runs and throws well enough to keep the defense honest.

Whaley led UConn to an upset victory over Yale in the season's opener. This marked the first time a Huskies eleven had ever beaten the Ivy League team.

The Redmen will have an average of 25 pounds per man advantage over UConn in the line. UM averages 218 to UConn's 193.

STATISTICS favor UM. The Baystaters have averaged 118 yards on the ground in their first three games as compared to 39 for the Huskies. Whaley has completed 28 of 68 passes for 329 yards in two games.

Greg Landry, Redmen soph quarterback, has hit for 30 of 55 attempts and 495 yards thus far

The Minnesota Twins have shocked the L.A. Dodgers by sweeping the first two games of the World Series, 8-2 and 5-1.

The Twins used classy fielding along with clutch hitting and pitching in displaying a far superior team, and proving the oddsmakers wrong.

The stars in the first game were Zoilo Versalles, Jim Grant, and Tony Oliva. The latter's fine catch saved the Twins in the early part of the game. Versalles hit a clutch three run homer in the six run third inning to ice the game. He also knocked in another run later in the game.

Grant did not look at his best allowing ten hits, but most of these came after the game was just about over. He gave up two runs and one walk while striking out five. Oliva went hitless but his great defensive efforts helped him set a World Series putout record.

The Dodgers drew blood first as Ron Fairly homered in the top of the second inning. This was the last the Dodgers saw of the lead, however as Don Mincher's circuit clout tied the score in the second half of that frame. Then came Versalles

WMUA COVERS ALL REDMEN GRID CONTESTS

by Jeff Baker

To the average listener of a Saturday afternoon football game there is little that doesn't meet the eye. But as seemingly simple as it may be to sit in the Hatch or to flick on the radio, that is how obscure the problems of the actual broadcast really are. For preparatory to the actual broadcast of a football game over WMUA, humor, ingenuity and anxiety are at a premium.

Weeks before the actual contest, brochures are secured loaded with pertinent info about the prospective opponent. Along with this material hopefully comes permission to broadcast and several press passes which are needed for members of the broadcast crew. Next, a quick and carefully worded call to the telephone company is needed to secure rental of a line over which the actual broadcast will be relayed.

With these problems finally solved, play-by-play man and "Voice of the Redmen" Jeff Baker along with his assistant Jim Slattery, who does the commentary of the game, finally begin the process of readying themselves mentally, much the same way Vic Fusia and his charges do, for the upcoming opponent. This entails an in-depth understanding of all facets of the

Bedcheck Awakens Girls In Quadrangle Dormitory

By Pat Petow, Staff Reporter

Editor's Note: The housemother in the story did not wish to be identified.

A second bedcheck this year in a woman's dormitory in the Quad was held last Friday night.

The housemother explained that a door "buzzer" went off, indicating that the door was opened after curfew and that someone either went out or came in. Since no one was found missing from the dorm, the housemother speculated that a girl returned illegally to avoid penalty for being late.

Previous to the buzzer, the counselor observed two boys outside acting suspiciously; the housemother, not aware of their presence at the time, thought they might have been signalling to girls in the dorm to open the door.

Although no bedchecks at all were held in the dorm last year, a first was held late Sunday night last month.

At that time, a girl who had signed out for the weekend had not returned; this was learned when the over-night cards were (routinely) inspected. The dorm check took place to determine if any others were missing; none were.

The housemother described the policy when a girl does not return, after waiting one hour and a half after curfew: (1) the Dean of Women is called; (2) the parents are called; (3) the police are called; and (4) the housemother waits up until the girl returns or is located.

The housemother noted that the University telephones are quite busy due to incoming calls around curfew time. In the Sept. incident, the girl was finally located about 1:30; she had been over-due because of a minor accident.

It is true of any dorm, the housemother emphasized, that a bedcheck would be conducted whenever the buzzer is sounded or there is reason to believe girls are missing: In neither case above, were illegal guests found.

In an Orchard Hill dorm this summer, the housemother said, bedchecks were required each week.

Counselors in some dorms have elected to conduct surprise checks, she commented. The Dean of Women, however, does not plan periodic checks she said, but encourages their use when needed.

Asserting there was no desire to inconvenience the girls, the housemother said that were a student found missing in the beginning of the search, the check would end there.

Not wanting her dorm to be singled out, she observed that bedchecks took place in other dorms as well and that they were necessary for the University to meet its obligations to all the parents.

Placement Office Has Many Job Openings For Students

By Charles Mitchell
Staff Reporter

If you need money, the office of Placement and Financial Aid has just the thing for students.

Lynn Santner, staff assistant, reports that this office is actively seeking students for work in many fields at $1.50 an hour. These fields include:

Administration assistants, faculty assistants, audio-visual work, library assistants, research assistants, dining hall assistants, laboratory assistants, clerical workers, statistical and stockroom assistants.

Each student will be placed in his major field if he desires but this is not required. Under the program, a student can earn up to $500 a year with a maximum 15 hours weekly. There is also a summer work-study program.

Funds have been made available under the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, with federal money matched and distributed by the University. Jobs are to $500 a year with a maximum 15 income and number of dependents. Students may check with the Financial Aid office to see if they qualify.

In other areas, all university National Defense Loans have been used, as has the state-appropriated scholarship money, awarded on the basis of need and productivity. Still available, however, are the High Education Loan Plan aids available to sophomores, juniors and seniors through home-town banks. Here the student can borrow up to $1,000 at 5 per cent interest.

Also available to needy juniors and seniors are Massachusetts Assembly Loans up to $500 at 3 per cent, payable three years after graduation. Still another is the short term emergency fund of up to $200 at 3 per cent for one year.

If you need money now or for next year, the Office of Placement (Continued on page 8)

UM Redmen Rally, Beat UConn 20-7

By Howie Davis
Sports Editor

The University of Massachusetts scored three second half touchdowns to overcome a 7-0 half-time deficit as they defeated the University of Connecticut 20-7 in a football game played Saturday.

It was Homecoming for the UConn fans and their Huskies gave them something to cheer about early in the game.

Jack Redmond, the Huskies' punter, sent a high, end-over-end kick down to the UMass 30 which Dave Giarla, UM safety man, fumbled. The ball was recovered by Scott Kehoe, of UC.

Six plays later quarterback Dave Whaley carried the ball in from the one. Whaley converted making the score 7-0.

This was the end of the scoring in the second half. The Redmen showed a powerful offense in this stanza, but fumbled three times and had three other drives stalled by penalties.

UConn received the opening kickoff in the second half and decided to try their luck in the air. Dave Kelley, UM defensive specialist, intercepted the first play the Huskies tried from scrimmage to set up what was to be the first UM score.

Quarterback Greg Landry exploited the power of fullback Phil Vandersea and the speed of Bob Detore as the Redmen marched entirely on the ground. Vandersea scored from the two, Milt Morin kicked the extra point and the score was tied 7-7.

THE SECOND UM score was also made via the ground. Senior Richie Lewis, Vandersea and Detore were the workhorses, as the Redmen traveled 48 yards in six plays with Detore hitting paydirt from the six. Morin's attempt was off to the left. The score now read, UM 13, UC 7.

The final score of the day is credited to the scrambling, running and passing of Landry. The (Turn To Football, Page 8)

STUDENTS DECLARED COLLEGE REFORMERS

A historian told the nation's higher education leadership Wednesday that students rather than college administrators have traditionally been the reformers of life in the academic community.

In one of a series of background papers prepared for the 48th annual meeting of the American Council on Education, Frederick Rudolph, professor of history at Williams College, traced the history of student rebellion against the academic status quo. He said that 19th century under-graduates "took what were pale imitations of English residential colleges, given over to what was certainly more religion than most students could bear, and they simply reformed them."

He called it "remarkably instructive" in the light of current student unrest that these early student rebels were more effective "than the would be reformers in the ranks of the presidents and the professors."

At the same time, Charles Frankel, Columbia University philosopher who recently was appointed assistant secretary of state for educational and cultural affairs, insisted that the students, as transient apprentices of the campus community, had no inherent right to dictate how that community was to be governed. He declared that conduct that disrupts the educational process was out of bounds. (New York Times News Service)

North Dining Commons Will Extend Renovation Plans Soon

By Rita Gotowala Staff Reporter

There not only have been several noticeable renovations in the North Commons thus far, but there are many more to come.

The floor of the dining hall at line 1 is brand new and the walls there have been painted. The stairway at the main entrance has been completely paneled.

The South Room on the third floor of the North Commons is being used by several student and faculty groups. Modern lighting has been added, wall to wall carpeting has been laid down and the walls have been paneled. A new dining table and chairs will soon complete the renovations there.

Because new tables and chairs are not yet possible due to overcrowded conditions, all the wooden tables were sanded over the summer. New chairs and tables will come when the Southwest Commons alleviates the burden.

South Commons could hold approximately 1/3 more students and line 1 approximately 50 more students, were it not for the seating arrangements. Therefore, new tables would only worsen the conditions.

New curtain rods have been put up in the North Commons. The new drapes, which will be panels of drapes of different colors, are now on order and are expected at the beginning of next year.

New Formica trays like those at South Commons will replace the old metal trays in November.

$25,000 worth of new china was ordered and has been in use since September.

And in order to brighten the so-called "dingy" atmosphere of the "old" Commons, new lighting will be installed at least by next year.

The only construction immediately planned for the Commons is a glass enclosed bridge to be built between lines 1 and lines 4 and 5.

These plans are no re-hash of what has been said in previous years. The work at the Commons will be done.

Community Bathrooms Cited As One of Many Problems Confronting Married Students

According to Mr. Dario Politella, former editor of the Collegian and presently a member of the faculty, married students on campus was a war time phenomenon. When Mr. Politella was an undergraduate, this institution had its first experience in providing housing for married students. Surplus army barracks, divided into one and two bedroom apartments, housed approximately ninety families.

Located near the football field, it was called "Federal Circle", or more affectionately, "maternity row" because of the rapidity with which its population increased. The apartments reportedly had thin walls, coal stoves, showers but no baths, and were generally in poor shape.

BUT THEY WERE CHEAP— $45.00 a month—and fun, "the ultimate in togetherness". The biggest problem was getting in. Yes, twenty years ago, as today, there was an infinitely long waiting list. It is interesting to note that at the present time, some members of the freshmen or sophomore classes might have been born right here on this campus — the "maternity row kids."

But has the housing situation shown any significant improvement in the past twenty years? Irrate married students think not. Among the numerous complaints are the following:

"The administration should give married students seeking housing fair warning about how severe the housing shortage really is. More married dorms are desperately needed. Married couples say it is almost impossible to get into the new available dorms because of the long waiting list and the fact that faculty and foreign students are given preference.

"Dorm living may be fine for single students, but it gets a bit ridiculous when married students have to share a single community bathroom to a floor. It also seems unfair to both parties to house single male students along with married students in the same dorm. Off-campus accommodations are also very limited and much too expensive for the average married couple attending college.

Married students say that if the University can spend vast amounts of money on modern, beautiful dorms such as Orchard Hill and the Southwest Complex, why shouldn't the growing number of married students on our campus be treated as well.

Does Beatle Hair Cause Pimples?

by Paula McCarthy
Feature Staff

Boys and girls with hairdos like the Beatles' may not become bald, but they may get skin irritations.

Linda G. Allen, research associate of the American Medical Association, said that doctors are finding more cases of skin disorders since the Beatle hair styles have become popular. Although the doctors do not agree on how overhanging hair aggravates skin ailments, they do agree that there is a definite relationship between the two.

DOCTOR GAGE OF THE INFIRMARY, however, said that he would hesitate to make such a definite statement. He said that acne is totally a metabolic problem which, due to certain factors, may be accentuated by these hairstyles. Oily skin is usually accompanied by oily hair. Thus, these hairstyles probably would aggravate the problem already existing. Also, beatle hair cuts obstruct the sun's beneficial ultra-violet rays from the skin.

Another problem posed by these hair cuts is that since the hair is long and thick it is more difficult to wash and dry. Diet, a chief factor in skin health, may also enter into this. It is thought, (though not proven) by some that a beatle hair cut denotes a certain degree of non-conformity. If this is true, it may well be that this non-conformity carries over into the area of diet, possibly inviting skin disorder to occur.

Doctor Gage said that in order to state a positive correlation between acne and beatle cuts, it would be necessary to make intense observations of large control groups. And, although he could explain the correlation if it were proven valid, he would not at this time say that any of the tendencies mentioned above were characteristics of those currently sporting beatle hair cuts.

However, the authorities at Marquette University in Milwaukee seem to be very disturbed by this problem. A new edition of the University's student handbook outlaws both beards and long hair. Two bearded faculty members are

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Shall The Minority Rule?

With the voting for freshman class officers soon to be held it is a good time to give some forethought to elections and to discuss the faults in the electoral system so that they can be corrected before election day.

The most glaring problem is that of lack of voters. Past elections have shown that few winning candidates rarely receive an absolute majority of the possible votes, an absolute majority being more than half of all the students in the entire class, as opposed to a relative majority, which includes only those who cast ballots.

Hence, few of the officers are true representatives of the majority of their classes. Of course, in the upperclass elections in which the incumbents often run unopposed the lack of voters is understandable; but in the freshman elections in which there are often heated campaigns and many candidates for most of the positions the problem needs to be explained.

The apathy may be considered a fault of the students. It takes only a few minutes to walk down to the Student Union and fill out a ballot, but many students are too busy to fulfill this duty even when passing right through the lobby of the S.U.

A possible solution would be to set up the polls in the dorms instead of the Student Union, and to conduct the elections like those for the senate, from the hours of 6:00 P.M.-9:00 P.M. instead of during the day. After all, when a city votes for a mayor the citizens do not have to go all the way down to city hall to cast a ballot.

Another reason why students are disinclined to vote is that they are seldom made aware of the real campaign issues. Many potential voters refrain from exercising their right, because they have no knowledge of the candidate's qualifications or experience, except what they learn from campaign posters. A good solution would be a Candidate Night — an assembly at which those seeking office would discuss various pertinent issues in public before prospective voters, who could then compare candidates and make a qualified choice, based not on fuzzy reasoning but on accurate information.

You Can't Get No Satisfaction

Put down that book. Why should you study when there are so many other things to do? What is more important to you? All you really want is satisfaction. Then why don't you just go down to the pond and give your books a seaman's burial. Is there no better sight than to see a swan attack your floating chemistry notebook?

You ask yourself what is it that tears you away from your studies? Well, the sociologist would say that you have a time orientation conflict. In simpler terms, this means a conflict of whether to decide to live for the present or for the future. Should you eat, drink, and be merry for tomorrow the bomb may fall, or should you study for that future job which will be worth fifteen grand to you a year. This is what is tearing you and most college students apart. Everywhere—at Harvard, at Smith, at UMass.

The conflict that rages within you is unbearable. Demands, demands. That is all you get — from your parents, from your community, from that creature called society, and from your own conscience. You've been dished the same food since you can remember—sacrifice now for a successful future.

What are you to do? Are you to divorce the present from the future by living in one without thought of the other? Maybe the answer lies with your friends. You see your roommate study day in and day out, and he keeps telling you that nothing will stop him from achieving his dream of becoming a doctor. Then you see your friend across the hall who is popular, oblivious to the future, and gets by with his gentleman's "C".

What is the answer then? Are there just two alternatives from which to decide or is there possibly a third? You hem and haw, and finally through experience you decide that you have to combine the two into a happy medium. It is just another law of survival — to live neither in the present nor in the future, but rather on a bridge that joins the two.

The Victory Of Defeat

Individual's championing a so called lost cause often feel that they are heroically inflicting injury upon themselves. In reality they are treading the safest and least harmful path.

Those who take the minority or extreme position, the non-conformist stand, picture themselves as being in a vulnerable position. They are under the impression that they are leaving themselves open for a full scale attack.

However, in assuming a lost cause the individual clears himself of any meaningful responsibility. In knowing that his position will not receive majority support he can, in future times, divorce himself from the issue. When his cause inevitably loses he can sever his ties.

On the other hand, the champion of the winning cause shoulders the responsibility for his actions for an undetermined length of time. When his cause wins he takes on the burden of popular opinion. The blame for whatever develops or results from his victory is always placed at his doorstep.

The winner's stand in the victorious cause is never forgotten. The responsibility for the resultant state is always his.

The supporter of the lost cause never has to convert his ideas into concrete actions. He seldom, if ever, must answer for his ideological point of view.

TO THE NEWSPAPERS OF THE UNITED STATES:

It is with both pride and pleasure that I participate in this traditional tribute to our nation's newspapers. Too often taken for granted, America's countless daily and weekly papers have been vital guardians of her time-honored traditions and eloquent spokesmen for the cherished ideals of her freedom-loving people. Taken together, our nation's newspapers constitute the world's most responsible and effective organ of current information. It is up to us to safeguard the freedom of our papers to inquire, to criticize, to express divergent views and to stand as sentinels for the public wherever the public's business is being transacted. Newspapers and their readers are partners in freedom, and if we fail to defend the freedom of our press, we neglect our own. I am confident that Americans everywhere wholeheartedly join me during National Newspaper Week in high recognition of the indispensable role of our free press in the everyday life of our beloved nation.

Lyndon B. Johnson
President

This week, Oct. 10-16, is National Newspaper Week. It is a time when all Americans should consider the service which is provided to them by their great presses.

Most of us would be very uninformed, indeed, were it not for the paper which we take so much for granted. For, nowhere else can we find out so much about so many things in so little time. The above letter is in tribute to the newspapers of this country and the service which they provide.

For, it can truly be said, "Liberty, without the voice of liberty, is not liberty." We would have trouble being a true democracy without the services our newspapers provide.

Parachute Enthusiasts Hear Talk by Veteran

By Pamela Metaxas
Staff Reporter

Nathan Pond, a veteran of over 1000 parachute jumps, presented a talk on parachuting and showed a short film Wednesday night in Hasbrouck.

He explained he first became interested in flying in his teens. "When I became 16 years old I had my pilot's license on my birthday".

Making his first jump in 1952 when parachuting was relatively new, Pond used a smoke pot for a target. By 1956 Jacques Estel came to the US from France and was instrumental in organizing the first parachuting team.

At the time 200 parachuting jumps were made in the US. Now there are over 150,000 international jumps made.

Pond also pointed out in 1956 there were only 3 men's Parachuting Clubs of America. In '65 there are over 9,000 and another 16,000 that aren't officially registered.

Pond classified competition into style in the air and accuracy in landing. Style may be defined as, going through a series of acrobatics before the parachute opens and accuracy as landing closest to a small target on the ground.

In competition the judges watch through binoculars and award and deduct points depending on the skill of the parachutist.

He mentioned that the "problem with sport parachuting is that you can't ever really see it." From the plane the descending parachutist resembles a dot and from the ground binoculars are needed to see anything at all.

This problem was solved in 1960 when Lou Sanborn (now at Orange Airport) mounted a camera on top of his helmet and began photographing parachuting in the air. This brought the audience closer to the home territory of the sport and gave everyone a chance to see parachuting close up.

According to Pond several new discoveries and techniques have been developed to improve parachuting.

By cutting a hole in the canopy it was found the parachute came down slower and it was possible to control speed up to 20 mph.

It was also found that by arching the body in free fall the parachutist could control his movements.

Pond emphasized that although the instruction course for a beginner's first jump is only three hours, student injuries at Orange have been under 2/10 of 1%.

For the beginner the overall cost is $35 which includes jump coveralls, boots, radio helmet, parachutes, instruction and aircraft lift. If the student wishes to jump again on the same day it costs 10 dollars. After that each jump is $5.

Starting with the second jump the beginner receives instruction with the Telsan Technique. This instruction will continue until the student has completed three stable and accurate 15 second delays. It includes pre-flight training in canopy handling, stability, controlled turns, spot-

Law School A Good Possibility For University In Near Future

By Jeanne Brooks
Staff Reporter

Another Graduate School stands as a strong possibility for the University of Massachusetts.

A bill, proposing the establishment of a State Law School on the Amherst campus, may reach the legislative floor in Boston soon. It has already passed the Judiciary Committee, and is now in the Ways and Means Committee. From there, the bill will go to the House and Senate floors for final approval. Floor action is dependent upon establishment of a tax program.

Sponsored by Rep. Allan McGuane (D-Greenfield), the proposal calls for allotment of $50,000 this year for a preliminary study of plans and hiring a dean.

Although the Law School has been proposed in previous legislative sessions and defeated, McGuane feels that this year's bill has an "excellent chance".

He pointed out that a Law School would not require major construction on campus. "A Law School is inexpensive," he explained. "There is no need for extra buildings, or for much additional faculty." What will be needed is an extensive Law Library, which would be built up gradually, he added.

"I think that they (the legislature) will be more willing to give Amherst the school because of the Medical School's being in Worcester," said McGuane. Also in Amherst's favor, he believes, is the well-developed network of schools, already located here, with which the Law School would interact.

Other Law School sites have been proposed to the legislature, McGuane said, "especially from give Amherst the school because of the Medical School's being in Worcester County". However, he felt certain that his Amherst bill would win out, with "no second alternatives" for the site.

Although next fall would be the earliest that any definite effects could be seen, McGuane emphasized it will probably be "longer yet, to meet the criteria of good Law School."

Triangle Meet

Sweep by Harriers

The cross country team scored a powerful victory over Boston College and the University of Connecticut in a tri-meet Friday at UMass.

The score—UMass 19, UConn 48 and Boston College 70. The victory, which evens the harriers record at 1-1, was marked by close-knit team strength that hasn't been apparent the last few years. The time span between the first five men was less than a minute, and 7 of the first ten to finish wore UMass colors.

Co-captains Terry Carpenter and Steve St. Clair took over the lead at the mile mark and were unchallenged from there to finish 1-2. Carl Lopes and John Anderson were 4th and 5th, Greg Bowman and Mike Sheeley 7th and 8th and Bill Thomas 10th. Others to finish for UMass were Jeff Lunn, Pete Saunders, Jim Parker, Greg Tsoucales, Bob Craiglin, and Paul Delmolino.

Coach Footrick was pleased with the strong team showing and now looks to next Saturday's meet with two New England powerhouses, Providence and Central Connecticut. Both teams won a New England Championship last year. Neither squad has lost any of its top runners.

Intramural Report

By Dave Jarnes

Thursday's schedule featured a clash between two unbeaten teams, the Chadbourne Maroons and the Baker Buffaloes.

A huge partisan delegation from Baker turned out in hopes of seeing their fired up Buffaloes spring an upset. However, the undaunted Maroons, pressed with a slender 9-6 halftime lead, methodically walked off with a 22-12 win. Ohlson had one of his finest games at quarterback for the Maroons while completing 14 of 24 for 3 TD's.

Ed Polchapek of the Baker Bruins gave the Greenough Grants fits with his passing (22-41 and 5 TD's) in a 35-12 romp. Bruce Tichnor's six receptions were the sole bright spot in the bleak Grants' picture.

The Greenough Garfields clobbered the winless Middlesex Braves 40-19 as Earl Richardson completed all of his passes in the first half. Leading receiver Bill Thomas with eight receptions and Rick Silver with 3 TD's also sparkled.

THE RAPIDLY IMPROVING Chadbourne Eagles, with southpaw Jimmy Dennis at the Helm, surprised the Baker Barracudas 20-7. Dennis completed 15 of 27, good for 3 TD's.

The Middlesex Redmen rolled to a 12-0 halftime lead over the Mills Birch while holding Mills to no pass completions and no first downs. However, the Redmen stayed in pennant contention by staving off a late rally by the Birches to win 18-14.

The Wheeler Trojans topped the Chestnuts 22-13 as Crowley had another fine night (11-20, 3 TD's). Rounding out the dorm action the Bengals edged the slippery Elms 12-7 after overcoming a 7-6 halftime deficit.

IN THE INDEPENDENT league the Courtesy Taxi massacred the Land Architecture 47-6 as Costello caught 5 TD passes for a record-breaking 30 points scored.

The Innkeepers easily triumphed over the hapless UM Band 33-20. Proman was impressive with 15-24 and four TD's. Rounding out Thursday's rain-shortened card the Hampshire Hardnoses blanked the Buggers 18-0.

sophomore drove the team 55 yards in seven plays climaxed by a 28 yard scoring pitch to Morin. The big end picked up his seventh point of the afternoon with the conversion. He had attempted a 51 yard field goal early in the game which had the direction but lacked distance.

IN A PRESS conference held after the game head coach Vic Fusia said that he always believed that a good college football team needed a substantial ground attack.

The Redmen piled up 212 yds. rushing led by Vandersea (80 yards, 4.2 average) and Detore (42 yards, 4.7 average).

Once again Fusia praised the UM defense which has allowed an average of one touchdown per game. Dave Kelley must have been keyed in on UConn's "first plays". Kelley recovered a fumble on the first play from scrimmage in the first half and intercepted on the first play of the second half.

Bernie Dallas and Ed Toner were outstanding defensively during the entire game.

Huskies head coach, Rick Forzano, said that Fusia merely "out-coached" him during the second half. He also said that UM was the best team he's seen this season.

Fusia said that Landry's play-calling is improving with each game. He is pleased with the defensive end work of Paul Milnar and Al Becker. The Redmen mentor also feels that Saturday's victory could be what his men needed to "get them over the hump."

UMass now stands at 2-2 on the season and will face the University of Rhode Island at Alumni Stadium this week. It will be Homecoming for UMass fans and the stadium will be officially dedicated.

Strong URI Drives Down UM Freshmen

By Rob Gilbert
Sports Staff

The UMass Freshman Football team lost to the powerful Rhode Island Freshmen by a 18-6 score, Friday afternoon at Alumni Stadium.

Massachusetts took a 6-0 first quarter lead when a punt blocked by tackle Bob Crotty was recovered and returned 35 yards for the score by linebacker Tom Wales.

Rhode Island returned the ensuing kick-offs to the 22 and after a 17 play sustained drive, quarterback Mark Devitt scored from the one to tie-up the contest.

Late in the second period Devitt led Rhode Island 50 yards in six plays for another score. A 34 yard pass which was deflected by a UMass defender in the arms of Rhody halfback Flournoy Hightower proved to be the key play in this drive. Halfback Owen McEntree plunged over from the one yard line to give Rhode Island a 12-6 halftime advantage.

Midway through the third quarter a fumble recovered on the UMass 35 led to another Rhode Island touchdown. Halfback Bob Gertz was on the receiving end of this 15 yard scoring strike.

Massachusetts made a vain attempt to get back into the game at the start of the fourth, quarterback Frank Tivolacci hit Al Yesue with a 50 yard pass good for a touchdown, but an offside penalty made this score void.

Rhode Island's big backs proved to be quite effective for consuming most of the remaining time.

Football And Fun Sets Homecoming

This weekend promises to be jam-packed with colorful events for the more than 5000 UMass alumni expected to return to the campus in Amherst for homecoming festivities.

Highlight of homecoming will be ceremonies dedicating the University's new 1.4 million dollar stadium and the subsequent football game with the URI on Saturday at 1 p.m.

The full schedule of events will begin on Friday afternoon when the UMass Associate Alumni Board of Directors will hold a meeting followed by a dinner in the Student Union.

AT 6:30 P.M., the traditional float parade will move up North Pleasant Street to the center of town, turn right on Amity Street, and return to the campus by Lincoln Ave. It is estimated that 50 floats will participate in the parade along with the marching band, Flying Redmen and Precisionettes. A bonfire and rally will be held behind the Student Union at 8:15 p.m. at which the homecoming queen will be crowned. Students will then move to the Student Union ballroom for a rally-dance.

Saturday's schedule will be marked by many concurrent events. At 10 and 10:30 a.m., buses will leave from the Student Union for tours of the campus, led by the University's new guide service Arcon. At the same time, the Associate Alumni will hold its annual corporation meeting in Memorial Hall, and the University Board of Trustees will meet in Goodell Library.

The tailgate picnic will begin at 11 a.m. in the parking lot north of the new stadium.

At 1 p.m., festivities formally dedicating the new football stadium as "University of Massachusetts Alumni Stadium" will commence. The dedication will begin with a parade of antique cars around the perimeter of the stadium. Former captains of UMass football teams will be aboard cars corresponding with the years they attended the University. Following the playing of the alma mater by the 140 members of the marching band, UMass President John W. Lederle will dedicate the stadium.

PARTICIPATING IN THE DEDICATION ceremonies will be Massachusetts Building Authority, the architect and the contractor. At 1:25 p.m., the band will play the Star Spangled Banner, and the game will begin.

At half-time, the homecoming queen and her court will be introduced and the band will put on a show recounting the history of stadiums from the Roman coliseum to the present.

AT THE GAME'S CONCLUSION, the senior class will sponsor the first annual homecoming buffet at the north end of the stadium for all alumni, seniors, and friends of the University.

In the evening, the annual homecoming dances will be held at 8 p.m., in the Student Union ballroom for students, and in Memorial Hall for faculty and alumni.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, at 8:15 p.m., the University Theatre will present its first musical, and off-Broadway hit "The Fantasticks," in Bowker Auditorium. Tickets are on sale now in the Student Union.

Homecoming will draw to a close with a concert on Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. in Curry Hicks Cage, featuring Joe and Eddy and the Swingle Singers.

International "Teachouts" To Protest Vietnam War

by Sandra Falman,
Staff Reporter

International explosions of discontent and pleas for an end to the war in Vietnam will soon occur on college campuses throughout the country.

During the week-end of October 15, 16 and 17, the International Days of Protest on Vietnam will be held in an attempt to find a solution to the Vietnam war. The Protest Days, sponsored by Students for a Democratic Society, will consist of individual action by chapters of S.D.S. on numerous college campuses throughout the United States.

Last weekend an International teach-in was held in Toronto, where speakers representing Western, Communist, and neutralist views debated issues of revolution, intervention, and great-power conflict. Coverage of Saturday's Toronto teach-in discussions was provided by WFCR, Four College radio station.

The Four-College area is planning a Vietnam "Teach-out" for Sunday, October 17, in conjunction with the S.D.S. International Protest. This will provide students with local facilities for intelligent discussion on the Vietnam situation. At the Teach-out, Dr. David Leonard of A.I.C. and formerly of the UMass History Dept., Milton Cantor, of the UMass History Dept., and Thomas Yost of the Amherst College Biology Dept., will be present to discuss the Vietnam war.

The Teach-out will begin at 3:00 p.m. at the Amherst Unitarian Church. Sponsored by UMass and Amherst College chapters of S.D.S., the afternoon event will be preceded by the handing out of literature on Vietnam and facilities set up for signing letters to Congressmen outside of the churches throughout Amherst.

The Young Independents of UMass will make final plans for the Vietnam "Teach-out" at their meeting on Thursday, October 14 at 6:30 p.m. in the Plymouth Room of the Student Union.

Dean Curtis Comments On Dorm Bed-Checks

By Joan Lezar
News Staff

In the Monday, October 11 issue of the Collegian on page one, there was an article entitled "Bedcheck Awakens Girls in Quadrangle Dormitory." The article described the details of some recent violations of dormitory regulations.

This article was discussed in an interview with Miss Helen Curtis, Dean of Women. Dean Curtis emphasized she does not personally control the time or place of these bedchecks.

Dean Curtis said she regrets that many women students, when they first arrive on campus, have a tendency to misunderstand the purpose of curfews and the rules requiring signing out.

THE UNIVERSITY is not trying to check-up on its students, but the real purpose of curfews is to facilitate the location of a student in an emergency, she said. If a girl does not return to the dormitory after curfew, the Head of Residence and her counselors search for her to be certain she is safe.

When asked to predict what would happen if these were no curfews at all, Dean Curtis said she thought things would be very disorganized. She pointed out the behavior of the Swing-shift freshmen during this summer as illustrative of the necessity for some means of organization and protection for women students.

DEAN CURTIS said that one is likely to find restriction for women students in any University because of the nature of our society. Parents tend to worry more about their daughters and insist upon more attention for women than they do for their sons, the Dean thought. The University is obliged to cater to the wishes of parents, she insisted.

It is assumed, she said, that once women students return to their dorms at night, men students will automatically return to their dormitories also. Dean Curtis said this is one of the reasons men students do not have curfews.

Dean Curtis said the University really gives women students "quite a bit of responsibility" and often puts them on their own. The real purpose of curfews, bedchecks, and other regulations is to facilitate locating a student in an emergency," she said. Dean Curtis said she regrets the misunderstanding among women students.

French Group To Perform Comedies

The Treteau de Paris, sponsored by the men's and women's French corridors, will make its annual appearance at the University on Nov. 1, at 8:15 in Bowker Auditorium.

In the past, the Treteau has given the University an excellent variety of drama, ranging from the surrealism of Cocteau's Orpheus, to the religious zeal of Claudel's L'Annonce Fatale a Marie.

This year, the group will perform two comedies, Poils de Carotte by Jules Renard and Feu la Mere de Madame by Georges Feydeau. The former concerns a henpecked husband and son, while Feu la Mere de Madame is a delightfully funny plays.

Tickets are now on sale at the Student Union Ticket Office, a.m. to 1:00 p.m. and from 2:00 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tickets are $2.00; $2.50; $3.50.

The French Corridors hope that everyone will take advantage of this opportunity.

Tickets may be reserved by calling 545-2600 or writing to R. S.O., Box 635, Student Union, UMass, Amherst, 01003.

Pencil-itic

Editor's note: This little message was found crumpled in my wastebasket in the office. It expresses what I'm sure many of you feel. I couldn't find any name on it.

"I have got a big headache, but I want to write to you. I have pencil itic. I mean that I want to write a lot. I am practically scribbling but I can not stop writing. I am writing too fast but I can not stop. Help! I have to write but I do not know what to write. I will keep on writing as long as I can hold out."

When I received that letter from my ten year old sister, Katy, I knew exactly how she felt. I've got pencil itic, too.

Sometimes I have a tremendous longing to write something beautiful. Something bitter-sweet and full of world-sadness and a peculiar, almost drugged happiness.

But sometimes, like Katy, I have nothing to say.

Sometimes I feel wise enough to write Truth and sometimes too stupid to write truisms. The two feelings whirl on a run-away merry-go-round, until, finally, I feel neither wise nor innocent. Only dizzy.

I love the messy process of writing. Slashing sentences—chopping words—drawing arrows—writing numbers all over the page.

I love the creative process of writing. I think and rethink and think again until I have something to say. Then I write and rewrite and write again until the sentences say just what I think.

I love to manipulate words into music and sounds into sensual sentences. Paragraphs? They're poetry.

I'm with Katy. And I'll keep

Motorcycling New Campus Craze

by Veda Neroni

Motorcycles and other two-wheel vehicles are not about to outnumber cars on the UMass campus, but safety officials, who indicate they just tolerate them, admit that their number and the interest in them are growing.

Police Chief Alexander Blasko said exact figures aren't available to prove the increasing numbers of bikes, but he is sure they are there. Campus officials said that it is possible many bikes are on campus illegally.

"There goes one pedestrian"

No motorcycles are allowed within 150 feet of any classroom building or Goodell Library. Colonel John Marchant, UMass Security Director, said this rule was made because motorcycles are too noisy and disturb classes and students at the library.

Beyond this, the colonel said, motorcycles are no more trouble than other vehicles on campus. He noted, however, that students on writing as long as I can hold out.

driving motorcycles are easier to see than those in cars; the age of a driver can be estimated more easily and books are harder to conceal on a motorcycle than in a car, thus indicating the driver is a student.

Chief Blasko said no campus motorcycle accidents have been reported this semester. It isn't because cyclists are the safest drivers, however. In the chief's opinion, motorcycle drivers take more chances than car operators; they drive between cars, on the sidewalks and down the center of the road. The chief claimed that student motorists even "park" them in the darndest places.

Operating these vehicles in the winter is so dangerous, the chief declared, he wouldn't ride one for $1,000.

It still can't be denied that motorcycles have become increasingly popular in the last five years. Safety Officer Clarence Babb of the Amherst Police thinks that over the years the trend has been for more working and professional men to buy motorcycles because they are a cheaper mode of transportation. He claims they are used more for transportation now rather than for the joy riding of past years.

The former owner of a Harley himself, Babb believes motorcycles cause no more trouble than cars. There can be no more than two on a motorcycle while there are up to six in a car to contend with, said Babb. He claimed, "Bikes are no more dangerous than cars as long as

Oui, Voila La Coiffeuse

By Elaine Kagan

Every girl's dorm has them—those indispensable members of campus society—the hairdressers. Their duties are many, their patience much, their time—consumed.

Why are these girls so indispensable? There are many reasons not least of which is that they offer their services for free. For moderately-allowed co-eds who are trying to be glamorous on a tight budget this is a major factor in choosing one's hairdresser.

The quilt-sewing sessions were to the Puritan females what the hair-cutting sessions are to the UMass girls. While watching the corridor coiffeuse perform her services on a trusting fellow dorm-dweller in Eugene Field, practically the total corridor population sits around to offer suggestions and exchange gossip. These sessions have a way of lasting long after the hairdresser has completed her task.

The corridor hairdresser has a responsible position. A slip of the scissors could possibly mean the loss of a friendship.

Perhaps these new straight, casual hairdos appear to the boys to require little or no fussing. In some cases in which the girl happens to have straight hair this is true. But in many instances, before a girl can wear her hair in the straight vogueish style, she must endure such tedious processes as chemically straightening her hair or ironing it.

"Look at me! Now John will never ask me out!"

Whether it's for some complicated process such as straightening or styling or just for a simple trim, the cry for "help" goes out to the corridor hairdresser to whom she entrusts her crown of glory. "Oh Sue, make my hair look like Liz Taylor's does on the cover of Look."

National Newspaper Week

Throughout the country, National Newspaper Week is currently being celebrated. This week is set aside in tribute to the unique and essential service which our newspapers provide.

In our fast and complex world, it is necessary for us to maintain a constant effort if we are to be informed of current happenings and their impact on us. It is through this need that the role of newspapers has grown into the great force which currently exerts so much influence on our nation today.

Much of what goes on in the world has at least an indirect effect on our lives. Yet, without the press we would know little of what is taking place. This is not true only of "hard news," but also of editorial.

Many issues which take place in our local community would be unknown to us were it not for the daily editorials appearing in our local newspapers. These comprehensive reports help to educate an otherwise uninformed mass so that they may raise their voices—in agreement or discord—but make their views known.

Our representatives to government could theoretically pass any legislation which they so desired, were it not that they know they are under constant surveillance by the electorate through the press coverage given to all legislation. It is this function of the press which has led to its being heralded as the "guardian of liberty."

Many people in our country take all these things for granted until they are pointed out to them. Little do they realize, as they settle down with their paper after dinner, all that those type inscribed pages accomplish in an effort to keep America great.

Boys Are People-Girls Are People

Why do students date? The basic reason, they claim, is to find out what they want in a mate, and then to find that mate. Then why do boys look at girls as if they were slabs of meat, and why do girls care so much about just being seen with the best-looking boys on campus?

Just sit in the hatch some night and listen to the remarks that float around the table where a group of boys are sitting. Every girl who passes within inspection range is given the physical third degree, and if she is "tough" there is usually enough information known about her in the group to supply each member with the vital statistics.

One boy will know her name, another will know with whom she went out last weekend and what he said about the date, another will know that she only dates boys with cars, and so on. Never is her personality, ability to make conversation, or warmth as a human being mentioned.

On the other hand, girls wouldn't think of leaving the dorm, even just to visit the grinderman, without the make-up, clothes and hairdo necessary to make them absolutely beautiful and irresistible women.

The reason for this, of course, is to attract "Prince Charming," literally! After all, a date with one of the best-looking and coolest "movers" on campus is a step towards finding that husband most girls want to graduate with, even more than with a degree.

While having all this typical college fun, challenge and excitement, students are really short-changing themselves. By asking out or accepting dates on the basis of looks and prestige, they are not giving themselves the chance to know people for what they are under the surface.

After all the fun of our college years is over, the ability to communicate with a mate on a much deeper and more serious level will be the much more important part of life. Why not begin to know members of the opposite sex as thinking and feeling beings and not just as "tough" or "cool" prestige symbols????

The Sprouting of Sherwood Forest

You say you have an eight A.M. gym class in Boyden? And you have overslept and haven't eaten yet? And you're in a big hurry to get to the Commons before it closes? And to save time you decide to cut across the grass next to the pond and find to your amazement that the path you always use has a little forest growing in the middle of it that wasn't there when you passed by earlier? Is that what is troubling you today, pal?

If so, you're not alone. Just about everyone has found his favorite path blocked by one of those miserable little bushes that are springing up everywhere lately. The purpose of planting these trees is to prevent students from walking on their accustomed routes. Traumatized speaking, this could have a serious psychological effect upon students who, seeing changes in the landscape, begin to feel insecure. Pretty soon the whole student body becomes neurotic. Grades fall. Student unrest grows. They had better have a good reason for doing this to the students.

As a matter of fact, they do. A very good reason. If something isn't done to prevent people from walking all over the grass, our beautiful campus will become a vast dust bowl. Already there are numerous places on campus where this has begun to happen. An example is the Northwest side of the North Dining Commons. Another is the area between the Student Union and Hasbrouck. There are other examples.

The point is that there is no need for this. There have been pleas to the students to walk on the pavement whenever possible. These pleas have gone unheeded. Thus, the trees have been planted in an attempt to make students realize that they should walk only on paved walks. All students take pride in their school's appearance. And so, it is not asking too much of the student body for them to avoid walking on the grass.

Think First?

To the Editor:

In my four years at this University I have read many foolish or insipid editorials. However, I must admit that Miss Inglis, in the gem entitled "The Victory of Defeat," has attained hitherto unplumbed depths of stupidity. Virtually every sentence screams from lack of thought and from ignorance.

First: very few people with whom any but psychiatrists have associated champion causes which they feel to be already lost (Mets fans are one notable exception). How can it be said that the minority view (which is, despite the insinuation to the opposite, always open to violent attack) is the safest, in view of the suffering the South drew upon itself, and is still receiving, from having been the minority in our Civil War? Or recall the travail of both Loyalists and Rebels in the American Revolution (where they were both minority groups).

Miss Inglis almost made a good point in remarking that the minority can frequently lose all sense of responsibility, but again, few people knowingly pick a "loser," and never give up hope of winning. The winner, on the other hand, is always in danger of "resting on his laurels" (ever heard that phrase?). The minority, which is not necessarily the extreme position, always is the target of adverse popular opinion—merely by being in the minority.

Finally: "He (the 'loser') seldom . . . must answer for his ideological point of view." If there was ever a lost cause, it is that of the Communists in the U.S. And yet, every member of that tiny minority must answer at every moment to the people and the courts of this country—solely for his ideology.

Next time you start to write, Miss Inglis, please open your mind before you open your pen.

Cement, Mud, or Grass

To the Editor,

Consider these points:

- The University of Massachusetts is expanding in size and increasing in population.
- It sometimes takes more than the allowed 15 min. to get from one building to another.
- Univ. of Mass. students have been applying an old geometry theorem—the shortest distance between two points is a straight line.

Question: Instead of blocking these heavy traveled paths with trees, why don't the proper authorities have these paths paved?

Letters To The Editor

Attention: Possible Draftees

Editor's Note: All the signers of the following letter are members of the faculty or staff.

To the Editor:

At the September 29 meeting on selective service draft quotas and policies, there was only passing mention made of the Conscientious Objector alternatives to military service. Probably many students are not fully aware of their legal options under the draft laws.

There are two Conscientious Objector (C.O.) classifications: I-A-O, "conscientious objector available for noncombatant duty only," and I-O, "conscientious objector opposed to both combatant and noncombatant military duty and available for assignment to civilian work." The basis of such opposition to military service is "religious training and belief." The existing draft law provides that no person shall be subject to combatant training and service in the armed forces of the United States, who, by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form. Religious training and belief in this connection means an individual's belief in a relation to a Supreme Being involving duties superior to those arising from any human relation, but does not include essentially political, sociological, or philosophical views or a merely personal moral code (Section 6) of the Universal Military Training and Service Act of 1951, as amended).

On March 8, 1965, the U. S. Supreme Court handed down an important decision on the "Supreme Being" clause. The Court defined the terms more broadly than Selective Service has done in the past.

We believe that under this construction, test of belief "in a relation to a Supreme Being" is whether a given belief that is sincere and meaningful occupies a place in the life of its possessor parallel to that filled by the orthodox belief in God of one who clearly qualifies for the [military service] exemption. Where such beliefs have parallel positions in the lives of their respective holders we cannot say that one is "in relation to a Supreme Being" and the other is not.

Thus, it seems clear that those who hold a belief in, for example, Brotherhood, Truth, Justice or Universal Love, that takes the place of a rational belief in a Supreme Being, now qualify for a C.O. classification according to the recent Supreme Court interpretation.

The undersigned believe that the C.O. alternatives should be made known to our students; each of us stands ready to counsel personally with students who are sincerely perplexed regarding their obligations and rights in matters of the draft.

Mary Pennisi as the Girl

The Boy versus the Abductor.

The Boy, Ken Bordner, tells Mary Pennisi, as the Girl, of his love for her. Sandy Camp, the Mute, holds a stick that represents a wall between the couple.

The Abductor explains the plans for the rape to the Girl's Father and the Boy's Father.

Pat Freni and Larry Wilker, the Fathers, ponder the situation they are in now.

The director stood up from his seat in the empty theater, shook his head and told the piano player to stop. "I've got this whole new theory about music," he shouted up to the actors on stage, "try singing with the piano!"

This brought a few laughs from the cast of The Fantasticks but the point got across and director Harry Mahnken heard the song again-sung with piano accompaniment.

The Fantasticks, UMass Theatre's opening attraction, is a musical comedy that originated in a tiny off-Broadway theatre in New York — and then within a year was being produced in fourteen languages all over the world. It premieres in Bowker Auditorium at the University on Oct. 14, at 8:15 p.m. Performances are repeated on Oct. 15, 16.

IT WAS begun in 1961 by Prof. Mahnken, Prof. Cosmo Catalano and Terry Wells of the speech department and today rates "quite favorably", with other collegiate productions, said Mahnken.

Mahnken, who will also be directing Arthur Miller's "A View from the Bridge", attributes the U T's success to "well above average students" in the cases and to the people who run the productions.

"There is some damn sloppy work done in colleges and universities," he said, "but we've been really lucky in our staff."

HEADING UP THE STAFF, and the man who is perhaps concerned more closely with the Theater's academic matters, is Prof. Catalano.

Catalano, who feels the theater is an "enriching experience" for the student, views the University productions as having a two fold purpose.

First, he pointed out, the University Theater provides a "laboratory" for the students.

"Here they see the theory work and make it practical," he explained, "but UT, as with any theater exists for an audience."

"In an educational institution we're not only interested in educating the people on stage, we're also educating the audience."

"We present a theater experience. We try to make it entertaining, but we also pick plays that will have meaning for the students."

"We want the audience to take something away with them . . . a knowledge of modes, ideas, history or whatever as expressed in the plays."

DESPITE STUDENT - ORIENTED AIMS, the UT's biggest problem is in getting students to attend for the first time.

The Theater's public relations agent, Larry Wilker, has an answer: "We don't feel we are reaching everyone who would be interested. We can't seem to motivate some of them," he said.

Why doesn't the Theater attract larger student audiences?

"We've kicked around a lot of ideas," Wilker explained. "Maybe it's money, but students seem to be put off in that UT presents live actors, so they go to the movies."

Catalano agreed and added: "We are a lot more interested in knowing that they are out there reacting than the movie people are."

THE FANTASTICKS has some undertones of irony and jocular spoofing of the over-sentimental ballads that filled the juke-boxes, but chiefly The Fan- fantasticks is a musical fantasy about a boy and girl in love. It tells its story for the sake of charm rather than to raise raucous laughs at the outworn clichés of another era.

Great enthusiasm marked the long off Broadway run of The Fantasticks. Its 135 seat theatre three blocks south of Washington Square was sold out night after night for over 5 years with a large share of spectators returning again and again to see a musical that entranced them with its sweetness, freshness and complete absence of "problems."

"THE MARTYRED" is a new, untried adaptation of a novel, but university theaters must be willing to take the lumps so that new playwrights may develop their talents. A new play also offers the most opportunity for creative experience because it has never been seen.

"We decided to do a Shakespeare every year and this time it is the Merchant of Venice," Catalano added.

"Shakespeare remains THE English playwright and this also makes a good contribution to the Fine Arts Festival," Prof. Catalano continued.

"This year we are presenting a collection of readings from Robert Frost in what is called a Reader's Theater. They will be arranged to try and communicate the man—Robert Frost—to the audience.

"FINALLY, Catalano said, we're doing A View from the Bridge, by Arthur Miller. He remains America's most important contemporary playwright. "Arena theater is also especially educational in that it gives an opportunity for different set ups," Catalano said.

Catalano also pointed out that in December UT will present its first Master of Fine Arts production under direction of graduate student Kenneth Bordner.

Noted for his work as Harry Brock in Born Yesterday, the Boy in The Fantasticks and Tom in The Glass Menagerie, Bordner has chosen a play by English contemporary Norman Simpson, One Way Pendulum.

The play can be "lumped" in the class of absurdism, according to Bordner, and its humor is a "juxtaposition of two styles—realistic sets and costumes, and a dialogue which is very absurdist."

"It is satire on middle class life which hopes to make people aware of their own existence," Bordner concluded.

These are the productions planned by the 1965-66 UT.

NOW EACH PLAY'S line of action must be determined, lines and movements analyzed and the scenes, language and design geared to explicating the action.

Then the role of the theater worker begins. From director to stage hand, actor to scene designer, all make their contribution to the finished production in a way that "will influence response," Catalano said.

And it is in the attainment of this response that the theater has its real influence and meaning for individuals.

"The theater is a contribution to a person's total growth... an expansion of cultural horizons," said Catalano.

"Now is the time to broaden your scope... the time to give theater a try," Catalano said with a wave of an arm embracing the campus community.

George Drake at the lighting board will control the various moods of the play through effective light variation.

Mary Pennisi implores Francois-Regis to take her to see the world.

The Girl expresses displeasure with Ken Bordner, the Boy.

The Father, Pat Freni; the Boy; the Girl; and the Girl's Father, Larry Wilker sing of the troubles they have when the sun shines.

Lecture Series

Cyclopes Discussed

The second of the English department lecture series was given last Wednesday in Bartlett Auditorium by Prof. Robert Bagg who spoke on Greek Drama.

Dr. Bagg, a new faculty member, studied English and the Classics at Amherst College and UConn, where he received his Ph.D.

Prof. Bagg has translated Euripides and the episode of the Cyclopes, and is currently preparing further translation of Euripides.

Prof. Bagg related the heroes of the past to the leaders of the present, through their personalities and styles, using John F. Kennedy as an example.

Kennedy as an example.

For example, Prof. Bagg cited passages in Agamemnon, part of the Oresteia Trilogy by Aeschylus, and emphasized the role of responsibility in Oedipus Rex by Sophocles.

These lectures are held on Wednesday nights at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium, and are especially designed to aid the student in understanding and background of the works discussed.

Immediately following the lecture a discussion is held in the Faculty Lounge of Bartlett Hall and all are invited to come and meet the speaker.

UM Placement Officer To Tour AF Bases

Robert J. Morrissey, Director of Placement and Financial Aid Services, University of Massachusetts, is one of 10 educators from the New England and New York area who will travel to San Antonio, Tex., on Oct. 11 to participate in the U.S. Air Force's Recruiting Service Orientation Program.

While in San Antonio, the educators will tour three U.S. Air Force Bases in that area as guests of the 3501st U.S. Air Force Base.

The purpose of the tour is to acquaint civilian educators with the philosophy, goals and current operational techniques of the U.S. Air Force.

Morrissey, along with his fellow educators, will tour Randolph, Brooks and Lackland Air Force Bases. Lackland Air Force Base is called "The Gateway to the Air Force" and it is where the educators will see Air Force recruits undergoing basic training.

Educator tours are conducted annually by the U.S. Air Force Recruiting Service as part of recruiting's orientation program.

Accompanying Morrissey on this tour will be 1st Lieutenant Robert Shea, 3501st U.S. Air Force Recruiting Group Education Liaison Officer.

Are You A Boy...

ACP—After years of putting students through the machine, the University of California committed the final ignominy—the distinctions between the male and female students have finally been erased, says the Daily Californian.

At least that seems to be the case since the University began putting draft deferment forms, bureaucratically known as "SSS Form 109 for the undergraduates" in registration packets sent to women students.

Happily, most of the women students weren't too distressed by the complete disregard of their sex. One smiling frosh coed said, "I thought it was a sign of their non-discrimination."

A spokesman in the registrar's office explained that the cards were automatically put into all of the registration packets sent out. "However, the instructions were clear," she said.

Ski Patrol

A meeting will be held tonight in the Engineering Laboratory building (Research Computing Center) #53 Room #207 for members of the University community interested in applying for membership in the National Ski Patrol System.

The organizational session will discuss requirements such as possession of valid advanced first aid card, toboggan handling, skiing proficiency tests will be discussed.

you have respect for them; the trouble begins when you try to rule the bike."

Has the fairer sex become interested in motorcycles? According to a girl from Van Meter who recently purchased a record, "Scrambles-The Sound of Motorcycles at High Speeds", the answer is "yes" because she likes the sounds of motorcycles. After riding on a Triumph this summer, she intends to buy a motorcycle as soon as she graduates.

Her roommate noted that one of her professors drives a motor-scooter. It's no match in speed for a Triumph but it's still an example of the trend toward two-wheel vehicles used for cheap transportation.

Student Tutors Wanted

At least six students are needed who want to work with children—ages six to 12—one afternoon per week. A cultural enrichment program will be conducted among a group of inner city, interracial youngsters in Springfield's North End.

College students will lead various activities including crafts, games and field trips. Leaders are encouraged to take initiative and to be creative in their work, however, if they so desire there are trained staff to help them.

Sponsor for the program is the North End Methodist Parish. The program is not sectarian but neighborhood oriented.

All students interested should speak with Rev. Cooper, Old Chapel 144. Transportation will be arranged.

Coffee and Talk-Free

The Protestant Christian Council will sponsor a weekly series of coffee hours Wednesdays from 2 to 4:30 in the Worcester room of the Student Union. The first will be held this week with Mr. Paul Berube of the UMass art department as special guest.

Dr. William Field, Dean of Students, and Dr. Robert Tucker, professor of English will be among the special guests in succeeding weeks at these informal get-togethers.

All students will be welcome at the coffee hours which will offer both free coffee and a free other students and faculty mem-

Texas Students Face Dismissal For Parking

(ACP)—Students who violate campus traffic and parking regulations at Texas Technological College this fall will face probable dismissal from school after seven tickets, reports the Daily Toreador.

"Of course, there can be extenuating circumstances," said Dean of Men Lewis Jones, "but in most cases that seventh ticket will result in dismissal. However, there's nothing automatic about it."

Last year, the most severe punishment was restriction of student cars from campus for six months after three tickets. This year there will be no restrictions.

Failure to pay tickets also constitutes grounds for dismissal. The first violation costs $1, followed by $2, $4, $8, $16, and $25 fees. Last year tickets resulted in disciplinary action.

"SOME STUDENTS last year didn't pay any attention to tickets. Now that they can be dismissed from school, we believe they will be more inclined to pay the tickets," Bill Daniels, chief of Traffic-Security, said.

Moving violations, such as speeding and running stop signs on campus, also will count in a student's total of campus tickets, but he will also be issued a city ticket for the offense.

Berkeley Chancellor Predicts More Unrest

(ACP)—A former chancellor of the University of California, Berkeley, predicts future turmoil on the Berkeley campus, reports the Daily Californian.

Edward Strong, who was chancellor during the Free Speech Movement sit-in last December, foresees a struggle "for dominance in and over the University . . . under the banner of educational reform."

MAKING HIS first speech since resigning as chancellor, Strong said student rebels "demand a voice in academic matters exceeding their qualifications and competence, and consider their demands to be not arrogant but democratic."

"No university has ever existed that could not benefit from some reform," he said. "What is of grave concern are the aims of the reforms being sought by some activists groups."

During the summer, most of the students who sat-in at Sproul Hall in December came up for trial before Berkeley Municipal Judge Rupert Crittenden.

BEFORE SEPTEMBER, 575 demonstrators were found guilty of trespassing, many of them also charged with resisting arrest. Most have appealed their cases.

Defendants were given an option to post bail or request a 10-day stay. At the end of the stay, students may either pay cash for bail, or pay a non-refundable 10 per cent of bail price to a bondsman.

Most defendants chose the latter method, FSM legal counsel Albert Litewka said, because they couldn't raise the entire sum for bail.

FOR REMAINING DEFENDANTS, Litewka said, a new process will be tried. By this method, two citizens appear in court for each defendant and swear that he is worth the bail price and agree to pay it if the defendant does not appear in court.

Also during the summer, a new chancellor, Roger Heyns, was appointed. This month Heyns issued new student conduct rules, some of which have already come under fire.

The new rules "are provisional and will be in effect until a final set is developed with formal student participation," the chancellor said in a statement.

Criticism centered on the provisions concerning students manning tables, the keeping of financial records, and procedures for student hearings.

"Great White Fleet" Subject of UM Prof's Book

A new book by a University of Massachusetts assistant professor of history tells the tragicomic tale of America's first big bid for international prestige—the round the world cruise in 1907-1909 of the 16 lumbering battleships called the Great White Fleet.

"The Great White Fleet," to be published Oct. 14 by Little, Brown and Co. of Boston is a first book by Dr. Robert A. Hart and the first book devoted wholly to the diplomatic squabbling, epic waterfront brawls, international crisis and marathon pagentry that marked the 45,000-mile adventure.

"ANY COMPARISON with current U.S. diplomacy is not coincidental," Dr. Hart says of the story. "Every time I see government officials or newspaper editors shed tears over 'American prestige,' 'national image' or 'our national popularity,' I get the feeling that times have not changed since the days of the white battleships."

Dr. Hart is a specialist in diplomatic history appointed to the UMass history department in April of this year. The book is his doctoral dissertation, part of work for his Ph.D. at Indiana University.

RESEARCH for the project took him a full year, four months of that spent in Washington at the Library of Congress, National Archives and the Navy Department. He sifted through official records, letters, newspapers and interviewed Navy people, including a couple of retired officers who had actually made the cruise.

AN EXCITING PART of his research dealt with the dynamite that kept turning up in coal consigned to the fleet, Dr. Hart said. The Navy apparently put wraps on the story at the time and the mystery of why the explosives were there and what damage they did has never been mentioned in previous historical accounts of the era.

THE WHITE of the fleet, plus the gilded decorations, obsolete armament and fancy fittings, symbolized the relative innocence of the America of 1907, according to Dr. Hart. It was a time when most of the rest of the world painted its warships gray and concentrated on speed and firepower.

SPURRED by President Teddy Roosevelt, the fleet set out in 1907, loaded down with festive gear that included five dozen pianos and 15,000 pounds of chocolate bonbons. Special recruiting drives—mostly in the west and middle west—provided clean-cut "typical American" sailors for crews.

THE FLEET was snubbed by the British when it put in at Trinidad and in Brazil shore-ing sailors got into a brawl that became a riot. Officers were fêted at endless parties where not to drink toasts was a diplomatic slight to the host and to drink too much was an offense that brought court martial by the Navy.

Melbourne, Australia, greeted the Americans so warmly that over 300 sailors deserted, many of them aided in their escape by Australian girlfriends. The creaking fleet sailed into the middle of a hot international crisis in visits to Japan and China, and went through an exhausting round of festivities in the Mediterranean before arriving in New York in February, 1909—nearly 15 months after the trip started.

"We were so eager to show off our battleships that we seemed to forget that other nations

New Conservation Bill Goes to Legislature

STATE HOUSE, BOSTON Sportsmen and the general public, for the first time in a long time, are being asked to combine their forces financially to develop a conservation program which the State Division of Fisheries and Game believes is one of the most progressive ever to come before the Legislature.

When the House convenes next week, it will act on a bill calling for a one-dollar increase in all sporting, hunting, fishing and trapping licenses as the first step in setting up a $500,000-plus account to be used exclusively for wildlife management in Massachusetts.

The bill, sponsored by the Division of Fisheries and Game which is headed by James M. Shepard of Acton, director, provides for public participation in the program by requiring a $300,000 appropriation to match the $300,000 contributed by sportsmen through the proposed license fee increases.

THE DIVISION'S director declared that the bill was based on a two-year study, which indicated that the division "was going to have to move into new areas" in its conservation programs. The division today owns 10,000 acres, he said, which is considerably below the national average, and also is under the acreage held by the counterpart agency in the smaller state of New Jersey.

Revenue from the license fees is the backbone of funds available to the Division of Fisheries and Game for its continued operation year after year. And Director Shepard points out that the sportsmen, those who pay the various license fees, support the division-sponsored legislation.

The bill provides that resident licenses would increase one dollar each as follows: sporting license increased to $8.25; hunting license to $5.25; fishing license to $5.25; fishing license for a minor 15 to 17 years of age to $3.25; fishing license for a female over 18 years to $4.25; trapping license to $8.75; trapping license for a minor 15 to 17 years old to $3.25.

THE NON-RESIDENT license fees, also increased one dollar each, would be: hunting license up to $16.25; fishing license to $9.75; and a seven-day fishing license to $5.25.

BERKELEY...

Tom Irwin, leader of the Free Student Union, which succeeds the Free Speech Movement, said he particularly objected to the provision which gives the chancellor final authority in student hearings. Irwin said he thought the hearing decision should be binding.

Earl Cheit, vice chancellor, and John D. Searle, newly-appointed special assistant on student organizations, said they believed the overall response of the campus to the new rules has been favorable.

NASA Lecture Series Begins This Evening

Does life exist on other planets?

This is one of the questions that will be explored in a series of lectures sponsored under the National Aeronautics and Training Grant to UMass for the current year.

The first lecture will begin tomorrow at 11:15 in Hasbrouck, Rm. 126. The speaker will be Dr. Dale R. Jenkins, chief of Environmental Biology, NASA.

His topic is "Absolute Extremes of Chemical and Physical Factors for Living Systems". He will renew the knowledge available of the limits under which life is known to exist—conditions of temperature, pressure, moisture, magnetic fields, etc. Students are welcome.

The NASA is, of course, concerned with whether life can exist in outer space and on other planets. In the absence, until recently, of knowledge concerning the environment on Mars and other planets, they turned to finding the limits under which life and growth can take place.

Golf Clinic Conducted At WOPE

MISS ELLEN GRIFFIN, school and college consultant for the National Golf Foundation, with the aid of Miss Darlene Anderson, a young professional golfer, conducted a three-day golf clinic at the Women's Physical Education Building October 7, 8, and 9.

THE CLINIC included five phases: 1. the use of audiovisual aids in teaching golf; 2. use of the gymnasium and indoor equipment; 3. mass formations; 4. golf exercises and use of music; and 5. individual practice in full swings, short approach, and putting.

During these practice sessions, Miss Griffin and Miss Anderson gave personal instruction to the participants.

This clinic is being given throughout the nation to promote golf in schools and colleges. The goal of the National Golf Foundation is to have a golf program "in every school in every state in the nation."

THEIR LONG RANGE goal is to have ten million golfers out on the fairways by 1970.

Texas, Nebraska And Arkansas Still On Top

By Alan Rice

The time of crisis has passed for the nation's leading college football teams. The list of the undefeated was cut by only two last Saturday.

The list now stands with 20 major colleges having no losses, and Colorado, Purdue, Southern Cal, and Stanford all have a tie.

Wyoming was shellscooped by Western Athletic Conference foe Utah 42-3 and Stanford edged Oregon 17-14 to end a pair of unbeaten marks.

The big three of Texas, Nebraska and Arkansas remained in the same position they have held all year.

The Longhorns shut out Oklahoma 19-0 with kicker David Conway scoring seven points and All-American Tommy Nobis heading up Texas outstanding defensive squad.

Fred Duda's outstanding quarterback relief of Bob Churchich last week earned him the starting assignment for Nebraska against Wisconsin, and he responded with a touchdown pass to Frank Solich, a 294 yard ground gainer as a 170 pound fullback, and a 59 yard touchdown run himself in a 37-0 win over Wisconsin.

Arkansas easily handled Southwest Conference opponent Baylor 38-7 when the Bears offense couldn't move against the Razorback's defense.

Five of the big powers that were defeated early in the season all made sure they would stay somewhere near the top by registering wins. Number eight Notre Dame dumped Army 17-0 in a sellout night game at Shea Stadium. The Irish used a new quarterback, sophomore Tom Schoen, for a passing flurry early in the game that provided a 7-0 lead which Nick Eddy and a fourth period field goal by Ken Ivan added on to.

Tenth rated Alabama suffered a 7-0 deficit for three periods thanks to a 69 yard punt return TD by Vanderbilt's Chuck Boyd, but Steve Bowman scored two final period touchdowns and a short interception return also late in the game gave the Crimson Tide a 22-7 win over the surprisingly strong Commodores.

M Club Awards Go To Vandersea, Toner

Phil Vandersea was named the winner of the M-Club award as the outstanding offensive player in the UMass-UConn game played last Saturday at Storrs, Connecticut. Tackle Ed Toner was named the outstanding defensive player for the same game.

Vandersea, who has won the starting fullback job on the basis of his performance on Saturday, gained 80 yards in 18 carries to emerge as the game's big star.

After Dave Kelly's recovery of a UConn fumble on the 26 yard line early in the second half Vandersea carried the ball on five out of the next seven plays and went in from the 2 yard line for the first Redmen score of the day. Vandersea's blocking and running kept the defense honest all day.

For the second week in a row defensive tackle Ed Toner has won the M-Club award. Toner's tackle spot is avoided by enemy backs, but Toner has managed to make many tackles by going after them instead of waiting for them to come to him.

Toner forced UConn to kick from their own 10 yard line late in the third quarter after throwing the Quarterback Whaley for a 15 yard loss. On the Series of plays after the punt the Redmen scored their third touchdown.

Intramural Bowling League To Open Soon

There will be an organizational meeting for the Student's Bowling League this Wednesday night in the Middlesex Room of the Student Union. League rules will be decided on at this meeting, and officers will be elected. The response for the League was good, with over 100 students signing up for the leagues. There will be two main divisions which will be further divided into dorms, fraternity, etc., if there is enough interest.

Anyone still interested in signing up is welcome to come to this meeting and do so.

Games will be played mostly on Wednesday nights, with games on Tuesday if the teams cannot all be handled on the one night.

HE SEES THE book as an argument against scrambling for prestige at the international level. "A strong nation, a world leader, cannot possibly be 'popular.' We should be better off not worrying about it," he said.

Intramural Report

By Dave Jarnes

A combination of rain and Columbus Day held Monday night's schedule down to just 5 games. With the season nearing a close, all league races are still in doubt, particularly the fraternity B league where several teams are still in contention and a playoff looms as a distinct possibility.

LCA maintained its clean slate with a 39-0 romp over woefully weak SAM. Jim Donahue completed 11 of 17 for 4 TD's and Jeff Larson caught 3 TD passes. The win enabled LCA to keep pace with Sig Ep in the A League.

Turning to the south dorm league, the first place Oaks rolled to their sixth straight win with an easy 25-7 conquest of the Maples. Ferron led the attack with 4 TD passes.

After holding a 12-6 halftime advantage over the Hi-lo's the Lemons parlayed a 26 point second half barrage into a 38-12 romp. Hurley starred for the Lemons with 9 receptions.

Tom Pender (7 receptions) and Al Gabolls (13-21) tried valiantly, but it wasn't enough to keep the winless Limes from going down to their fifth straight defeat (19-6) at the hands of the Pines. Dave Alden set the stage with an intercepted pass for a TD for the Pines.

Rounding out Monday's games, the Hicks whitewashed the Hickory's 15-0 behind Joe Pedro's passing and Rich Dienstgach's pass catching.

Entries for the cross-country meet must be in by 5 p.m. this Thursday. The meet will be run on this Saturday morning. In order to qualify for the team award, each team must have at least four entries.

The lacrosse league will commence this Thursday with the fraternities swinging into action. The dorms will play Mondays and Wednesdays and the fraternities on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Most of the quarterfinal matches have been completed in the tennis tournament, which started with an original field of 131, which is divided into 4 dorm divisions, 4 independent divisions, and 2 fraternity divisions. Winners in each division will meet in a playoff to determine the campus champion.

Coach Graham

Football Profile

"Pretty much even steven now" is the way UMass's first-year line coach Robert Graham compares the Yankee Conference and the Ivy League. He notes the Conference's 2-1 record against Ivy opposition.

Graham was long associated with the University of Pennsylvania as a player and coach before arriving on the UMass scene, so he is in a good position to judge the relative strengths of the two leagues.

A star fullback for UPenn during his undergraduate days, Graham, in 1949, received the Edgar Church Cup, presented annually to the most valuable member of the Quaker football team.

In 1950 he captained the Penn baseball team and after graduation played a year of professional ball in the Philadelphia Phillies farm system as a catcher.

From 1951 to 1958 he coached at St. Alban's school in Washington, D.C. He returned to the University of Pennsylvania in 1958 and served as freshman athletics. Last year he coached the defense for the Red and Blue.

Graham, whose hometown is Lewiston, Pennsylvania, is married and is the father of two sons.

In reaction to a coach's life at UMass, he says, "I like it very much. After being in the Ivy League for several years, it's good to see the other side."

He also expressed his satisfaction with what he calls the "sounder conditions for coaching here." He believes that the UMass coaching philosophy of greater emphasis on the individual (than at Penn) produces "a more dedicated player." On Redmen players in general, Graham comments, "I've been impressed by their ability."

On the subject of UMass entering the intercollegiate "big-time," he notes that next year will see the Redmen playing New England powerhouses Boston College and Rutgers in place of American International and Buffalo.

Graham attributes the general balance of this year's Yankee Conference to the fact that "All the Conference teams operate with the same philosophy and at about the same level in the procurement of material."

Redmen Basketball Team Suffers From Lack of Height

LACKING height but abounding in speed and desire, the Massachusetts basketball team begins practice on October 18, in preparation for the season which starts December 1. Johnny Orr, entering his third year as UMass cage coach, is depending on speed to overcome the absence of a big man. The team faces what Orr describes as one of the toughest schedules in New England.

The standout of the team should be Clarence Hill. A 6' guard from Washington, D.C. Hill set a UMass season scoring record last year when he netted 511 points for a 22.2 average. With 815 career points, he has a good shot at the all-time Redmen record, which is 1257. Hill's offensive abilities are unlimited. He is an expert ball-handler, a great outside shooter, and he is lightning quick. Basketball fans can look to this sensational backcourt performer for outstanding play all season.

The four other spots on the starting team are up for grabs. Four of the returning lettermen are juniors, but there are several sophomores who are anxious to break into the lineup. seems to be good potential. John Lisack, a 6'3" forward is an expert foul shooter, and was the fourth leading scorer on last year's squad. Mike Meola is the best defensive player on the team, despite his lack of height at 5'11". Frank Stewart is a 6'4" forward whom Orr believes could be the "surprise" player of the season. Stewart is greatly improved, and his rebounding talents could be an invaluable asset to the Redmen. Rounding out the lettermen is Jim Babyak, who at 6'3" plays both guard and forward.

UMass has a crop of promising sophs who could capture some of the starting positions. Bill Tindall is given the best chance, since he seems at this point to be the probable center. He is 6'5", and he led last year's outstanding freshman team in scoring. He is very quick, and he has the potential to function as a good center despite his relative height disadvantage. Other leading sophomores include Haggen Anderson (5'11"), Jim Girotti (6'4"), Rick Perkins (6'3"), and Gary Gasperack (6'4").

Bill Tindall, last year's Frosh sensation.

These boys form the nucleus of what could be a great team in the future.

THE BIGGEST disadvantage that the Redmen will face this season is that of height. The tallest men are 6'5", which is comparatively short by college standards. This lack of a big man will have to be offset by speed. With Clarence Hill in the backcourt, the team should be able to move the ball swiftly and smoothly.

The outside shooting will have to be excellent to make up for the rebounding disadvantage. Orr believes, however, that his long-range marksmen will come through.

THE SCHEDULE includes some of the top teams in the East. The Redmen will face such teams as Providence, with Jim Walker; Syracuse, with Dave Bing; Boston College, with John Austin; and NIT champs St. John's, with Sonny Dove. The Friars shape up as the top quintet in New England, while St. John's and Syracuse could rank in the top ten nationally. UMass will have to be at its best for these games.

Of course, the primary goal of the team is to win the Yankee Conference crown, for with the title goes the privilege of playing in the NCAA tournament. Connecticut, the defending champion, has to rate as the favorite despite the departure of Toby Kimball. UMass and Rhode Island figure to be the chief contenders, and Maine and Vermont shape up as dark horses. The race promises to be an exciting one.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS: TURN FROM NEGATIVISM --- SHOULDER RESPONSIBILITY

"...More Widely Disseminated"

"BE IT ENACTED BY THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA THAT THERE BE GRANTED TO THE SEVERAL STATES . . . AN AMOUNT OF PUBLIC LAND . . ."

With these words taken from the 1862 Morrill Land Grant Act, Massachusetts Agricultural College became a reality.

Looking upon the vast, recently opened lands in the West as a national treasure, to be devoted to great national uses, Morrill education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions in life."

As a representative (later a senator) in the United States Congress, the great Vermonter saw his bill pass into law. President Lincoln signed it on July 2, 1862, and thereupon began the democratic movement in higher education which in the first century of its development has had a tremendous effect on the growth of the American nation itself.

We at the University of Massachusetts are particularly proud that one of the major utterances concerning the Land-Grant idea.

Many years have passed and the original Mass. "Aggie" has evolved into a great University which, after its 100th anniversary, can look in retrospect at a century of progress.

Although the doors for the new college were opened in 1863, the first class did not arrive until 1867, mainly due to the fact that many administrative and organizational problems had to be solved.

Beginning in 1867 with a class of thirty three, four borrowed instructors, and four wooden buildings, the College underwent a process of development and expansion, sufficient to warrant the official changing of its name in 1947 to the University of Massachusetts. This act alone seems to have provided further impetus to progress.

To all of you who share the common heritage of the University of Massachusetts, may 1965 be a year in which you will try to recall what the past may have been like. Try also to bring to mind all the things the University means to you today, small or great, and you will then remember the words, "Toward Higher Learning More Widely Disseminated."

HENRY F. FRENCH, THE FIRST PRESIDENT of the new college, served from 1863 to 1867.

presented to the Congress of the United States his bill providing for the granting of portions of this land to the states and territories as a means of founding institutions of higher learning. The bill called for the assignment of 30,000 acres of land for every Congressman, the income to be used for promoting (in effect, "the liberal and practical Excerpts from an address delivered by President Lederle, September 21, 1961, at the All-the 99th Academic Year at the University of Massachusetts.

"It is with genuine pleasure that I come before you today at the beginning of this most important year in the University's history.

It is a year, in my view, when significant clarifications must be made by all of us as to the role of education in this, one of the most challenging and most dangerous eras in the history of mankind.

Not one person in this room today—or at this entire University—is exempt from confronting this fact. Not one of us can evade the responsibility of trying to do everything possible to insure that mind is still master over matter—that man thinking is important to the consideration of man surviving.

Having said this, let me quickly say that it is not my intention by any means to sound a pessimistic note this morning. Quite the opposite. Crises are not something to be feared. Crises can be opportunities—often the most dynamic opportunities.

INEVITABLY THEY IMPLY RISK, but man's greatest moments of progress have come because certain men dared to take risks.

I would say that today, however, our concept of responsibility must be changed. All of us live our lives according to our own concepts of responsibility—to ourselves, to our friends, to our communities, to our country—and all too often we weaken our sense of responsibility by a inordinate attention to selfish or trivial concerns.

At this opening of what I have called our most important academic year, I want to speak about the need for all of us to strengthen our sense of responsibility so that it might be more nearly equal to the tremendous challenges and risks we face, not alone in this decade, but in this century.

"HERE WE ARE, located on one of the most beautiful campuses in America. The Commonwealth has provided some of the finest educational buildings anywhere. You cannot discount the 50 million dollars worth of new buildings constructed in the last ten years or the legislative authorization of 16 million more for capital outlay within the last twelve months. The modern facilities of the Morrill Science Center will match anything anywhere—public or private. Although our undergraduate student body is unduly provincial, due to the pressure to take care of Massachusetts youth, it is balanced by a distinguished faculty recruited from throughout the nation.

I say to students, to faculty and administrative staff, let's turn away from negativism. Let's call a moratorium on irresponsible or ill-motivated complaint. We have our share of problems and we are working on them with optimism and enthusiasm. But these problems will be doubly difficult to solve if we indulge an inferiority complex in an atmosphere of negativism.

LET US BE DEDICATED STUDENTS—men and women of thought and commitment; men and women interested in putting aside childish things and preparing to face the problems of war and peace, of disease and despair, of man's constant onslaught on ignorance and tyranny and strife—in whatever ways these manifest themselves.

As a community of dedicated people, then, I ask you to strengthen your sense of responsibility, so that in the years ahead we will have contributed greatly to the preservation and protection of our free institutions and our free society."

Alumni To Relive Old Times

Through the country our colleges and universities are in the process of celebrating their annual homecomings. On most campuses, Homecoming has turned into a gala holiday, strongly participated in by the current undergraduates, but nearly forgotten by the alumni.

It should be remembered that this tradition was originated to give the alumni an opportunity to return to their alma mater and relive the days gone by, while noting the progress being made.

The University this weekend will be host to some 5,000 graduates of past years. UMass is one institution that believes in maintaining the true Homecoming spirit, and welcomes the return of its sons and daughters.

Hopefully, the Alumni will be as proud of the great achievements made by our state University as the present classes are. As they not all the new buildings, we hope they will also give consideration to what is going on inside them. Our advances in building only reflect the greater advances being made in the quality of education offered at UMass.

We hope our Alumni will enjoy "their" weekend and the events which have been planned for it, but even more we hope that with each Homecoming, the sons of '01' Massachusetts will gain even greater pride in our great University.

Homecoming '65 Welcomes UMass Alumni Back to Campus

By Jim Foudy, Day Editor

No homecoming is complete without the return of the "old grads" and this year more than 5,000 alumni are expected to converge on the UMass campus for homecoming activities.

EVAN JOHNSTON, executive director of the Alumni Association, attributes the anticipated turnout to the size of the new stadium and "a winning football team."

"The game is the big thing", he commented. "Most of the alumni will attend the tailgate picnic, the game and then go home," Johnston said.

"The weekend is too short to put on anything of tours or academic interest", added Johnston; "this comes during reunion weekend."

The reasons for an alumnus to return are varied but Johnston feels many come back just to see how the campus has grown. "The new buildings will shock some of them", he said.

JOHNSTON'S GOAL is to get the alumni to "see the University, be proud of it, and then go out and support it."

According to Johnston, this homecoming could either be "the greatest function or biggest goof-up in University history" with the outcome depending on the weather and the timing of the events on Saturday.

Since Ch. 22 in Springfield will be carrying the game and dedication ceremonies Johnston said that the "timing will have to be good."

"Some people are afraid that the antique cars in the pre-game parade will break down throwing everything off schedule", he explained, "and then of course there's the weather which could ruin everything."

BESIDES THE TAILGATE picnic, the senior class will sponsor the first homecoming buffet at the stadium after the game and the annual alumni dance is scheduled for 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall.

There will also be an Associate Alumni Board of Directors meeting on Friday afternoon and a meeting of the Associate Alumni Saturday for the election of new officers.

New Senate Officers Elected And Installed

By Karen Rose
Senate Reporter

After much haggling over constitutionality, Senate officers were elected and installed by justice Mel Fisher at Wednesday's meeting. The officers are Dick Dacey, President; Karen Garvin, Vice President; Cathy Walsh, Secretary; and Gary Bombardier, Treasurer.

Discussion centered around two points. First it was not announced in advance that officer elections were to be held at the meeting and second, many senators old and new—were not aware of the candidates for the office of secretary (vacated as the result of recent dorm elections).

The resulting remarks on the floor ranged from Senator Mark Tobin's declaration that such an election was wrong to Senator Kelcourse's plea that a secretary be elected immediately.

Following the installation of officers the Senate moved into the finance committee with President Dacey yielding the chair to Senate treasurer Bombardier.

Motions for consideration included Senate consent to allow a third Collegian staff member to attend The Associated Collegiate Press Conference in San Francisco and the donation of $150 for the upcoming SWAP Conference.

Dacey returned to the chair and debate opened on the collegian representative proposal. (A few weeks ago the Senate passed a similar bill allowing two staff representatives to go to the conference.)

Senator Rich Moriarity pointed out that the aspects of the conference are threefold and include the fields of typography, business discussion and editorial policy and thus a minimum of three delegates is definitely necessary.

In a similar vein, Senator Jerry Ben Ezra pointed out that "If you want a first rate paper you're going to have to pay for it."

The motion was passed with a binding clause (made by Senator Ben Ezra) that the representatives be one senior and two undergraduates and that these individuals be made to submit a written evaluation report of the conference.

Also passed was the appropriation of $150 to the S.W.A.P. committee for their upcoming conference.

In the final minutes of the meeting Senator Lewis Gurwitz took the floor to urge senators to "drum up support" for the senate. "There is a tremendous apathy on campus, concerning, among other things, the senate. It's time that this was put to a stop."

Gurwitz concluded with the statement that it is "up to the senators to make something of their jobs."

President Dacey backed Gurwitz adding that students are uninformed and that "it is up to the senators to correct this situation."

In a final announcement Dacey asked the senators to inform the various class officers of the constituting convention to be held Nov. 3. This convention has been postponed once already and thus it is essential that it be held soon.

Common Student -- Help Strikes -- Or Do They?

By Ellen Levine
News Editor

Something is going on at the Commons! The question is—what?

In an attempt to protest the compensation policy of the Commons for student workers, two boys stood at the workers entrance Wed. evening and tried to dissuade their fellow workers from entering by explaining the reasons behind a proposed "stay out."

"The permanent workers pay only 30 per meal," echoed the two boys. "But, we have to pay the full price, even though we all do the same work," they added.

"We don't want anyone to lose their jobs," the two continued, "but this year it's costing us money to work here." The boys referred to the fact that this year students can't punch in for work until after they have eaten.

The spokesmen admitted that their following was not a majority of the students involved. "But, we've tried reason and now we want the administration to be aware of the problem," the boys concluded.

The management of the South Commons, however, was not aware of the proposed strike. Mr. John Martin, manager of the Kettle said that "nothing happened

Wed. night, we served and fed the students as always, and we will continue to do just that."

Martin added that he hadn't been approached by the students and in reference to the number who did not come to work Wed. night Martin estimated that "it was probably only one or two students."

Mr. Gerald Grady, Business Manager, Business and Personnel, stated that he was approached yesterday morning by one of the student workers.

"I would be happy to meet with the students and plan to do so early next week," commented Grady. "There has never been any reluctance or lack of willingness on the part of the management or South College to discuss with the students," he added.

Grady explained that although it isn't the only reason behind Commons policy, "there is a State rule which applies in this case."

The student helpers have never been classified as University employees Grady commented. "Students should look into the disadvantages as well as advantages of such classification before requesting it," Grady said.

"We have a long list of things

"We may have a total of one-half inch of rain between Thursday and Monday," says the United States Weather Bureau at Bradley Field. "It wouldn't dare rain on Friday," say theadelphians.

After two consecutive rain-soaked rallies, the odds must be on the side of a successful beginning for Homecoming Week-end.

Adelphia has planned the year's most eventful Friday evening to kick off UMass's first big week-end. Rally time is 8:15 behind the Student Union, just after the traditional float parade.

Aside from the typical expulsion of spirit by UMass students, the Rally will see the Crowning of Homecoming Queen and the introduction of her court, followed by the presentation of one dozen (count 'em) long-stemmed American beauty roses to the five lovely finalists.

Next on the agenda is the announcement of the float parade winners. Floats are being judged in four categories, each with separate awards. The divisions are dormitories, fraternities, and sororities.

ARCON Aids Visitors Increase In Automobiles For 1965

Visitors to UMass need no longer be confounded by the school's sprawling 1100-acre Amherst campus and the difficulties in identifying the more than 100 major buildings.

A new guide service and information center has been established to conduct tours of the campus and disseminate information, especially directions, to visitors.

Known as ARCON—Greek for leader—the guide service comprises junior fraternity members who have volunteered to assist visitors and conduct tours of the University.

The new Guide Service and Information Center is housed in the lobby of the Student Union, centrally located on the campus.

Members of ARCON man the information center from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. They are readily identifiable by their charcoal-green blazers, yellow shirts and gray slacks.

GUIDES AT THE DESK, and those who conduct several weekly campus tours, are armed with a new fact book containing pertinent information about the history and programs of the University, as well as facts and figures on construction, student enrollment and faculty.

The 19 guides were chosen from over 2000 applicants. Chairman of the group is Herbert Lach of Bloomfield, N.J., who also serves as coordinator between ARCON and the Interfraternity Council, which administers the program.

Before assuming their positions as campus guides, these campus "leaders" underwent several orientation sessions designed to provide them with the information and basic facts necessary to qualify them as experts on the University.

THE UMASS NEWS BUREAU and the Office of Institutional Studies compiled the fact book, and will update it as new information becomes available.

Groups interested in organized tours of the University are urged to make reservations at least one week in advance of their visit by phoning the University Guide Service at 545-2707 or by writing ARCON, Student Union, University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

Review Fantasticks

By Jan Sullivan

Thursday night shortly after 8:15 the Fantasticks directed by Henry Mahnken opened at Bowker Auditorium. Lightly entertaining, the musical, as presented by the University of Massachusetts Theatre could hardly be called deep, profound or moving.

A few spots were uproariously funny, notably the numbers with the two Fathers; these were the high points of the performance. The remainder of Fantasticks was neither high nor low. There was, however, good audience contact; if fault is to be found, it is not because of boredom.

Mary Grace Pennisi was certainly pert (very) as the Girl, but who ever told her she could sing? She's better at making faces: someone in the audience wondered out loud, nonetheless, if Miss Pennisi were ever really sixteen.

Ken Bordner appeared older than the role of Boy seemed to call for. His voice, as always, was rich and full, but a again, almost inappropriately mature.

THE OLD ACTOR, played by Dan Weir, and the Man Who Dies, Michael Hench, were good for momentary chuckles.

The Mute said nothing; she was there.

The Girl's Father, Larry Wilker, and the Boy's Father, Pat Freni were a perfect team. Their scenes were perhaps the funniest in the entire production, and they, together with Francois-Regis Klanfer, the Narrator with a golden voice, were the only actors whose performances were totally satisfactory.

The lighting and stage design were appropriate, and well executed, and accompaniment by Bruce MacCombie was delightful, especially when played to good voices. (Some of the voices were good.)

The plot is quite simple. Two scheming fathers build a wall between their adjoining houses so their offspring will be sure to fall in love. They then end their pretended feud by hiring a bandit to stage a mock abduction in which the boy heroically rescues the girl. Idyllic happiness soon turns sour, though. The boy leaves home to seek his fortune, the girl is courted and then jilted by the bandit, and the fathers have a real feud. As the story ends, all concerned are sadder but wiser.

There is no scenery or change of costumes. All the "props" are handed to the actors by a mute who also doubles as the wall. One character plays both the narrator, who coaxes us to enter the world of dreams and imagination, and the naughty bandit. Moments of hilarity are added by an old actor and an Indian whose speciality is dying. All of the characters are fresh and charming. They are probably the most unsterotyped stereotypes in the annals of theater.

Although in places, direction in Fantasticks achieved the near-professional, and it is certainly far from being any kind of a flop, if you want sure satisfaction—plant a radish.

Mass. Prep. Schools Lead Nation

Massachusetts paces the nation in numbers of graduates placed in college by its private prep schools.

A total of 4,101 boys and girls graduating from 63 leading prep schools in 1964 gained entrance to college, a record well ahead of any other states. New York, with more schools, 78, is second with 3,284 college prep grads placed.

Private secondary schools from nearly every state each year submit college placement data to the Sargent Handbook of Private Schools, which annually covers 2,200 independent schools of all pre-college grade levels in the United States.

Reports in the current Handbook show that graduates of 542 of the nation's leading prep schools attained college admission at a rate of 97.7 per cent in 1964. Of 26,531 graduates, 25,927 were accepted by colleges.

Massachusetts' share — 4101 placed—is nearly one-sixth of the national total.

The Intellectual Cult

There's a real world out there.
Had you forgotten?

A world where people live and die and defecate.

In the real world, there's a death in the family and a pregnant daughter. There are laid off men and ulcerous executives. There's meeting the rent and buying the groceries. There are sunrises and suicides. There's love and hate and all the other huge four letter words.

At UMass there are Soc quizzes.
Cumes.
Frat parties.

Is college a slice of the real world or an abstraction of it? Is college divorced from reality?

No one can find fault with the excitement of learning or the utility of knowledge. But just passing Soc. quizzes inadequate. Students must relate what they learn to the real world. They must learn to use their intelligence and not regard its development as an end in itself.

Often in a college, there is too much respect for intellect, especially among the intelligent.

Students sometimes fail to appreciate the many other human qualities that are harder to develop and, perhaps, more valuable.

And so, students develop the cult of genius worship and miss many of the attributes which less intelligent people offer.

We imprison ourselves in our own little isolation cells. Yet the door isn't locked.

Wake up and walk out before UMass becomes a Bower of Bliss.

The Protest and the Answer Reader Asks ...

To the Editor:

Since September, I have been reading every issue of the Collegian, with special attention focused upon the editorial page. So far, I have found that my time has definitely been wasted.

The function of an editorial page, I believe, is to provide a medium in which numerous views on controversial issues are presented to the reader. The editorial page is educational, informative, controversial, thought-provoking, and generally non-partisan. It informs through supplying facts accompanied by opinion. It creates controversy by presenting several views.

How successful has the Collegian editorial column been in attaining a democratic medium of controversy and discussion? I feel that the editorial page cannot be termed an editorial page, since seldom have I read editorials which fulfill the criteria of an editorial. The title, "Massachusetts Collegian Forum" is definitely a misnomer.

As one fellow-student has stated, "The Collegian is the only newspaper in which one can write an editorial concerning Vietnam and not take a stand." This is not an editorial; it is simply a news item.

Often editorials in the Collegian deal with banal topics which are not even of sufficient importance for the writer to defend or refute. Also, topics which are irrefutable have been presented on the editorial page.

The dilemma of the editorial page I feel is one of extreme conservatism and overwhelming student apathy. This is prevalent throughout the University, however, not just on the editorial page. Conservatism of this type is manifested in an inability to be constructively critical. An editorial must critically analyze an issue then provide a substantial defense or attack of one viewpoint. When one cannot see the need for critical analysis, he certainly would be unable to discover a problem which demanded an evaluation and an alteration from the present state.

I would like to add that I am a past member of the editorial staff, and that I found it extremely difficult to publish my editorials. The editorials which I submitted dealt with controversial issues in which a logical defense of a point of view was presented. The chairman felt that these were extreme opinions and would cause controversy. I felt that the editorial column was being censored, and also that the democratic value of a well-functioning editorial column was being denied. It was not, and still is not a medium for education, information, or disagreement on campus; but rather the editorial page presents nothing of constructive value.

So long as this conservative censoring of opinions and the inability to discover where actual issues lie, the editorials of the Collegian will continue to be nebulous and ineffective aspects of the newspaper. At this university, where learning is the primary basis for its existence, it is unfortunate that the editorial page does not provide the learning experience which is inherent in such a column.

Editor Replies ...

The word forum implies a public meeting place for open discussion. We of the Collegian feel that in truth our Editorial Page is a forum and have labeled it thus. This does not mean, however, that we can allow one person to speak for the Collegian, in representing a position on an issue which has above been labeled "controversial." An Editorial is by definition the opinion of the writer, but it is by moral and legal responsibility the opinion of the press. Many times an Editorial Chairman along with the other Editors will decide to take a certain stand on a certain issue. It should be obvious that he, as a result, cannot also print, as Collegian Editorials, opposing views. This would provide for nothing more than an inconsistent, unprovoking opinion page. This is not to say that opposing views will not be printed. This is the domain of a Letter to the Editor; to express an individual's view of the paper itself.

All letters are printed, space permitting, uncensored. Views which oppose the Editors' are welcome but must obviously be confined to this area. It is this aspect of the page which yields us a forum, as only staff editorial writers are permitted to write editorials.

As far as the issue in point is concerned, that is to say controversial editorials, those who were here last year will surely remember the controversy which lasted for weeks over some quite opinionated. The present editors have not changed the policy of sharp editorials where they are warranted.

It is true that censorship of the Collegian does exist but it is done solely by the students. We are a free and responsible press... but we must remember that the two ideals go hand in hand. Those who have taken upon themselves the responsibility of running a free student press, must also be burdened with the responsibility for what is printed in it, and is a view of it. This responsibility cannot be delegated; just as the publisher of a commercial press must be responsible for the views expressed in it, the Editors of the Collegian must be responsible for the views expressed in our campus press.

As I See It

Editor's Note: The author of this column Mr. Georgios Pan Piperopoulos, is a graduate exchange student from Greece. He has served since 1960 as the U. S. correspondent for the Drasis Press Organization in Greece, and last year was an editor with the Atlantic Greek Daily in New York. He has been invited by the Editorial Chairman of the Collegian to write a series of guest editorials.

A Man Needs Madness...

By Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

"Or else," says Zorba the Greek, "he never dares cut the rope and be free." "Quite an experience that film" remarked a friend recently, and then he proceeded with a barrage of questions dealing with the decapitation of the widow, the looting of Madame Ortan's home, the "amoral" character of Zorba.

In my opinion as a Greek and an ardent Kazantzakis reader, this was an excellent film. The interpretations by Anthony Quinn, Lila Kedrova, Irene Papas and George Foundas (captain Mavran-tonis) were quite successful and forceful. The part played by Allan Bates, the role that Kazantzakis himself assumes in his novel, was rather weak.

What was essential to the film, though, namely the realism and symbolism of the climaxes was misinterpreted by most viewers, and justifiably so. Many of us Greek journalists had commented last year during the press screening of the film that a short note of introduction was necessary to place the picture in its correct temporal context. Incidentally, the whole affair took place in the late twenties-early thirties in a land (island of Grete) that had only recently been liberated by the Turks. A fact which explains the possession of a gun by the widow. Then again, one should attempt to bypass the inexorable realism of the decapitation scene and see it in terms of the symbolic act of frustration and subsequent destruction of the object causing it; and of the looting scene and perceive it in terms of the people's rationalism: "we are poor; if we don't grab her things, the State will take them..."

The eternal truth though, remains one: Zorba, as Kazantzakis immortalized him in the novel Zorba the Greek was the man who transcended moral, religious and political boundaries, the man who lived, thought, acted as "noble savage". "He was the world's greatest eater, drinker, dancer, lover and bum, and possessed the most profound soul, the greatest heart, and spoke the freest language ever heard" in Nikos Kazantzakis' own words.

Whether you have seen the movie or not, you will get deeply moved, upset and fascinated should you read the novel and see more clearly and fully Zorba, the man who had "virgin eyes and soul for the most trivial things of everyday existence..."

And you will also encounter Kazantzakis, the Giant novelist who brought to International eminence modern Greek literature...

Pedestrian Morals Opposed

Washington (CPS)—The moral revolution was discussed during the closing sessions of the American Council on Education's meeting here—and Sister Jacqueline Grennan, president of Webster College in Missouri, emphatically opposed several other college president's "pedestrian" moral outlooks.

Sister Jacqueline described the paradox of her generation attempting to teach today's student generation: "You and I, the middle-aged academics, are part of one culture involved in producing another: part of a culture of two world wars trying to produce world peace, part of a racist, segregated society trying to produce integration, part of a ruggedly individualistic capitalism trying to produce responsibility and social concern, part of a moralistic religious society trying to allow the morality of empathy and compassion."

Calling for an alliance with "our younger colleagues," Sister Jacqueline said, "I cannot afford to question the institution that is my college without the insights of my students."

Profs. Discuss Rights

By Anne Davenport
Staff Reporter

Emily Dickinson was hostess Monday evening to a civil rights panel discussion.

The topic discussed was "Are Civil Rights Demonstrations Justified?" Panel members said men have the right to petition for redress of grievances. The American society is conservative and the courts can not act until a case is brought before them, it was pointed out. The house faculty resident, Anne Ferguson of the Philosophy dept., acted as moderator. Panel members were Prof. Thompson and Prof. Bietzel of the History dept., Prof. Stanfield of the Sociology dept., and Prof. Bolner of the Government dept.

One panel member stated demonstrations follow problems, not precede them. Furthermore, most civil rights legislation would not have been passed without demonstrations. The national government, being more liberal, approves measures proposed by local demonstrations and forces the cities and states to pass and enforce equal rights legislation.

A distinction was drawn between demonstrations in the de jure segregated South and in the de facto segregated North. One panel member argued that southern demonstrations are justified because they succeed.

However, he claimed, the northern demonstrations against police brutality actually seek a kind of "reverse discrimination."

The question of effecting reparations to the Negro who has been deprived without giving preferential treatment was discussed. Also, a distinction between riots, such as the one in the WATTS area this summer, and demonstrations was made.

It was pointed out that persistent problems can only be handled by massive government action. We ought not to condemn demonstrations because we condemn riots. A need for well trained "non-violent" leaders in cities like New York was expressed.

NEW COLLEGE PLAN: NOW REALITY

By Pat Petow
Four-College Reporter
"Breadth of knowledge is certainly essential; but really to know goes with knowing how to know." The New College Plan

Having inspired Harold F. Johnson of Long Island to pledge six million dollars to Hampshire College, The New College Plan, prepared by a Four-College faculty committee in 1958, "will be carefully reviewed in formulating the educational plans," according to the board of trustees of the newly-organized institution.

Seven years ago Amherst, Mount Holyoke, Smith and the University of Massachusetts proposed, with the assistance of a grant from the Fund for the Advancement of Education, "a major departure in higher education" now to be utilized in a grand way although some of its points have been adopted in the meanwhile.

For example, Smith faculty have planned a new curriculum for the 1966 fall semester which "recognizes the better preparation of entering students" and is based "more on student motivation and on careful Faculty advising than on" fixed requirements.

IN ADDITION, Smith is currently trying a session between semesters for special studies involving the entire college, originally recommended in the report.

Noting, "it is not now possible to introduce most of [the proposals], on a decisive scale, in existing institutions," the Plan "established" a complete New College, Hampshire College, not that New College, will be strikingly similar; thus, all the features of the report should not be, automatically, attributed to Hampshire College.

"OUR STUDENTS are capable of far more independence than they exercise" wrote the authors, C. L. Barber, Amherst; Donald Sheehan, Smith; Stuart M. Stoke, Mount Holyoke; and, Shannon McCune, UMass.

The curriculum was to be organized, not by departments, nor by established courses, but by "master subjects" in the three divisions: humanities, social studies, and sciences.

The freshman course of study included "the disciplines employed by two particular teachers, one in the humanities and one in the social sciences."

The goal of avoiding departmental structure appears in the upperclass offerings: each of the fifty members of the faculty would be free to decide what he would teach — in consultation with his colleagues. Only fifty courses would be offered for upperclass lectures, but the three-course program of the students would make each one substantial.

A skeleton of the curriculum is as follows: Each term the students would take three courses. In addition to a seminar on limited subjects in the humanities and social sciences, entering freshmen would elect a science course in mathematics, physics, and chemistry, which would continue into the second term. Student work in the other two divisions would progress to a more independent nature the second term.

In the upperclass years, Lecture-Student Seminar courses "would make up the staple."

"A MAJOR GOAL . . . will make it habitual for students to work together in groups, and individually, without constant recourse to the faculty." Independent work "will be given direction by a program of concentration."

Distribution requirements proposed that students take "four semesters in two different humanities, four in two different social sciences, and three in science. After the freshman year, a science could be a course: dealing with the impact of science on society, an introductory one in biology or psychology; or of physics, chemistry, or mathematics which carries beyond the freshman course."

The student's program of concentration which "will include rigorous examinations on recognized fields of knowledge, one in his junior year and two (or one and a thesis) in his senior year," would occupy at least half and not more than two-thirds of the regular work. "All students will take part in one faculty-supervised Advanced Seminar" in the later years.

"COMPLETENESS" in a field of concentration and the college experience would be tested by field examinations, set by outside examiners periodically, with the student responsible for organizing his study for them.

"Programs of concentration will be developed by the student . . . any combination of courses, individual committee drawn from the three divisions."

Only three grades, "fail, satisfactory, distinction" were proposed.

The common intellectual experience of the college would be a month-long mid-term between the two semester (of fourteen weeks each) offering two courses, one dealing with some aspect of Western culture, the other dealing with non-Western culture—each aspect different in a four year cycle.

A summer repeat of the mid-winter course for others besides the enrolled undergraduates was projected.

"POLYTHEISM IN the ancient world, aspects of Buddhism, for India (perhaps the social and cultural problems of economic underdevelopment)," were suggested topics of the unique term.

"The courses in non-Western areas might equally well take current political and social issues as their point of departure and work back in depth to explore how the present is conditioned."

Involving only about half the New College faculty leaving the other half free for their own studies, the Mid-winter Term would engage "a number of outside lecturers . . . from neighboring institutions and beyond."

Demonstrating "more efficient use of teaching resources, inevitably limited in the coming period," "a faculty half as large, in proportion to the student body, as is now customary," was proposed for New College.

Because a great deal of faculty time would be devoted to teaching the student to teach himself the idea was developed as to take advantage for collateral purposes of resources available at neighboring institutions.

"A faculty member will normally be responsible for one upperclass lecture-seminar course and two seminars; if his lecture-seminar course is exceptionally large, he will handle only one seminar."

New College would require that a student take at least one semester course during his college career at one of the Four Colleges. The expense of the enrichment of the curriculum and transportation would be far less than a duplication of the discipline.

WHEN CERTAIN FIELDS of study are not represented on the faculty, it would not be possible for students to concentrate in the field, but they would be able to study them as electives at another of the institutions.

Because many advance courses in some fields as the ancient languages, some modern languages, and some science are not heavily elected, students would be able to organize a program of concentration by combining work with New College faculty and the work done elsewhere.

New College would attempt to Turn to HAMPSHIRE, pg. 10 make itself the center for re-broadcasting selected outside television programs as well as those originated in the Valley, within the concept of "Five-College" cooperation.

Among the non-academic proposals set forth were those that,

- "An unusually large provision of study space for students will be made . . . to provide a locale for the active . . . life in which it is to be hoped that intellectual and social interests will be combined."

- "There will be no fraternities or sororities; there will be no highly organized intercollegiate athletics." A student center, however, would be provided with facilities for sports, games, shop work, studio work theater, publications, and student parties; an intramural athletic program would also include games with neighboring schools. A professional director and paid student assistants were projected.

IN THE PLANNING, the Committee, "excited to find how" to combine "educational and economic advantages" would be possible, determined that, after the initial capital outlay, operating costs "can be virtually supported by student fees." "Student charges comparable to those of good existing colleges should suffice."

The need for scholarship grants would possibly limit the concept. "Cooperation among the colleges will make possible considerable savings . . ."

AMONG SEVERAL ideas offered under "Administration" the Plan "recommended unequivocally that the faculty have a dominant role" perhaps by "substituting for the usual board of trustee a Senate" which would elect the President (who would be given tenure).

Such is the essence of the study to be evaluated by Hampshire College; chances are that the trustees will also examine the development and structure of New College in Sarasota, Fla.

"Independently" of The New College Plan, it has, since 1964, been offering its concept of a more-responsive private higher education, seeking "to bring about greater understanding of the unity of knowledge."

"IT SEEMED to the founders [of the Florida institution] that the time had come for purposeful changes in educational program."

The bulletin of that institution declares, "Each student is responsible in the last analysis for his own education."

New College is like the "paper" New College in that it emphasizes independent study by the student, has done away with departmental headings in favor of the three academic divisions, and, in that, it was planned and built from ideas.

THE FLORIDA COLLEGE does not, however, enjoy four sponsoring-neighbors.

"Little use was made of the [Four-College] report in the creation of New College. One of the reasons for this seemed to lie in the unavailability" of its copies, wrote Director of Public Relations Furman C. Arthur to the Collegian.

Charles R. Longworth, chairman of the Hampshire College Educational Trust, (housed temporarily at Amherst College) said Tues., Oct. 12, that copies and that he believed they were from 1958 to the present time.

Vietnam Protest

Hope For End To War

WASHINGTON, DC (CPS)—Student groups across the country are planning anti-war activities on campuses and in communities as part of a two-day protest Oct. 15 and 16 against the war in Vietnam.

The "National Days of Protest," called by the "National Committee to End the War in Vietnam," will consist of activities ranging from campus teach-ins to civil disobedience at military induction centers. The demonstrations are being organized by local committees to end the war and by local chapters of groups such as the Students for a Democratic Society, Du Bois Clubs, and the Young Socialist Alliance.

The national committee was organized during the "Assembly of Unrepresented People" in Washington in August to provide a clearinghouse for information for the various groups protesting the war in Vietnam. In its call for the Oct. 15-16 protest, the committee declared that "unless we leave the confines of the usual government channels, we shall not be heard."

The war shall continue. The last world war taught us at least one terrible lesson, that silence is affirmation, that inaction is assent."

The form of the Oct. 15-16 protests will vary with local organizations. Most campus activities will involve teach-ins on Friday, Oct. 15. Mass demonstrations, civil disobedience, and anti-draft projects are predicted for Saturday, Oct. 16.

The following campuses are among those which will see protest activities:

- * Berkeley. The Vietnam Day Committee is planning a teach-in on the 15th and demonstrations, possibly involving civil disobedience, on the 16th at both the campus and at Oakland Army terminal. The VDC, combining both students and faculty support, was recently attacked by 300 faculty members who denounced the committee's call for mass civil disobedience and its analysis of the war. In a four-page open letter, the signers expressed their opposition to the war, but declared that "we would be derelict in our duty, particularly as members of the academic community, if we failed to register publicly our dissent from the tactics and policies of the committee."

In an eight-page response, the VDC told their critics: "You claim to be 'deeply concerned about the war in Vietnam.' But you have united to attack a group which protests the war, rather than the government which wages it."

Berkeley President Clark Kerr said today that the VDC has not won the support it originally expected. "From a figure of 10,000 they are now talking about 1000 people in the demonstration, and from talk of civil disobedience they are now talking about protesting within the law," Kerr said.

- * University of Wisconsin. Reports indicate that the "Student-Faculty Committee to End the War in Vietnam" has lined up 100 students who will attempt to be arrested for sitting in on the runways of Truax field, Madison's municipal air-

Ford Motor Company is:

responsibility

Stephen Jaeger
B.B.A., Univ. of Pittsburgh

A key dimension of any job is the responsibility involved. Graduates who join Ford Motor Company find the opportunity to accept responsibility early in their careers. The earlier the better. However, we know the transition from the academic world to the business world requires training. Scholastic achievements must be complemented by a solid understanding of the practical, day-to-day aspects of the business. That is the most direct route to accomplishment.

Stephen Jaeger, of the Ford Division's Milwaukee District Sales Office, is a good example of how it works. His first assignment, in January, 1963, was in the Administrative Department where he had the opportunity to become familiar with procedures and communications between dealerships and the District Office. In four months he moved ahead to the Sales Planning and Analysis Department as an analyst. He studied dealerships in terms of sales history, market penetration and potentials, and model mix. This information was then incorporated into master plans for the District. In March, 1964, he was promoted to Zone Manager—working directly with 19 dealers as a consultant on all phases of their complex operations. This involves such areas as sales, finance, advertising, customer relations and business management. Responsible job? You bet it is—especially for a man 25 years old. Over one million dollars in retail sales, annually, are involved in just one dealership Steve contacts.

As a growth company in a growth industry, Ford Motor Company offers an exceptionally wide spectrum of job opportunities. The chances are good that openings exist in your field of interest. See our representative when he visits your campus. We are looking for men who want responsibility—and will be ready for it when it comes.

Lethargy Characterizes ACE Confab Discussing Student in Higher Education

WASHINGTON (CPS)—University presidents and top administrators gathered at the American Council conference last week (Oct. 6-8) to discuss the problems and concerns of their students, but few students were there to speak or listen.

In almost every session of the three-day meeting, delegates were presented with the specter of "student unrest" and dire predictions of events even more unsettling than Berkeley unless students begin to feel a stake in the university. The conference itself, the first meeting in the ACE's 48-year history to focus on "The Student in Higher Education," showed little evidence of student participation or planning, however. Only a handful of students were scattered on some of the panels and among the 1,500 delegates.

MANY OBSERVERS at the huge gathering commented that it took place in an atmosphere of lethargy. During most of the panel sessions speakers confined themselves to reading their prepared papers and participants seemed to have little time or inclination for questions and discussions after the speeches.

One participant noted that during one of the panel sessions "the student provided most of the good discussion, and questions from the floor were few." The educators tended to remain in similar groups: the clergy, the few large university presidents, the association representatives, the young faculty members, went through the discussions and meal sessions and after-hours parties in separate and distinct groups.

Not all of the speakers dealt gently with student activists and demonstrators. Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach questioned the appropriateness of student demonstrations, suggesting that often they are "coercive."

IT SHOULD NOT be supposed that because students use many of the same techniques as Negroes in the South that their dissatisfactions are as profound, the attorney general said. "However deeply felt, such vaguely expressed grievances are so pallid by comparison with those of the Negro that to demonstrate over them can be to dilute and debase the moral significance of demonstrations for civil rights."

Katzenbach said the difference between the Negro movement and student demonstrations is that students have recourse to democratic forms of expression, such as campus organizations or newspapers, and their parents and community, whereas the Negro has not had access to the political system.

STUDENT INTERESTS were at times strongly defended during the panel discussions. President Edward D. Eddy of Chatham College, Pittsburgh, charged that "topics such as this should have been on the agenda of national meetings ten years ago."

"Genuine student involvement in the formation of educational policy offers our best hope of regaining the lost concept of an academic community," Eddy declared. "The time is right and ripe for all American colleges and universities to allow students a strongly contributing role in the shaping of educational policy."

Eddy called for every college and university committee to include voting student members. "Student participation, with the fresh point of view it brings, is highly desirable in such areas as curriculum planning, evaluation of teaching and teachers, and academic administration including, for example, degree requirements, grading systems and calendars."

EDDY URGED HIS audience not to fear the new student interest in educational matters—"For years, we have wanted a fire to burn; let's not throw water on the first flames."

President Stephen J. Wright of Flisk University, Nashville, Tenn., said that student involvement in the university was a prerequisite for a satisfactory academic atmosphere. "Without a student-oriented faculty, the key to student involvement," he said, "even bright students may leave a library with extensive holdings largely unexplored, fail to see the relevance of special programs and lectures, and fail to make effective use of facilities."

Many of the speakers warned against the university becoming dissociated from the moral and social issues with which students are becoming concerned. David Mallory, consultant for the College Student Personnel Institute, talked about the "new veterans" on our campuses today, veterans of civil rights battles, for whom the "dramatic reality is off campus."

"THE OLD VETERANS" deluged their elders by their zeal for their studies," Mallory commented. "The new veterans disconcert their elders by their

Canned for 'Moral Laxity' Utah Student Fights Back

SALT LAKE CITY (CPS)—A student has filed suit against three University of Utah professors who he contends "did maliciously persuade the University of Utah" to expel him.

The suit was filed in August in U. S. District Court by Michael Smith against two of his teachers, Wilberta Moore and Glenn I. Latham, and his department head, James E. Cole. Smith, a veteran with a secondary teaching certificate, was to have received his special education degree at the end of the summer session.

Smith told members of the press after filing the $102,400 damage suit that the charges "thrown against" him were incompetency, moral laxity, and several tardies, besides not having his lesson plans done. Smith said he had asked if he could defend himself, but that Cole had responded, "It's all decided."

"I TRICKED THEM THOUGH," Smith said, "and got them to admit it wasn't my academic work; it's my personality."

"As far as I'm concerned, what happened to Mr. Smith is one of the most gross misuses of academic power I've seen," Smith's attorney Carl Nemelka said.

A similar suit was filed this summer in East Lansing, Mich., where Paul A. Schiff has asked a U. S. District Court to order Michigan State University to re-admit him to its master's program in history after he was dismissed in June for "acting to disrupt the organization of the university." (CPS 6-5)

POSSIBLE REDRESS for students suing universities and professors who do not follow established procedures when expelling or suspending students was indicated recently in a Vermont Federal District Court Decision.

Before dismissing a complaint from a former University of Vermont medical student who was suing for re-admission, Judge Ernest W. Gibson said he would order the university to conduct a fair and impartial hearing if he found that it had "acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or in bad faith" in dismissing a student.

After a hearing, however, the judge ruled that no evidence was produced in this particular case to substantiate the complaint that the university's action had not followed the established procedure.

Earlier, the judge dismissed the student's complaint that he failed a course he should have passed. Judge Gibson cited a number of previous cases in ruling that the question of whether or not the student should have received a passing grade "is a matter wholly within the jurisdiction of the school authorities, who alone are qualified to make such a determination."

Interstate Education Pact Begun by Governor Sanford

Political educational leaders from every state have voted to create an Interstate Compact for Education—a partnership of states to solve nationwide problems.

A draft of the compact was agreed upon but will not become effective until the member states have acted on it individually.

The compact will establish an "educational commission of states," made up of seven representatives of each of the 50 states and four U.S. territories. The commission will be charged with making studies, collecting data, and making recommendations to its member states and to the federal government. It will have no regulatory power.

The idea of the compact came from James B. Conant who has spent the past decade in foundation-subsidized studies of various aspects of American education.

One such study convinced him of the weakness of many states in education policy-making. He saw the independent local school boards increasingly dominated by the education establishment, notably teachers groups and teacher training colleges.

Conant called for a nationwide, rather than a national, education policy. He described it not as an edict coming from Washington but an agreement among the states. This idea of concerted action by the states met widespread approval.

Terry Sanford, former governor of North Carolina, started the groundwork for the compact with work he has done under foundation grants.

The committee has selected a 27-member interim steering committee which includes 10 governors and persons involved in education to chart the future course of compact negotiations.

Engel Lecture Thurs. at Smith

Henry-Russell Hitchcock, Sophia Smith Professor of Art at Smith College, will give the Katharine Asher Engel memorial lecture on Thursday, Oct. 14 at 8 p.m. in Sage Hall at the College.

The lecture, which is given annually by a member of the Smith College faculty, includes subjects in the humanities and social sciences.

Mr. Hitchcock, an authority on Victorian and modern architecture, will speak on "H. H. Richardson as a Victorian Architect."

A professor of the history of art at Smith since 1949, Mr. Hitchcock was for six years also Director of the Smith College Museum of Art. He has also taught at Wesleyan University, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Yale University, Harvard University, the Institute of Fine Arts of New York University and Cambridge University, England. ## Kerr Predicts

No More Berkeleys

Collegiate Press Service

The demonstrations which rocked Berkeley last year won't happen again, Pres. Clark Kerr of the University of California believes.

"The mood within the faculty is changing fast," Kerr said in an interview during the 48th annual American Council on Education meeting (Oct. 6-8). "There is no question that the undergraduate has been neglected, but the faculty has a new interest in him." This is one of the "constructive results" of the Berkeley conflict, he contended.

Another factor in the "new mood on campus" was the shake-up within the administration, Kerr noted. The immediate cause for the original student protest was an administration ruling, given without consulting either the faculty or students, which closed off an area on the campus traditionally reserved for distribution of political literature. "Roger Heyne (the new Berkeley chancellor) just isn't going to make a mistake like that," Kerr said.

The lack of communication among students, faculty and administrators was growing before the Berkeley revolt, he commented. "The students came to us better prepared and more highly motivated toward academic study at the same time that the faculty was drawn to research and tasks as consultants. The gap grew."

How is the administration developing the channels of communication that students charged were lacking last year, Kerr was asked. The Byrne report, prepared for the university regents, recommended decentralization along the lines of a "commonwealth" to meet the needs of the individual campuses of the University.

"We are not going to implement the Byrne report," Kerr said. "In a commonwealth any member can withdraw at any time, and no one really wants that."

Kerr also looks to possible structural changes at Berkeley, although he admits that the campus is so large and settled that substantial innovations are probably not possible. He has recommended to the University of California regents, however, dropping the enrollment from 27,500 to 25,000 while raising the graduate student proportion from 38 per cent to 50 per cent.

Kerr also remains interested in educational activity within the residence halls—a plan of his rejected by the regents in the late fifties. Living - study units for students and faculty are now gaining support at Berkeley, he said, but again the problem lies in converting existing structures to such use.

Kerr was the target of attacks from all sides during the conflict, and he has remained a target for conservative pressure in the state. "There is some feeling outside the campus that the liberalization that had gone on during my seven years as president had gone too far, and the demonstrations were an inevitable result. Conservatives see no counteraction from us for the actions of the students; as in a Greek tragedy they expect sufficient retribution."

Stockbridge Student Wins Aggy Award

A two-day "science in agriculture fair" at the UMass, attended by some 15,000 persons over the weekend, ended Sunday with the awarding of a prize for the display which best showed the most progressive aspect of agriculture.

The award was given to Peter Gray of Pennington, N. J., a student at the Stockbridge School of Agriculture, for his exhibit on the physiology of reproduction.

The fair, organized by UMass students to show the public how modern science works in and influences agriculture, featured exhibits by Stockbridge students, undergraduates, and graduate students, some of whom have won wide recognition for their work.

Eugene Hill of Conway, a UMass graduate student, has been nationally acclaimed for his research in pesticides.

Another display showed in miniature how apples can be stored and kept fresh year round by a system which controls the air in the storage rooms. The air is "washed," and its carbon monoxide content regulated.

This exhibit involved some $5000 worth of equipment. The Durfee range, a conservatory, was open to the public for viewing of its collections of tropical poisonous, and exotic plants.

Scientific disciplines represented as being closely connected with agriculture included biochemistry, geology, and physics.

Joseph Keohane, a graduate student, who originated the fair last year, said many of the students at UMass poke fun at the "Aggy" students, and the fair was a method of showing the public at large the many facets of modern agriculture.

The opportunities for the practical application of scientific training and the chances for large salaries are many, he said.

Part of the reason for the fair, he explained, is to reach young people still unsure about a career who would benefit from knowing more about modern farming.

Other displays were topographical maps of the Connecticut Valley area, the result of ecological studies by students, showing the plant and soil conditions prevailing in the valley. Such studies would allow scientific farmers to plan the best use of the land.

Also shown were the results of nutritional studies to increase the butterfat content of dairy cattle, and avoid the contraction of disease in poultry.

zeal for demonstrations. And many of them have shown more than zeal: they have learned how to demonstrate, to protest, to rally a crowd, to organize a movement, sometimes even to put their opponents against the wall. These techniques look a little different on a college campus than they may have looked in the street before an Alabama courthouse.

President James P. Dixon of Antioch College in Ohio noted that students' new concern with social issues has widened the gap between themselves and their professors. "The scholar has traditionally opposed the propriety of any service role for the educational institution," he said. "Students, however, do conceive of themselves as agents of social change and are not entirely willing to participate in social change just through reasoned inquiry."

The university must take into account, Dixon said, the desire of students "to apply the energies of their trained minds" to what is beyond the campus—"against racial inequality and poverty and war."

KINGMAN BREWSTER JR., president of Yale, lamented "too many among our students of high promise squander their talent for a lifetime of constructive work at a high level for the cheaper and transient satisfaction of throwing himself on some immediate barricade in the name of 'involvement.'" And later, "if impatient anti-intellectualism of the radical left is not to seduce many of our best brains away from true usefulness, we and our faculties have to reassert again and again that emotional oversimplification of the world's problems is not the path to their solution."

BERKELEYS...

Referring to a report made by the state senate's un-American activities committee, Kerr dismissed the charge that the revolt was a Communist plot. "It wasn't, and I say so," he said.

Kerr talked about the three new campuses within the University of California which carry his hopes for combining the "advantages of the small college and the big campus." These new universities, at Santa Cruz, Irvine and San Diego, represent three distinct approaches to education, he indicated.

At Santa Cruz the three universities on the campus are organized around the science laboratories, research libraries and cultural facilities. The Irvine campus is "highly integrated," with classroom buildings of the various disciplines mixed on the campus. San Diego contains three sub-divisions, each one a self-contained unit of four colleges.

Rumors have been rampant concerning Kerr's resignation or firing for some time, and he actually did try to resign last March. However, he now says unequivocally that he "has no intentions of leaving." He appears to be much more optimistic about Berkeley's future than he was reported to be at the time of the crisis—"People don't understand the tremendous vitality of this place. You could have gone through the whole of last year there without ever realizing anything was wrong."

If his composure was at one point shaken, he now appears confident of his own ability and that of his new Berkeley chancellor, to handle whatever comes up.

NASA Experiments May Prove Life On Other Planets Possible

"At the present time the question of whether there is life on other planets is really open to debate," began Dr. Dale R. Jenkins, Chief of Experimental Biology of at NASA, in the first of a series of lectures on extreme physical and chemical living conditions to illustrate his lecture which began at 11:15 a.m. Thursday in Hasbrouck 126.

Describing himself primarily as an ecologist who is interested in extreme living conditions such as deserts and mountain tops, Jenkins first set forth the main objectives of the NASA program.

He said they are "to determine whether organisms can live under simulated laboratory conditions and to define approximately the absolute environment for all earth organisms."

But, he pointed out, there are conditions which are "unique to space" and cannot be simulated in the laboratory. These include weightlessness (a free fall while the space craft is in orbit), radiation (cosmic) and the actual support of man to Mars around 1980.

JENKINS FEELS that "there is a very good chance of there being life on Mars" because of numerous tests already completed and experiments still being conducted. In a simulated Martian environment "we have shown that lichen will produce oxygen," and therefore that some organisms will grow in Mars' atmosphere.

In working with organisms under simulated conditions the scientists are faced with answering two questions: What are the extremes? and, What are the effects of combined extremes? These questions are now being answered with the help of the ABL (Automated Biological Lab)

But there are problems that have to be met before the spacecrafts make their journey to other planets. "One of the major problems is to decontaminate our spacecraft," said Jenkins.

He pointed out if the spacecraft was not decontaminated upon landing, it would be impossible to tell if the organisms found on or in the spacecraft were from earth would, of course, defeat the whole purpose of the NASA program.

IN SUMMARIZING the physical conditions which are being tested for extremes, Jenkins listed five physical factors: temperature, magnetism, gravity, pressure and electro-magnetic spectrum. He added that the moon has approximately 50 gamma and man can live with between 0 and 50 gamma of the magnetic field. He also added that some organisms can live at 0 gravity.

In experimenting with extreme chemical living conditions, scientists and biologists have found that some organisms are able to multiply and germinate in 100% oxygen or at 0% oxygen. Some can also live in 50 cyanide.

In a recent experiment in which 22 different amino acids were put together "in the ratio found in living organisms," spheroids were produced that resembled living cells.

Jenkins who will shortly have a book of tables published on the results of studies of extreme physical and chemical living conditions, added that future NASA experiments will clarify even further the pressing questions of planetary life and the existence of living organisms besides those on earth.

NOW NASA SCIENTISTS and biologists "are quite interested in getting together all the literature that there is on extreme living conditions and then subjecting it to critical testing," Jenkins concluded.

The Immanuel Lutheran Church on North Pleasant St., adjacent to the Education Bldg., will be dedicated this Sunday.

Lutheran Church To Be Dedicated Sun.

While the University dedicates a new stadium on one end of the campus, Lutherans will dedicate this new contemporary church at the other end adjacent to the School of Education.

Open house for the new Immanuel Lutheran Church, designed by Olav Hammarstrom of Woffleet and New York, will be held on Saturday from 2-5 P.M.

Dedication Services are Sunday, at 10:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Dr. Martin Marty of Chicago U. Divinity School, will be the preacher at the 3:30 Service which will be aired over WHMP.

Immanuel Lutheran Church, the Rev. Richard Koenig, pastor, is the campus church for Lutherans. Officers of the Student Congregation are: Albert Garlo, '68, president; Carmen Grosse, '68, vice president; Judith Anderson '68, secretary; Nancy Bergsma, '68, treasurer.

Others are: Faith Dickhaut, '67, publicity; Jan Zikorus, N.E. Federation rep.; and Jean Carlson, Protestant Christian Council rep.

The complex being dedicated includes a lounge for the use of the students. The lounge is equipped with study facilities and a stereo hi-fi.

The church will be open at all times for prayer and meditation.

The Rev. Richard Koenig, pastor, will read the rite of dedication in the 10:30 a.m. Service for which the Rev. William Scar of West Newton, Massachusetts, will be the preacher.

In the afternoon, the congregation will celebrate with a Festival Vespers at 3:30 p.m., Dr. Martin Marty of Chicago, preaching. Special music will be provided at both services by the senior choir under the direction of Edwin Cole. The Rev. Edward Fisher of Storrs, Connecticut will be liturgist for the Vespers which will be sung.

Designed by Olav Hammarstrom of Woffleet and New York, the church features a central altar in an almost square sanctuary. The minister conducts the Service across the altar in accord with current liturgical practice.

A GREAT CROSS bolted to the floor and set against the west wall dominates the sanctuary. The church is lighted by means of an unusual system of skylights which is located on the perimeter of the building.

Total cost of the project was $164,000, one third of which was raised by Lutheran churches in Massachusetts. The Lutheran Women's Missionary League furnished the church with a gift from its funds.

Before the Service of Dedication at 10:30 the congregation will gather at the entrance to witness the presentation of the key to the president of the congregation and the opening of the doors. The key will be turned over to the church's president, Richard Bergquist, by Philip Shumway, the contractor. Pastor Koenig will read the prayers. The congregation will then file into the church for the service.

At 3:30 p.m. the congregation will play host to visitors from neighboring congregations. The Festival Vespers will be carried live over WHMP.

A reception will follow for all those in attendance in the all purpose room in the lower church.

MEMBERS and friends from sister congregations and residents of the Amherst community are being invited to an open house at the new church on October 16, 1965, from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor Hebert are in charge of the Saturday afternoon open house, assisted by young people of the church and members of the student congregation.

Kelly is Picked Top Defensive Player

Defensive back, Dave Kelly of the UMass Redmen has been named defensive player of the week in the Yankee Conference.

Kelly recovered a fumble on the first play of the UConn game, and in the second half intercepted a Dave Whaley pass to give the Redmen the ball. Six plays later Vandersea went over from the two yard line for the first UMass touchdown.

Fullback Phil Vandersea was nominated one of the top offensive players of the week for his part in the victory over UConn. Vandersea gained 80 yards in 15 carries.

The Chief Dave Kelly made his presense known last Saturday.

Intramural Report

By Dave Jarnes

IN PERHAPS the most shocking game of the season, winless QTV upset previously unbeaten SPE 20-14 Wednesday night. The deciding TD came with just two minutes left as quarterback O'Hara faked the Sig Ep defense out of position by having all his receivers except Gamarche go to the right. O'Hara then hit Gamarche, who was standing alone in the left endzone for the winning score.

LCA took over undisputed possession of first place with an 18-6 win over ZN. ZN's ball-control tactics gave LCA troubles but quarterback Jim Donahue (10-12 with 2 TD's scored) proved to be too much. LCA, presently in the driver's seat will meet SPE next week to determine the A league champion.

TKE seldom wins impressively, but nonetheless is undefeated and leading the B fraternity league. Garbutt (8-11 with 3 TD passes) led the attack as TKE had to struggle before downing lowly ATG 20-14.

Defending champion KS remained in contention for the B league title with a surprisingly easy 25-6 triumph over BKP, whose title aspirations went down the drain with this setback. Godak, who has done well the last two games, completed 15 of 21 and Jim Neary caught 3 passes for KS while Vic Larkin (15-22) starred in a losing effort. The big showdown comes next week when KS meets TKE. Meanwhile TC and AEP still remain in strong contention.

TC's alert defense picked off 6 enemy passes in a 21-0 win over PSD. Hapless SAM, which still has the courage to show up for its games, again got bombed, this time the score was 25-0 in favor of TEP. Paul Gullickson caught 3 TD passes.

Rounding out the fraternity action quarterback Bill Oldach sparked a second half comeback as ASP rallied from a 7-6 halftime deficit to win 19-13 over PMD.

THE LEMONS threw the south dorm league into a tie by edging the Oaks 15-14 on a safety. Higginbotham riddled the Oaks' defense with 14 completions in 20 attempts. The Oaks are now tied with the Hoovers, whom they meet next week in the final game of the season. Both the Oaks' and the Hoovers' only losses have been to the upset-minded Lemons.

THE HOOVERS broke open a close 7-6 halftime score with a 3 TD second half barrage to romp over the victory-starved Limes 28-6. Joe Pedro's passing (13-26 and 3 TD's) enabled the Hicks to top the Maples 30-12. Fredericks' pass receiving (8 receptions) sparked the Hi-Lo's to a 25-19 triumph over the Hickories.

POLICE's passing (22-32) and 6 TD passes paved the way for the Untouchables' 46-6 massacre of the Selohasas. The powerful Untouchables are a definite threat to win the campus championship. The only team that has given them any semblance of a contest is the Philosophy Club, which clobbered the College St. A.C. 38-0 in other action this week.

Redmen Ready to Rock Rams Rhody Rarin' to Rock Redmen

by Mike Gould

The Rhode Island Rams enter Alumni stadium this Homecoming Saturday with a score to settle.

Since Vic Fusia took over as UMass head coach in 1961, the Redmen have treated the Rams unmercifully, giving URI but one touchdown in four games, while themselves racking up a total of 131 points.

URI head coach Jack Zilly has seen his teams outscored 64-0 by UMass in his first two seasons. Redmen fans will remember the 57-0 farce in 1963 and the 7-0 mudbath at URI last year. Several players on this year's URI club were around to endure the agony of the last two games with UMass, and it is fair to assume that these boys have had just about enough. The boys from Rhody will be most rambunctious Saturday.

The Rams have the material to spring the big upset. In half-Rams have the leading rusher in the Yankee Conference. The New Jersey native averages 5.3 yards a carry while gaining 266 yards in three games.

Pul Bricoccoli is the URI quarterback. The senior has thrown 40 passes this season, completing 18 for 300 yards. Jim McMahon and Jack Reed round out the all-senior backfield.

The Ram line is anchored both on offense and defense by captain Joe Defalco, a rugged 225 pound tackle. Defalco and appropriately named Howie Small (6'3", 240 lbs.) will occupy the middle of the Ram defensive line and present a strong challenge to Redmen blockers.

Rhode Island has beaten New Hampshire and Brown while losing to Vermont. They are not to be taken lightly.

Fusia's Redmen showed definite signs at UConn last week that they were ready to play up to their potential. The running attack was strong with Phil Vandersea, the league's third leading rusher, picking up chunks of yardage behind a hard charging Landry passed infrequently but successfully against UConn, as the Redmen showed well on offense for the first time this season.

Not enough can be said about the defensive unit. Kelly, Dallas, and Company followed up their Buffalo masterpiece with an equally great performance against Connecticut, keeping the Huskies completely at bay during the second half while the offense scored thrice to win.

Ed Toner, a running back from Lynn English High School, has become a stalwart at defensive tackle for Fusia. A junior, Toner is 6'2" and weighs 225 pounds. Watch for number 77, Ed Toner, to make a multitude of tackles Saturday.

Let credit also be given to Bob Santucci, a strong two way performer at guard. A product of Newton, Santucci plays old fashioned hard-nosed football. When UMass opponents have the ball, the Tooch will usually be found at the bottom of the pile.

Wrestlers Take To Mats, Will Open Under New Head Coach

by Art Keown

REPLACING John Douglas as Head Wrestling Coach this year is Irvin Hess, who comes to UMass from Ursinus College in Pennsylvania. Presently enrolled in the Graduate Program here at the University, Coach Hess has an impressive history as a coach.

COACH HESS' first contact with wrestling was at Milton-Hershey High School, Pennsylvania, where he competed on the Varsity team. He then went to Slippery Rock State College, majoring in Physical Education, and here studied teaching and coaching methods.

In 1950 he became head coach at Muncy High School, Penn., and he remained there for three years. From Muncy he went to Mount Union High School, where he started and expanded a wrestling program.

IN THE FALL of 1956 he moved to Norristown, Pennsylvania, where he remained for nine years. During this period he coached 2 State Finalists, 6 district champions, and 3 regional champions.

Hess feels that wrestling is the fastest growing sport in the United States. All of his coaching prior to coming to UMass has been in Pennsylvania, where there are more than 400 schools actively competing in wrestling at the high school or college level. He stated that while he coached at Norristown spectator interest grew from 40 persons at a dual meet to more than 1000 persons.

"If the New England Area does not promote wrestling to a greater degree," Hess commented, "the schools in this area will not be able to compete in a league with the rest of the country."

FOR THE FIRST meeting this year the Coach reported a total of 38 Freshmen and Varsity candidates signed up to take a Physical Examination, necessary before a student may participate in a team activity. He hopes to have at least 60 persons on the roster by the end of the year.

THE TEAM will begin practice Monday, October 18 in the Wrestling Room of the Boyden Gymnasium.

The team's first scheduled function will be on December 3-4, when they will compete with 18 other college teams at the Coast Guard Invitational Tournament.

Hess commented that Coach Douglas left him a very strong team, with 8 of last year's 10 lettermen returning and he feels that with lots of practice and enthusiasm it can be the best team in New England this year.

Hess plans to work hard to develop student interest and participation through publicity and by initiating a knowledge of the sport in the spectators.

ANY ORGANIZATION desiring a demonstration of wrestling skills should contact him. Freshman Coach Maurice Broskey, or one of the team members.

UMass Marching Band To Display Renowned Form

With the opening of the 1965 football season, the UMass Marching Band has achieved one of its major goals, expansion of its membership to its maximum.

Prof. John A. Jenkins explained in an interview the band's preparation for the football season, some of its major problems and the band's function on the college campus.

Band members spend an hour and twenty minutes a day rehearsing music and formations to be used in pre-game and half-time entertainment at football games.

Band students also practice 6 to 10 hours a day during the Band Camp, before the beginning of the semester. The camp helps annually to train new members in marching techniques and also gives the band a head-start in preparing for the first home game.

"Pulled tendons and strained legs have been our major problem this year," Conductor John A. Jenkins explained. "This has resulted in a much greater use of the reserve units, who practice every day with the regular members. As yet there has been no problem in fielding the required number."

Three years ago the band had 55 members, 25 of who were incoming freshmen. Now there are 140, including reserve players and property assistants.

"The band has reached its major growth," Prof. Jenkins reported. "There has been a 50 per cent increase in each of the past two years. Standards will be even higher now, with greater competition." One of his most important goals now, he added, is to see that 80 per cent of the band membership is returned each year.

"Our major over-all problem is the attitude of incoming freshmen toward the band," Prof. Jenkins said, explaining that half these freshmen feel a marching band is not a true musical organization. He emphasized, "This is not true. A marching band is definitely a musical organization, but serves a different function than would a concert band or a symphony orchestra."

Prof. Jenkins not only has the responsibility for the organization and actual directing of the band but he also creates the programs given at the games. The music is sent to Jerry H.

The 1965 Univ. of Mass. Marching Band in action.

Billik, professor of music at another college, to be arranged to the needs of the marching band. For Jenkins, a great deal of planning is necessary. Programs and arrangements for each fall must be completed between November and February, nearly a year early.

This season the Band will travel only to the BU and UConn games. Prof. Jenkins said last year's strenuous schedule was too taxing on the students' studies.

Prof. Jenkins had another point about the schedule. He stated emphatically: "The Marching Band serves a definite function for the campus and the students who belong to it. However, it is not more important than the Symphony Band, although it receives a great deal of attention during the six or seven weeks of the football season."

University of Massachusetts, Monday, October 18, 1965

Governor John A. Volpe speaks at Stadium Dedication, Saturday afternoon.

Webster, Lewis Cop Honors

The weather finally cooperated last Friday night and the float parade, rally and crowning of the queen went off without a hitch.

When the scattered showers dispersed, the parade stepped off at 7 p.m. led by the high-stepping marching band with only the slightest amount of dampened spirits or crepe paper.

Anne Marie Creedon began her reign when Maj. Gen. John J. McGinnis, Associate Alumni Association president crowned her queen and presented her with a dozen red roses.

Webster and Lewis took top honors in the dorm division, and Beta Kappa Phi and Kappa Alpha Theta captured the Greek laurels.

Chadbourne and Gorman, Van Meter No. and Southwest A, and Phi Beta Phi and Sigma Delta Tau placed second and third in their classes.

TKE took second in the fraternity class and TEP and Phi Mu Delta tied for third.

The rally, the first outside rally of the season, saved Adelphia from complete frustration. The Maroon Keys got Rhode Island's goat and made a fiery sacrifice of the huge ram.

The football team was introduced to the crowd on the rally area and a dance in the Ballroom followed the rally.

Volpe Lauds Stadium,

Governor John A. Volpe made the following remarks at the dedication of University of Massachusetts Alumni Stadium.

"On behalf of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, it is indeed an honor and a pleasure for me to be with you today for the dedication of the University of Massachusetts Alumni Stadium.

"The definition of education is 'the systematic development and cultivation of the natural powers.' This means that a total, well-rounded education must include not only mental and moral disciplines, but top-notch physical training as well.

"And certainly, this magnificent stadium will provide the students of the University of Massachusetts with the very best facilities possible for the most enjoyable physical activities of all team sports. And the actual players on the field are not the only ones who will be getting some healthy exercise, for I am certain that you thousands of cheering fans watching the games will not be sitting still.

"Massachusetts, the first of the American colonies to build a college, is justly proud of this latest educational advancement. And so, I wish to commend and thank all those responsible for the construction of this breathtaking stadium...and I assure you that every citizen in the Commonwealth is rooting for a University of Massachusetts Redmen victory in this Homecoming game and throughout the rest of the season."

Lederle Dedicates Stadium; Autos Highlight Ceremony

By Jim Foudy
Day Editor

Under clear, sunny skies, and set against a backdrop of autumn colors the University of Massachusetts dedicated its new Alumni Stadium.

HIGHLIGHT of the pre-game ceremonies was Pres. John Lederle's acceptance of Alumni Stadium on behalf of the University, calling it a "culmination of many years of endeavor."

"It is another proud day in the history of the University", he commented, and in a welcoming letter to the alumni urged that the stadium be considered "not just as a football field, but as a symbol of our dedication to serving the entire Commonwealth in the best possible manner."

OPENING the colorful ceremonies, the UMass Marching Band led the parade of antique cars around the field giving the dedication a festive atmosphere.

The autos, ranging from a 1908 Franklin to a 1931 Rolls Royce Sedan, carried many former UM football captains holding signs indicating the year of their captaincy.

And in the midst of the old, rode the young — lovely Homecoming Queen Anne Marie Creedon and her court, reigning over the weekend's activities.

As the last of the antique autos left the stadium the gates on the south side opened to let S1, carrying Gov. John Volpe, onto the field.

IN A FEW BRIEF REMARKS Gov. Volpe termed the stadium "breathtaking" and said that it was a "grand facility" to "total well-rounded education—mental and moral discipline and top-notch physical education."

In a letter to the University, Volpe called Alumni Stadium a "tribute to the fine sportsmen produced at the University."

"It is a fine example of the constant strides being made

Hitch-hiking Illegal! Take the Bus, Girls

By Pat Petow, 4 - College Reporter

Speaking as a man, Mount Holyoke President Richard Gettell, told an assembly of students that a man will see a woman hitchhiking and assume that she is "either a tramp or a tart," according to an Amherst STUDENT article.

At the Oct. 5, 8:30 a.m. required meeting for juniors and seniors, he advised, among other subjects, that they not "get snowed into something you don't want to."

THE NUMBER of rape-murders and rapes without murder in this area in recent years and the fact that hitchhiking is illegal in Massachusetts were noted by Gettell according to the Amherst College report.

A Mount Holyoke senior said some students "Thought it was sort of silly and in poor taste" was evident in the choice of language.

Several UMass coeds, divided between those who "definitely" do not hitchhike and those who, under certain conditions, do hitchhike (but never alone), offered a wide range of responses to questions asked after they had read the story.

ONE UPPERCLASSWOMAN who thought "just about the same thing" as Gettell in this description of female hitchhikers, said that the remarks were "not especially" helpful.

A lone woman hitchhiking is, "Just giving an invitation to anything guys want to do," one gal said.

A senior, whose hitchhiking experience was limited to going with a group of girls to Mass at St. Bridget's (before the Newman Center was in use) during Lent, thought a guy "would wonder why" if he saw a woman hitchhiking alone; but his impression would depend on his own views.

ALMOST ALL AGREE hitchhiking is, or can be, dangerous; but they think it is less dangerous in the four-college area. Some of those interviewed admitted they had not given the subject much previous thought and so gave conditional answers.

On the question of how dangerous is it, a typical reply was "definitely, for girls" alone and not especially good in a group either. A freshman said she never hitchhiked alone, never at home, only with other girls around the campus, only with a date at night because you could get picked up by some kind of nut.

A majority however said they thought the University should not take disciplinary action against hitchhikers. Some seven insisted that the University should not forbid hitchhiking although it is illegal in the state.

THREE FRESHMEN said that they did not know the activity was illegal and that they would have liked to have been told. An upperclasswoman who did not "like the whole tone" of the speech said she would have been "very upset to be required" to attend it. Another student speculated Mount Holyokers "maybe never thought of it, but now they're going to do it."

UMass-Boston Welcomes Visitors To First Reception and Open House

By Paula McCarthy
News Reporter

UMass-Boston held its first, formal social event while alumni and students at Amherst were celebrating the Homecoming Weekend.

On Sunday, a Chancellors tea and open house for parents and students was held in the former Gas Company building at 100 Arlington Street.

UMass Boston opened with a freshman class of 1200 about a week after the Amherst campus had resumed classes.

The liberal Arts branch was created to meet the needs of a metropolitan area. No attempt to conform to Amherst standards is anticipated. The students on the Boston campus now carry a course load of 4 subjects worth 4 credits each per semester.

Expecting to expand 1,000 students per year for the next 3 years, many of the plans are still tentative. A permanent location being one of the major issues, the college also has to work out a program of night and summer courses to begin sometime next year.

One of the most outstanding features of the new school is its faculty.

The staff of 73 at Boston was recruited from all over the country. Being in a situation like this, many chances for advancement and innovation are available.

As the Boston campus grows, the differences between the city mouse and the country mouse will become more distinct. An interchange of students between Amherst and Boston is expected but any definite plans concerning this have not yet been worked out.

What's In a Name?

By Angela Cauruso
Feature Reporter

Most University buildings are concrete tributes to men who have helped establish UMass.

Traditionally former University presidents were honored, but today, because of the enormous progress in development, anyone connected with scholarly advances may be considered.

Although there never has been any strict rule governing these choices, the completion of the Southwest Complex (27 units) will give any student an opportunity to recommend the name of any person he feels is qualified and deserving of such a tribute.

Upon completion of the Orchard Complex last fall, four literary figures connected with the immediate Amherst area—Emily Dickinson, Eugene Field, David Grayson and Noah Webster—were chosen. But once again because of the giant gains in campus growth, the board of trustees will consider the nomination of anyone who has contributed to the advancement of higher education.

Once a recommendation has been submitted, a biography of the nominee is prepared and passed on to the Committee of Buildings at UMass, which can recommend it, in turn, to the trustees for consideration.

Dean of Students William F. Field explained that the eligible list will include anyone who has added to the growth of higher education and scholastic achievement.

Dean Field assures students their recommendations will be considered and advises them to contact either Prof. Clarence Shute, master of Southwest Residential College, in Room 209, School of Business Administration, or the Office of the Dean of Students.

ORCHARD HILL

Education to Entertain

By Jack Earle
News Reporter

Utopia is in sight on the "hill". The year-old Orchard Hill Complex developing a diversified program of activities ranging from a creative art to film festivals.

Dr. Leon Barron, faculty resident of David Grayson House, said that these activities serve a two-fold purpose: they offset the student's feeling of an impersonal faculty relationship and they also provide education in an entertaining manner.

Emphasizing the idea of a residence college, these events are conducted in the lounges of the four residence halls, each with a faculty fellow as speaker or moderator. Mrs. Eugene de Kerpely, housemother of Eugene Field House and author of three books, instructs a creative writing group in that dormitory.

In the same dorm other groups are dealing with philosophy, current issues and play reading. Each event is conducted by a faculty fellow connected with the dormitory.

Debates and lectures planned for the coming weeks will include Dr. Robert Gage's talk on narcotics, a series on contemporary Germany with a member of the military science department, a four-part series on Greece and discussions on the student-left and student-right.

Entertainment for the students has not been left out. Each residence hall takes part in the Orchard Hill Film Society which will present foreign and American movies of the 1930's and '40's. These films will include the Marx Brothers in Horse Feathers and Rossellini's Open City. In addition, Eugene Field House's film committee will present more recent pictures such as Stalag 17 and Gigi.

For the future, Dr. Barron looks to further improvement of the faculty-student relationship. He hopes that more classes for upperclassmen can be scheduled for the complex and that a multi-purpose dining hall can be built as the focal point for Hill activities.

Sug Board Seeks Six

Nomination papers are now in the RSO Office, Student Union for six positions to be filled on the Student Union Governing Board. The vacancies are to be filled by one member of the Class of 1969, two members of the Class of 1968, two members of the Class of 1967, and one member of the Class of 1966. The positions will be determined by general elections of each class to be held on Thursday, Oct. 28, 1965, along with Freshman Class elections.

The SUG Board is charged with the responsibility of establishing all policies for the use of the Student Union facilities. The organization is also responsible to see that a social, cultural, and educational program of activities and services is provided for the UMass students and campus community.

Nomination papers are due back in the RSO office on Fri., Oct. 22.

Senior Class Placement Interviews

Seniors will meet tomorrow night at 5 p.m. to discuss job opportunities with the placement services.

Men will meet in Bowker Aud. and women in the Student Union. A tentative schedule of employer appointments is listed on page 5 to aid seniors.

The Placement Office reminds seniors that it is important to register with the office in Machmer as time is at a premium.

They stressed that the schedule is tentative and that only a few school systems have been listed.

Another counseling session is scheduled for Oct. 25.

The schedule is published by the Collegian as a public service to the senior class. It is hoped that this will serve as a calendar throughout the appointment laden months ahead for the senior class.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGLIAN FORUM

Isolation? -- Not This Time!

This weekend, this country was the sight of many student demonstrations, the likes of which we are used to reading about in underdeveloped countries in which the communists and socialists have been able to gain a strong foothold.

These demonstrators, who have also appeared at UMass, ask that the United States reverse her policy in Viet Nam, and completely pull out of that country all support which we have given to date.

Their stand, much like that of the isolationists at the beginning of World War II, asks that we ignore the problems of the rest of the world and live in our own little self-contained universe. The last time this happened we were awakened with Pearl Harbor.

We, most of us that is, have learned our lesson only too well. We cannot afford to turn our backs while any nation, no matter how small, is maintaining an aggressive policy toward any other nation. This is especially true today in this age of intricate and entangling alliances, where that small power may be speaking and fighting with one hand, while holding the "hotline" to its big brother in the other.

These students, who claim they are for a democratic society, should take a moment out from their antics to consider what the consequences would be if their policies were ever put into effect. The end result would probably be the annihilation of a goodly part of the society which they want to be democratic. To end the war in Viet Nam would only be an invitation to all countries considering aggressive action anywhere in the world to go ahead with it. For, if we allow the takeover of South Vietnam, we are announcing to the world that America will no longer be the guardian of a free world.

Their other major complaint is that of the current draft policy. Consider what would happen if we did not maintain an adequate army. In this day and age it is unnecessary to elaborate on this point. Any 10 year old child can tell you the consequences.

However, here are two questions which are worth considering. First, considering the fact that these demonstrators are a small minority of our population, and a democratic society always acts according to the majority's wants, does it not seem strange that they are crusading for a democratic society with these issues in point? And second, do they mean a democratic society for the world, or only the privileged few born as Americans, with the rest of the world literally going to hell?

Bedtime Story, Anyone?

"But it's four o'clock in the morning!" Well, I think I'm old enough to take care of myself." Apparently the University doesn't, as it's policy of curfews and bed checks for women students illustrates. Last week, there was such a bed check. This only served to bring up a recurring problem. In the past, the University has had a policy of no curfews for male students, and has established one, thought many to be too early, for women students. Perhaps it is time for a change in this position.

The University feels that it has an obligation to the parents of the women students. This is true, but don't they also have one to the students themselves? Their first concern must be to the student, not the parent, since the purpose of coming to a college is to learn to accept responsibilities, not to obey orders. An attempt to force a moral code upon women students is being made, instead of allowing them, as adults, to make their own.

Any psychologist will tell you that women mature faster than men. As far as the law is concerned, a girl can legally go on her own when she is eighteen, while a man must be twenty-one. Thus it seems rather absurd to check up on women students as a mother checks to see whether junior has been in the cookie jar.

College students are more and more becoming considered the elite of society. More and more positions of responsibility are open only to college graduates. Why then must this "elite" group be treated as inferior to eighteen year old working girls who are free to come and go as they please.

In the unfortunate instances when a girl gets "in trouble", the blame certainly should not fall on the parents or on the University, but rather on the persons involved. The thing people refuse to realize is that if such a thing is going to happen, it will happen whether there is a curfew or not. Among sociologists it is believed that a person who has no moral code forced upon him is more likely to adopt a good one. Thus I feel that the policy of bedchecks and curfews should be reconsidered.

A Letter from Your Men's Judiciary

To the Editor,

R.E. Theft: Is it worth it?

In recent years the University of Massachusetts has become a large educational strongpoint in the New England area, a region renowned for its academic offerings to generations of students. Whether a large or small campus, a concept of moral responsibility of necessity, must accompany higher education. In one area in particular, that pertaining to theft, a portion of the student body has not accepted its responsibilities.

Theft exists here at UMass—and in disgraceful proportions. There is no area that is free from this unnecessary problem. The student bookstore, the library, the dining commons and even art exhibits in Bartlett Hall and the Student Union, placed there for the enjoyment of the students, are not excepted from loss by theft. Something must be done about this situation.

Each year, the bookstore is exposed to students who feel, for some undefined reason, that they should be exempt from paying for the books or other necessities which the majority of the student body accept as an expense concurrent with attaining a higher education. The estimated annual loss due to this undesirable element, for there is no other way of describing these people, is approximately 6000 dollars. This amounts to about 50 cents that each student must pay each year in the form of higher prices for books.

The private and University losses sustained in the library are almost impossible to estimate. Daily, students lose books, notebook and other incidentals which amount to a ridiculously large amount. Many students cannot afford these unnecessary losses. Financial losses from stolen books and magazines are absorbed by the University and ultimately by the students and the taxpayers of Massachusetts.

There are many other examples which are as shocking as those mentioned above but they will serve to make the point. Losses from theft affect every student, faculty member, and taxpayer of this state. As in the past, the members of Men's Judiciary have made known their attitude towards theft. We want it understood that cases concerning theft will be dealt with very severely and that suspension from the University is not considered too harsh a penalty. Anyone considering the cheap way out of a financial responsibility should read the sign posted in the bookstore.

Is it worth it?

"Kiss Me Kate"*Coming To Campus

As the new 1965-66 season of the Operetta Guild approaches, the organization announced the upcoming opening of its first musicale of the year, Kiss Me Kate, under the competent direction of Mr. Joel J. Friedman.

Mr. Friedman has a varied past in the field of drama, exhibiting both interest and proficiency in this area.

Graduating with a B.A. from the University of California and an M.A. from Smith Col., Mr. Friedman is not only a director, but a writer, teacher and actor.

His first association with the theatre began as an actor off-Broadway, in tours, summer stock and TV.

HE IS THE AUTHOR of many articles, including his most recent, The Psychology of The Audience in Relation To The Architecture of The Theater. He has also written many plays, including The Dispossessed and The Gentle Art of Making En- emies.

Beginning in 1947 as director of Home of The Brave at Smith Col., Mr. Friedman has done a variety of shows ranging from Electra to Oh Dad, Poor Dad. Some of the more recent are: Diary of Anne Frank, Midsummer Night's Dream, and his own play, The Last Goodbye.

Mr. Friedman entered the teaching profession on a grand scale in 1950 when he supervised a pageant of 800 people in Carlisle, Pa. He has taught both acting and play-writing in New York. In 1957 he taught for the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York.

MR. FRIEDMAN is affiliated with the Actors Equity Assoc., Society of Stage Directors and Choreographers, the AAUP and AFTRA.

Performances of Kiss Me Kate will be held on Oct. 22-23, 28-30. Tickets are on sale now in the Student Union ticket office.

Following the playing of the National Anthem, Gov. Volpe, Pres. Lederle and other members of the dedication party took their seats and the game got underway.

Phi Kappa Nu -- Working Together -- Will Bring Success

Not many were aware of the contribution to the Bonfire Rally, Friday night, by one of UMass's fledgling organizations — Phi Kappa Nu, the University's only spontaneous Greek colony.

Phi Kappa Nu President Gerald Pelligrini.

WHILE THE COFFIN, planted atop the 30 foot pyre, seemed to signify only the fate of the URI football team, it also served to emphasize the work that is being done by the 12 brothers and three pledges toward realizing their goal of becoming a bona-fide fraternity.

Officially recognized by the IFC and the Administration on Apr. 27 of last year, the colony has been beset by various problems: specifically, lack of knowledge on the part of the student body. Gerald Pelligrini, Pres. of PKN, cited a recent example.

The question usually runs like this, "There used to be a colony last year. You guys are still around?" PKN replies, "Yes, we are still around. We plan to be around for quite some time."

THE COLONY has already programmed a visit to the V.A. Hospital in Northampton and to various orphanages in the area, as well as setting up plans for both social and civic events.

Phi Kappa Nu's advisor, graduate student Georgios Pan Piperopolous, feels that the colony's motto sums up the members' individual ideals—"Coming together is the beginning; staying together means progress; working together will bring success."

Bogart... Where The Action Is

An offer is being made in order that students at UMass do not miss the brilliant opportunity to view Humphrey Bogart in the provocative and uncensored version of To Have and Have Not.

Guitar Recording Features Rock n' Roll Dylan Sound

By Nancy Abrams
Feature Staff

Mr. 12 String Guitar (World Pacific 1835 features Glen Campbell and friends playing a style of music that is touted on the album cover to be "folk-rock." The only resemblance to folk music is that guitar and harmonica are heavily emphasized. The sound is pure rock with a few detours into jazz.

NOW THAT THE CLASSIFICATION IS SETTLED, we can say that the album contains twelve enjoyable, toe-tapping instrumentals ably played on electric and unamplified guitars, organs, drums, bass, and harmonica.

There is only one slight fault with the record: the material. Seven of the songs were written by Bob Dylan, who himself admits to paying much more attention to his lyrics than his melodies. Thus Glen and friends have had to think overtime to make interesting instrumentals out of every uninteresting Dylan melody.

THE RESULTS ARE QUITE SUCCESSFUL. If somewhat startling. Any similarity between Glen's arrangements of "All I Really Want to Do" and "Subterranean Homesick Blues" and the Dylan songs we know and love is purely coincidental. The melody of "It Ain't Me Babe" is recognizable, but the happy bouncy tune Glen plays is completely opposite from the somber, bitter original.

The last thing the world needs is another rendition of "Blowin' in the Wind," but Glen provides a pleasing one. The other Dylan songs are "Mr. Tambourine Man," "Like a Rolling Stone," and "I Don't Believe You."

GLEN FARES VERY WELL

with his non-Dylan tunes: Donovan's "Catch the Wind" and "Colours," "Eve of Destruction," "You've Got Your Troubles (I Got Mine)," and "The 'In' Sound," an original by Glen. All in all, Glen and friends overcome the material to create a tasteful package that holds the listener's attention throughout.

The Hershey Company, maker of those candy bars that console students while studying, has announced that, due to the 'glut' on the cocoa market, the size of its candy bars will be increased.

The five-cent bars, that used to weigh seven-eighths of an ounce. The ten-cent bars, weighing in at a mere one and three-fourths ounces will now weigh two full ounces. More calories!

Grouse Like Grapes, Woodcock In Swamp

Here's a tip on grouse hunting from the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Game. Look for grouse near food and water early in the morning or late in the afternoon. Wild apple trees are a good bet; so are wild grape vines and barberry bushes.

Most grouse will be found in brushy areas containing at least one of these sources of food, but near to pines where the birds roost at night; and near brooks, springs or swampy areas. The season opened Oct. 11 and runs through Nov. 30. You can shoot 3 grouse a day, or 15 for the season.

Woodcock are usually found in damp areas such as alder runs that border swamps and brooks, says the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Game. The woodcock season opened Oct. 11, and runs through Nov. 29. It's best to be a slow shooter on woodcock. The birds usually flush very close to the hunter. Small-gauge shotguns with 7½, 8's or 9's in low-base loads are best. You can shoot 5 woodcock a day. Federal regulations require that your shotgun be plugged to hold not more than three shells, but you don't need a federal waterfowl hunting stamp to hunt woodcock. Shooting hours are sunrise to sunset.

WFCR Head At UM

A UMass instructor has been elected chairman of a seven station educational radio network.

Albert L. Hulsen of the University's School of Education was elected network chairman of the Eastern Educational Radio Network at a recent meeting in New York.

HULSEN IS MANAGER of the Four College Radio Station WFCR, jointly sponsored by Amherst, Mount Holyoke, Smith, and UMass. Now he will also manage the seven-station network of affiliates extending as far south as Richmond, Va., and including stations in Washington, D.C., Philadelphia, Pa., and Syracuse, N.Y.

The Eastern Educational Radio Network, including station WFCR, is interconnected for live broadcasts among the Boston, Amherst, and Albany affiliates. Programs are exchanged by tape recording—making the best program material from each station available to member stations.

SPECIAL:

Manager Al Hulsen of the four-college radio station, WFCR, announced today the daily proceedings of the 20th session of the United Nations are broadcast from New York under technical direction of Charles Ferguson of the radio staff.

The morning session, 10:30 to noon, is live. The proceedings are then taped and aired from 1 to 2 p.m. Live coverage resumes at 3 and continues till the day's session adjourns. If speeches are in a foreign language a translation is broadcast.

THE OPERATION IS AN experiment in education radio here and Hulsen added that for the first time 3 stations are sharing in Boston and WMAC in Albany are relaying WFCR's broadcast.

Hulsen cites as advantages to listeners an interesting program and hearing the session in its entirety. In addition, WFCR brings from the United Nations the emotional impact of live operation, as in a recent speech by a Pakistani delegate concerning the war with India. The station is 88.5 on FM radio dials.

Local Viet Rally Supports International Protest Days

By Sandra Falman
News Reporter

Students for a Democratic Society rallied yesterday afternoon in conjunction with the International Days of Protest to end the War in Vietnam. The rally, held at the Amherst Unitarian Church, was preceded by the handing out of literature at several Amherst churches.

Speakers presented various views concerning the War in Vietnam. Dr. David Leonard of A.I.C. college and formerly of the UMass, emphasized the concept of pacifism as the only reasonable direction toward universal peace. As a pacifist, he stated that a new vision of pacifism had opened up before him, and that this vision created new hope for the ill vision of misconstrued and misapplied American democracy.

Reverend Campbell from Putney School in Vermont also attacked America's misuse of its overwhelming power and inability to be consistent in its ideology and policy.

Sidney Finehirsh defended the

S.D.S. stand opposing the War in Vietnam, by stating that the position of America with respect to Vietnam cannot in any way be compared with the position which it took during World War II. The atrocities of World War II were evident; in Vietnam, however, America has presupposed that a threat exists, which has not been clearly defined. In this instance the tactics applied by the United States far exceed the scale of the war which is being waged.

The rally was followed by a silent peace march through Amherst and the UMass campus.

The following policy statement was issued:

"Since the United States assumed its commitment to South Vietnam; in order to support the threat of Communism, it has employed numerous immoral and undemocratic techniques in dealing with the problems in Vietnam. Among these are unceasing use of napalm bombing, indiscriminately dropping bombs upon civilian settlements, overtly supporting a dictatorial government, and the refusal to negotiate with the National Liberation Front and to democratically terminate the war in Vietnam.

It is the belief of persons who have supported and organized this day of Protest in Amherst that American policy is contrary to all ideals of humanitarian democracy and that the war in Vietnam is unjustly being waged primarily as an economic endeavor by the United States without the interests of the Vietnamese in mind."

"Bitch-In On the Multiversity" Hears Complaints of Students

The University of Colorado's "bitch-in" last week (Oct. 7) drew 2,800 students who didn't want to be "folded, spindled, or mutilated."

The planned "Bitch-In On the Multiversity," which had received administrative support down to coffee and donuts, directed student complaint toward the "proper channels."

Of the 2,800 students present when the event got under way at 10 p.m., only about 200 stragglers remained until 4 a.m. when the last "bitcher" had his say.

At certain points throughout the evening, the affair threatened to turn into a circus, with effect measured more in terms of oratorical adeptness than actual complaints. Reason, or the word most frequently heard throughout the evening, "responsibility," was quickly restored by a hardcore group of 50 "student leaders."

According to this group, the purpose of the entire evening was to find out if student opinion existed on questions of educational reform, academic freedom, and administrative control, as they felt it did. They were searching, essentially, for a "mandate for action."

They dismissed all critics who felt the evening was an administrative plot to try and level off student protest by giving it a vocal "letting-off-of-steam."

Outside the ballroom where the "bitch-in" was held, students milled about, most of them trying to think of a "bitch" they might air. One small brunette from California walked back and forth wrapped in red ribbon with a sign on her back stating "I protest the red tape at the University of Colorado."

The loudest "bitches" of the entire evening came from the night crew of janitors, who are used to having the Memorial Center locked at 11 p.m. They complained to each other loudly of those "complaining students" — "All that's going to come of this will be coffee stains and cigarette butts on the floor," one janitor said. "I didn't even intend to have to mop that place."

Language Lab Offers Unique Speech Services

By Pamela Metaxas
News Staff

"You may read but you are never aware of your own speech imperfections until you use the language lab," according to Hans Fritesch, electronics technician at the Bartlett language lab.

Fritesch emphasizes the importance of labs for students in their supplementing classroom drills. Laboratory work gives students the opportunity to use a foreign language. No matter how good the class and instructor may be, the student does not have the opportunity to speak and be heard. The lab offers this opportunity, he explains.

Tapes are offered in French, Spanish, Italian, German, Portuguese, Japanese, Chinese, Russian and Greek. Commercially produced, most tapes are recorded on a master tape for storage. This guarantees an extra tape should the original split.

DR. HAROLD SMITH is the lab director and also a member of the faculty. Another official is James Butler, lab supervisor. Butler and Fritesch are at Bartlett daily, working the master controls, checking students' pronunciation and solving any unexpected problems.

French is the most popular language, said Fritesch—Spanish, German and Italian following closely. The other language tapes are seldom used in comparison with the Romance languages.

FOR THE NEW LANGUAGE LAB enrollee, explained Fritesch, the first step is being assigned a time and a seat. Each student then sees a 21-minute instruction film. In this the student is shown that each booth is equipped with a tape recorder and the student's own tape. He learns to connect his booth to the central operating room where the master tape is running for each class section. He records the exercise from the master tape on to his tape and thus makes a "combination" tape.

On the language tape there is usually a dialogue with pauses for the student to repeat. In other words, the student "is taught to respond to the tapes that are closely co-ordinated with the course," Fritesch said. The student's tape becomes his "textbook" for the lab. He records on it, erases, speaks and just listens.

BARTLETT HAS three rooms that seat 80. Each room has 20 to 30 closed-in booths equipped with earphones. Being planned is a separate building near Bartlett with rooms to seat more than 200 in the lab.

Fritesch believes that learning lies learning a language by records without the benefit of classroom work is "a poor way of doing it". Not only does he (the student) miss individual attention but he has no way of hearing himself speak without a language lab, said the veteran technician.

"WE ALL HAVE OUR opinions of our voices and the first time you hear your voice in your own native language, you are surprised," declared Fritesch. This makes laboratory work for a foreign language rather necessary since the student will be surprised by the sound and diction and needs to compare it with a native's speaking—in this case, a tape in the language lab.

Friends Workers Needed

James Howard, New England director of the college program for the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC), will be at the University on Thursday, Oct. 28, to meet with students interested in learning about the work and service activities of the Friends.

Razorbacks Beat Texas To Gain National Lead

By Al Rice

SEVERAL MILLION people watched as a new national leader emerged in the college football picture this past weekend. A contest between the top foes in a conference race is to be expected every so often, but when the game decides the number one position in the nation it's an unusual event.

One of these rare events took place this past weekend in Fayetteville, Arkansas where the Texas Longhorns relinquished their national rating to the Arkansas Razorbacks. Arkansas scored a touchdown with a minute and 32 seconds left to hand the Longhorns a 27-24 beating in the TV game of the week. Jon Brittenum scored to give Arkansas the lead after Texas had a 24-20 lead late in the game. Arkansas led all the way until Marv Kristinik scored two of the three Texas scores to give them their short lived lead.

MEANWHILE, NEBRASKA moved from fourth to second in the nation in scoring and remained second in the team ratings by clobbering their Big 8 rival at Iowa State 41-0 with three touchdowns in the second quarter and two more in the fourth. Charlie Winters and Pete Tatman, new names in the roster of the Cornhuskers' fireballs, each scored a pair of TD's.

For most of the other national leaders, things didn't go to well. West Virginia, Duke, Stanford, Texas Western, Georgia, and Mississippi State had their unbeaten records shattered. For Duke and Stanford it was doubly serious since they both fell in conference play to their toughest competitor for their respective league titles.

NUMBER FOUR RANKED Georgia traveled to Tallahassee to get beaten 10-3 by Florida State, last year's Gator Bowl champs. The Seminoles had a losing 1-2 record but they scored a fourth period touchdown and a field goal. It was enough to wipe out a three point advantage for Vince Dooley's amazing Georgia Bulldogs. The loss drops them from their high national position, but they still hold the edge in their Southeastern Conference race.

MICHIGAN STATE MOVED into the number three position with a Big Ten rout over Ohio State 32-7, with Clinton Jones scoring two of the several MSU touchdowns, one on an 80 yard run. Purdue also kept up their Big Ten fight by dumping last year's champs at Michigan, 17-15 with a field goal by Bob Gries being the key play. The field goal came with 55 seconds left after he had already accounted for two touchdowns passes in the third period.

CLEMSON TOOK a commanding lead in the Atlantic Coast Conference title run by providing Duke with a 3-2 loss, its first of the year. The number six ranked Blue Devils gave up a 31 yard field goal to Frank Pierce and all they scored was a safety on a blocked punt. Joey Branton recovered two of the six fumbles that cost Duke the game and tripped them up in the ratings.

The two biggest shockers hit Mississippi State and West Virginia, seventh and 16th respectively. Memphis State gave Miss. St. its first loss and it was a beauty. The Tigers of Memphis won their first in a 33-13 plastering that quarterback Billy Fletcher and end Bob Sherlag monopolized. Sherlag scored with three passes from Fletcher who scored one himself as well as kicking two field goals and three extra points. West Virginia not only had their string broken but they were thoroughly embarrassed as well.

The Mountaineers had been a high power offensive unit all season with only a questionable defense. Virginia shut out their offense in a 41-0 win and made their defense look horrible with three TD's in the third period in the Cavaliers third win of the year against two losses.

THE BIG GAME on the Pacific coast was number nine Southern California against 18th rated Stanford, both with 3-0-1 marks. The game went three periods scoreless, but Mike Garrett's 77 yard touchdown broke the ice and USC added one to the Rose Bowl that hinges more for a 14-0 win and a trip only on a win over U.C.L.A. next month.

Garrett, almost a sure thing for the 1965 Heisman Trophy, entered the game with the national rushing lead at 647 yards and 42 points.

SOME OF the leading teams in the country got tied this past weekend. The most important were the Missouri-UCLA 14 point affair and the Alabama 7 Tennessee 7 contest in Birmingham.

Big Fourth Quarter Gives Redmen Romp Over Rams

By M. L. Gould

A huge homecoming throng had its wish fulfilled Saturday as the UMass Redmen rolled over the Rhode Island Rams 30-0.

THE FINAL score does not indicate the true pattern of the game. Not until the final minutes of the third quarter, when Dick Qualey recovered the third fumble of the game to set up a Bob Detore touchdown, could the Redmen be assured of victory.

The Redmen won the opening toss and elected to take the wind, strategy which Buffalo used so successfully in its victory over UMass. The Redmen were not so successful.

WITH QUATERBACK Paul Bricoccoli passing with the accuracy of a John Unitas and sophomore end Frank Geiselman receiving like Ray Berry, the Rams drove straight down the field at the outset. Utilizing the strong running of Wayne Zdanowicz, a third down interference penalty, and the remarkable moves and hands of end Geiselman, URI moved to the UMass 21 yard line before being stopped on downs. The Rams never got closer to the Redmen goal line in the game.

THE UMass OFFENSIVE unit was itching to get its chance to show off, with Greg Landry hitting Bob Meers and Phil Vandersea on first down passes, the Redmen moved to the RI 28. Here they ran out of downs, and a field goal attempt was ruined by a high pass from center.

THE REDMEN GOT a big break in the second quarter when Qualey made his first fumble recovery of the game on the RI 21. An offensive holding penalty was followed by an unsuccessful Morin field goal attempt from the 40 yard line.

After an exchange of fumbles, the Redmen took over at their 44. Following a first down at the RI 40, Landry made the play of the day. Greg faked Vandersea into the line, found a hole off tackle and outran everybody until he was angled out of bounds at the Ram 9 yard line. It took four plays to score; Landry sneaked across from the one. Morin's kick made it 7-0, the score at halftime.

The Redmen made another bid to score as the second half began, driving inside the Ram 10. Here linebacker Gerry Dusanenko made the saving play for URI, breaking through to nail Vandersea for a loss on fourth and one.

MILT MORIN gave the Redmen a big lift and a 10-0 lead, with a 30 yard field goal late in the third quarter. Qualey followed with his big fumble recovery at

Sports Car Club

A sports car rally be held during spring review this year in an effort to find out which sport is the most popular.

The University of Massachusetts Sports Car Club will open its season Nov. 7, with a co-rally.

Open to residents of the Four College Area, this rally will be a simplified course in order that inexperienced drivers can gain practice for more difficult rallies later in the academic year.

A pre-rally meeting will be held on Thursday, October 21, at 7 p.m. in the S.U. Norfolk Rm.

The rally route will be approximately 100 miles long. Competition will be based upon optimum time and not speed over the course.

Special attention will be paid to introducing the skills inherent to rallying. A small fee will be charged to cover the costs of the rally and the trophies.

Three types of membership are available: regular membership is available to all members of the undergraduate University

Intramural Report

By Dave Jarnes

THURSDAY NIGHT'S action was highlighted by the Hampshire Hardnoses upset of the highly-touted Courtesy Taxi club 26-12. The Hardnoses lived up to their name on defense by checking the mighty Taxi's offense, which previously had been averaging 33 points per game. By virtue of their win, the Hardnoses climbed ahead of the Taxis into first place in the American League.

TWO CLOSE independent games saw the Chem Club edge the Land Architecture club 13-12 and the Innkeepers nip the Buggers 19-12.

The Mills Cherrys suffered their first setback of the current campaign 18-6 at the hands of the Wheeler Trojans. Sanborn was a one-man wrecking crew, scoring all of the victor's points.

With the Cherry's losses, the Plymouth Patriots were able to move into sole possession of first place in the dorm west league, but not before the Middlesex Redmen put up a valiant effort in going down to a 25-19 defeat. Lynch's passing (16-32) and Leland's pass-catching (8 receptions, 3 for TD's) were all the Pats needed.

AFTER being edged 21-20 by the Mills Birch, the hard-luck Brett Slippery Elms are still chasing their first victory. The Elms were unable to hold on to a 14-6 halftime advantage.

The comebacking Chadbourne Eagles won handily over the Middlesex Braves 34-12. Since Jim Dennis has taken over at quarterback the Eagles have scored two impressive victories.

INJURY STRUCK and outmanned, the Greenough Grants valiantly battled the mighty Chadbourne Maroons to a 6-6 halftime deadlock. However, the power of the Maroons showed in the second half as they ran up a 33-6 score. Bruce Tichenor sparked in a losing effort.

LEAGUE-LEADING receiver Bill Thomas had another fantastic night with 13 receptions, but it wasn't enough as the Bruins scored all their points in the second half in their 18-0 whitewashing of the Greenough Garfields. In a battle of two evenly matched teams the Baker Buffaloes withstood a late rally to hold on to a 22-19 decision over the Baker Barracudas.

The offensive-minded Grayson Flaming A's, sparked by Brown's passing (17-29 and 4 TD's), maintained their clean slate by virtue of their 33-21 triumph over the Grayson Phallies. Meanwhile, the Grayson Aces kept pace with the Flaming A's by romping 35-0 over the Webster Hawks.

The Webster Rams scored their second win of the season with a 13-0 shutout of the Thatcher Hemlocks.

THE FRATERNITIES initiated the lacrosse league Thursday. ASP rolled over ZN 12-2 as Jay Stewart had a field day in scoring 7 goals. TC blanked TKE 4-0 and despite Sinclair's five goals TEP tipped LCA 8-5 in a closely fought contest.

NOW THE RAMS were desperate, and the Redmen were hungry for more. A fierce rush led to an errant Broccoccoli pass which Dave Kelley picked off at the URI 30. Dick Lewis took charge from there, moving seventeen yards on a swing pass and scoring on a nine yard end sweep. Morin's kick was wide, and UMass led 23-0.

DICK BENOIT concluded a banner day for the Redmen with a short plunge for a touchdown, culminating a fifty yard drive.

The 30-0 score marked the third shutout in a row for UMass over URI. The Redmen have outscored the Rams 195-24 since 1960.

Review

Homecoming Concert

By Peter Hendrickson

"We don't have the mass appeal of Peter, Paul and Mary but we've found our singing has a universal appeal since we are not tied to the barrier of words," Ward Swingle mused.

Words were unnecessary with the smiles that broke when the Swingle Singers finished yesterday afternoon's Homecoming Concert in Curry Hicks Cage to a near capacity house of sun-struck, bloodshot weekenders. "Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star" tied the performance together. Familiarity breeds respect.

The French Octet singers are truly vocal magicians under the lightning quick direction of Ward Swingle, an American turned Parisian. The crowd acknowledged his skill in blending the beautiful voices of two contraltos, sopranos, basses and tenors. Swingle jazzed-up the works of Bach, Beethoven, Vivaldi and other classical composers with the aid of a bass and drums.

"The idea is to replace the instruments of the composers with voices," he said. He conducted a demonstration with a number from a Bach suite in D Minor.

Perhaps the most outstanding soloist of the tightly knit group was the lead soprano who sang from her heart with a tremendous smile that reached to the back of the cage. She was particularly touching in a Bach symphonia and delivered like Judy Garland at her best.

THE TOTAL IMPRESSION of the concert was one of precise, staccato and happy sounds. One Chopin piece featured the two stunning contraltos who conveyed the image of tremendously talented women singing over the telephone in an up-tempo race.

The group sings with the fanatical passion of a finely honed team with little room for improvisation, except as is written into the unique arrangements of the classical gems.

The bass and the drums are "the ninth and tenth voices of the group," according to Swingle.

Barbarians Go Ape: Wild and Wooly

By Joe Zalkind

The Barbarians, a strange-looking group whose long-haired appearances exceeded wildest imaginations, but whose music surpassed the greatest expectations, made their first personal showing at the University of Massachusetts Saturday night.

The band, whose music and lyrics are as wild and wooly as their hair, kept the large student crowd swinging and shaking.

Although on stage they give the initial impression of being four hoods, they are actually friendly, intelligent and down-to-earth young men.

In fact, guitarist Bruce Benson was accepted at UMass and would have been a sophomore except for his interest in music. When asked what they thought of people who laugh at them because of their looks, they simply replied, "We laugh back all the way down to the bank".

The Barbarians will soon release a single and album, "What the New Breed Say". From the reaction of students at the concert, when this song was played, it looks as if they'll have few worries finding a new hit to follow best-seller, "Are You a Boy, or Are You a Girl?".

we can't claim any one listening segment but seem to catch on with portions of many groups," he said.

They caught on in the cage yesterday and will be on tour in the U.S. until New Year's with Thanksgiving and Christmas appearances at the Village Gate in New York City.

By Joe Zalkind

Casual is the word, casual and cool and swinging; that's the best way to describe those two rhythmic young gentlemen, Eddie Brown and Joe Gilbert, whose musical talents many were fortunate enough to witness Sunday in the Cage. Popularly known as Joe and Eddie, the duo's repertoire of music, a mixture of gospel, blues, and jazz and a little rock n' roll, provided a splendid afternoon of entertainment. Smoothly changing moods from melancholy to gay and from slow to fast, they had the audience completely enthralled by the end of the performance.

Eddie was born in Virginia and Joe in New Orleans, but both of them moved to Berkeley, Calif., in their early teens, where they met and began their successful careers. Their knowledge of music is infinite, including even a brief background in classical music, but their uninhibited personalities are more adapted to the faster, more spirited style of singing.

After the concert Joe and Eddie had a few minutes to relax and talk about their philosophy of music. "One can do great things, very creative things with music," they said.

Few people do more creative things with music than those two.

1965 SWAP to Explore Activities Problems

Dr. Robert Stanfield, assistant professor of sociology, and Dr. Mark Noffsinger, Coordinator of Student Activities, will be the guest speakers at the 1965 SWAP Conference.

Dr. Stanfield will address the conference representatives and faculty guests on Friday night. Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., Dr. Stanfield attended the City College of New York where he received his B.A. in philosophy. In 1961, he received his A.M. from Harvard University, and in 1963 his Ph.D. again from Harvard, doing his doctoral dissertation on juvenile delinquency.

Dr. Stanfield came to the University of Massachusetts in 1963. He is presently engaged with Prof. Henry Schumer of the Psychology Department in a research project, supported by the U.S. Office of Education, on student culture. Dr. Stanfield's speech is an extension of Thoreau's view that students "should not play life, or study it merely, . . . but earnestly live it from beginning to end."

Dr. Noffsinger, who will address the Greeks Saturday morning received his B.A. in English and his M.A. in public administration from the University of Toledo, Ohio. He was awarded his Ph.D. from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Before coming to UMass, Dr. Noffsinger held the posts of Assistant Director of Housing, Coordinator of Counseling, and Assistant Dean of Men at the University of Michigan. He came to UMass in 1964 and assumed the post of Coordinator of Student Activities and Student Union Director.

The title of Dr. Noffsinger's address is "Who's Listening?". In this speech, he will consider the need for Greeks to accept the fact that they are and will continue to be a minority group on campus; that is an asset to their system; and that they must look within the organization to find the means for renewing it.

The schedule for the weekend is the following.

Friday, October 22:

5 p.m. — Departure — Student Union
7 p.m. — Dinner; Speaker — Dr. Stanfield

Saturday, October 23:

10 a.m. — Discussion Group Meetings
12:30 p.m. — Luncheon; Introduction of Key Faculty Members

Blood Drive Recruiters Last Meeting Tomorrow

The last Blood Drive recruiters' meeting before the actual registration of donors will be held tomorrow at 11:15 a.m. in the Student Union Council Chambers. A last minute briefing will be given and recruiting material will be distributed.

Next week recruiters will approach individual students in every residence hall seeking volunteer donors for the blood drive.

Anyone in normal health over 18 years of age is eligible to give blood. Students under 21 must have parent's permission on a form which will be sent out to parents of those students who are under 21 and wish to give blood.

It is the time lag involved in securing parents' permission which makes registration several weeks before the actual donation necessary.

"Kiss Me Kate" to Open Operetta Guild Season

The UMass Operetta Guild will open its 19th season this month with Kiss Me Kate, a classic musical that combines elements of Cole Porter and William Shakespeare.

The Broadway perennial will be given in Bowker Aud. on two weekends—Fri. and Sat., Oct. 22 and 23 and Thur., Fri. and Sat., Oct. 28, 29 and 30.

The musical uses Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew in "play within a play" style to provide a setting for a modern show business story complicated by gamblers, gangsters and backstage romance.

Some of Porter's most popular hits are in the musical, including the waltz song "Wunderbar," the sophisticated "Always True to You in My Fashion," and the haunting "Were Thine That Special Face."

The play is directed by Joel J. Friedman with choreography by Marolyn Patton, assisted by Sharon Moser. Paul Bartsch is musical director.

The role of Kate will be played by Patricia Kelley of Lexington. Playing opposite her as Broadway producer Bill Graham will be David Kidd of Pittsfield. In the secondary lead parts are Kelly Swartz of Marblehead as Lois and Ray Poole of West Springfield as Bill.

Dr. Politella to Speak at San Francisco Conference

A University of Massachusetts professor will lead one of a series of panel discussions this week at the National Council of College Publications Advisers convention in San Francisco.

Dr. Dario Politella, associate professor of English and journalistic studies and coordinator of student publications at UMass, will be chairman of a panel that will discuss "Freedom of the College Press."

The three-day convention will begin at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel in San Francisco this Thursday, Oct. 21. Advisers will meet in conjunction with the Associated Collegiate Press, a national organization of collegiate publications editors and staff members.

A graduate of the University of Massachusetts in 1947, Dr. Politella received his masters and Ph.D. degrees from Syracuse University.

He assumed his new duties at UMass this September. His professional journalism experience includes service with the Geneva (N.Y.) Daily Times, the Boston Herald and the Lawrence Evening Tribune. He has worked in press relations capacities with private firms, and has taught journalism at Kent University in Ohio, Syracuse University and at Ball State University in Indiana.

UMass will also be represented by members of the Massachusetts Collegian and Index.

Collegian delegates, who will be taking courses in newspaper publication, editorial and business activities, are Paul Rodman, Business Manager; Steve Gordon, Advertising Manager; and Ellen Levine, News Editor.

Editor-in-chief, John Lawrence and Photography Editor Ray Crean of the Index will be taking part in conference activities that deal with yearbook publication.

UMass Initiates Summer Study Program in Italy

UMass will initiate a summer program of studies in art, literature, history and political science in Bologna, Italy, next year, it was announced by Dr. Oswald Tippo, University provost.

To be called the UMass Summer School in Bologna, the 7-week program will take advantage of Bologna's location in the heart of Renaissance Italy to offer college credit courses in Italian Renaissance art, history of the Renaissance, romantic poets in Italy and European political and economic integration.

Next summer's pilot program is open to a limited group, with the deadline for enrollment Dec. 15 of this year. Any student, graduate or undergraduate, in good standing may apply, according to Prof. Howard H. Quint, director of the program.

Classes will be taught in English by UMass faculty. Students must take two courses and will be granted 6 hours of University academic credit upon successful completion of both courses. Also offered will be a non-credit optional course in conversational Italian.

The summer school will be housed in the modern facilities of the Bologna Center of the John Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies. All facilities of the center, including an air conditioned library, will be available to the UMass group.

The center is surrounded by the buildings of the Univ. of Bologna, olders such institution in the western world, and is a 10-minute walk from the historic main square of the city.

The summer school will begin June 23 and end Aug. 18. Total cost per student will be approximately $800. This will include round trip jet fare, tuition, health and library fees, travel and lodging on field trips, and room rent at the Johns Hopkins Center, where students will be lodged in furnished apartments, 4 to an apartment.

Faculty members will include Dr. Howard O. Brogan, Commonwealth head of the UM English Dept., who will teach romantic poets in Italy; Prof. Paul F. Norton, head of the UM art Dept., Renaissance art; and Assoc. Prof. Vincent Ilardi of the history Dept., Renaissance history.

Supplementing the classroom work will be field trips to nearby cultural centers—Pisa, Siena, Florence, Ravenna, Milan, Verona, Vicenza, Padova and others. A 3-day visit to Rome will take place midway in the session.

Information may be obtained from Prof. Quint, 352 Bartlett Hall. Applications must be returned by Dec. 15, with a $150 registration fee.

Mass. Head of YR to Speak

As part of its program of distinguished speakers for the 1965-66 academic year, the Young Republican Club announces that John Brandt, president of the Massachusetts Young Republican Assoc., will speak to the group this Thursday evening at 8 p.m. in the Middlesex Room, S.U.

Brandt, who attends a Boston law school, will speak on "Republicans, Power, and the Student Elite". The topic was inspired by Vice-President Humphrey's recent comment to the students at the University of Wisconsin: "The right to be heard does not imply the right to be taken seriously."

The meeting is open to the entire student body.

New England fall foliage colors are a new experience for Karen Lefton of South Florida University, far left, and Sally Wafford of the University of New Mexico, far right, attending UMass this semester under a teacher education exchange program. In center is Pam Kneeland, UMass senior from Somerville, who attended the University of New Mexico last year under the same program. In its fourth year at UMass, the exchange system is designed to offset provincialism in elementary education and promote better understanding of sectional problems among teacher trainees.

Index Asks Seniors To Arrange Photos

Each year, the University yearbook, Index, seeks to improve upon the preceding year's edition. In keeping with this goal, every attempt is made to increase the percentage of seniors who have their pictures included in the senior pages. This can only be accomplished with the cooperation of the individual members of the senior class.

Thus far, nearly 400 seniors of approximately 1700 have failed to arrange an appointment to be photographed. It is necessary that all seniors intending to be photographed make an appointment.

The Index staff has set aside two weeks, Oct. 25 to Nov. 5, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day, for pictures to be taken. Seniors have been reminded to stop into the Index office to make appointments during these two weeks.

Since there are only a few days left, Index editors hope that some of the remaining 400 would prefer having their pictures in the yearbook to simply having their names entered on one of the last pages, and that these people will make an effort to sign up for a sitting.

By popular demand the Senior Section of the 1965-66 Index will return to the system of listing

Frosh Ball to be "Monster Mash"

This year's freshman ball is going to be a little different. To tie in with Halloween, the ball has been dubbed The Monster Mash (a graveyard smash for freshmen). So, actually, it isn't a ball at all. Rather, it's a crazy, spooky dance featuring The Dynamics.

Sponsored by the Revelers, The Monster Mash will be held in the Student Union ballroom on Saturday, Oct. 30, from 8:00-12:30. The admission price is $1.00 per person.

'Utopian Thought' At Amherst Coll.

Prof. B. F. Skinner of Harvard University, a leading behavioral psychologist, and Paul Goodman, writer and critic, will be among the speakers in a student-sponsored series of lectures at Amherst College dealing with "Utopian Thought in America."

Professor Skinner, the first speaker invited by FORUM, the student lecture committee, will discuss "Planning Experimental Communities" tomorrow at 8 p.m. in Johnson Chapel. Skinner, the Edgar Pierce Professor of Psychology at Harvard and author of several books including Science and Human Behavior and Walden II, will explain the role of behavioral conditioning in the establishment of a utopian community and discuss the place such a community might have in a future American civilization.

PAUL GOODMAN, author of such controversial works as Growing Up Absurd, Communities, and most recently People or Personnel, is a leading advocate of academic freedom and a frequent visitor to college campuses. His lecture "Old Values—New Utopia," on October 27 will deal with the problem of adapting traditional American values to the formation of any kind of future "perfect" society on this continent.

IN EXPLAINING the reasons for FORUM's selection of "Utopian Thought in America" as the theme for this year's first student-sponsored lecture series, Michael Gallant '66, FORUM president, said, "These four speakers vary greatly in their assumptions about human nature. The real question, posed in the context of American civilization and values, is how to build the best possible communities for the greatest number of people—how to make the most out of what we have."

All three events are open to the public without charge.

Railroad Bell Stolen

UMass and Amherst town officials are investigating the disappearance of a 300-pound railroad engine bell which was apparently stolen from a barn roof on Fearing St. over the weekend.

The bell, which was fastened to a large iron base eight or ten feet from the ground, was reported missing to UMass police Sunday by the owner, Mrs. Frank B. Welcome.

Campus police and the Dean of Men's office both say that the case is "being investigated".

Amherst College officials say that they know nothing about the disappearance.

According to UMass and town of Amherst police, the Welcome family has never reported any trouble with UMass students.

Welcome, say UMass police, is "contemplating" a reward for the return of the bell, which was bought at a Billerica railroad sale many years ago.

The bell has the number 651 stamped on it.

Registry May Issue New Initial Plates

A new system of issuing so-called vanity or distinctive initial registration plates, which would yield an estimated one million dollars in new revenue, was initially approved by the House, after a series of amendments were rejected during a lengthy debate.

The bill, proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee, would authorize the registrar of motor vehicles to establish standards for reflectorized registration plates issued to Mass. motorists, and provide for extra fees for the issuance of special plates.

The Registry would be authorized to issue distinctive initial plates, containing not more than six letters or a combination of six letters and numbers, at a fee of nine dollars in addition to the registration fee of six dollars.

The so-called reserve plates, other than the distinctive initial plates, would be issued at an extra fee of two dollars.

Rep. Janet K. Starr (R-Belmont) offered an amendment to increase the fee for reserved plates to nine dollars—the same fee to be charged for the initial plates. But that was rejected by a rising vote of 26 to 42.

A second amendment was proposed by Rep. John J. Long (D-Fall River), who suggested that the extra two dollar fee for reserve plates be deleted from the bill, but that was defeated by a roll call vote of 57 to 156.

Rep. William Q. MacLean (D-Fairhaven), who argued against the Long amendment, stated that the additional two dollar fee for reserve plates would yield an estimated $400,000, with another $500,000 produced by the nine dollar fee for initial plates.

An amendment was offered by Rep. William M. Bulger (D-Boston) to delete the section providing for reflectorized plates.

He said the Walpole prison workshop, where the plates are made, is not set up to handle this type of operation. The amendment was rejected, after it was noted these plates would not be issued until 1967.

Election - 1965 - The Candidates Speak

President

James Harrigan

It is indeed a great honor and privilege to run for the office of President of the class of '69. I feel that I am fully qualified for this office, having served as a class officer for four years in high school.

As President of the class of '69, I shall strive to promote the unity of spirit and purpose, strive to promote the unity of spirit and purpose which should prevail in a class of this size. I shall lead our class wisely, pledging myself to those gentlemanly standards of life and conduct consistent with the high ideals and purposes of this University. I shall devote my entire self to the responsibility of assisting and encouraging my fellow classmates, both individually and as a whole.

It is your duty as a student to accept the responsibility of electing the officers of your class. Show your interest in our class by voting for me, Thursday, at the Student Union.

James Harrigan

William King

What is a class president? He should be an officer who represents the class, hears its demands, and does something about them. The sooner everyone realizes this the better prepared they will be to make an intelligent selection.

"Campaign Promises" are anachronisms; they belong to the red-faced leather-junged politicians of the past, as do foolproof solutions to various issues. In fact, the only real issue with which the freshman class should concern itself is its lack of unity. There is a solution to this problem—a leader who can communicate with his classmates and promote unity among twenty-seven hundred strangers.

Before taking stands on other issues, the President and his class officers should strive to establish active communications between themselves and the class they represent. If you wish this type of representation, then I, William King, am your man, and I urge you to vote for me.

William King

Gary D. LaBeau

I come before you not as a professional politician, savior, or glory-hunter. I stand before you as a sincere candidate for the presidency of our class, a candidate who above all is willing to work for the good of the entire class, not for the selfish motives of a few. Our class is a good and promising one, it can and should be a great one. But no glory-hunter or professional politician can make it great. A dedicated, working president who will lead and direct the energies and talents within our class, will establish our class as truly great.

Gary D. Le Beau

Wayne Thomas

I believe it is the role of the president in any democratic organization to be responsible to the people directly through the people's representatives. I therefore propose to have a dorm representative for each dorm to whom you may go with any problems or requests. This representative would serve as a sounding board for your comments and opinions concerning my actions as your president, if elected. In coordination with this idea, I would hold informal discussions in each complex; meeting in a different complex once a week. It would then be possible to see each interested person at least once a month, private talks notwithstanding.

I've told you what I plan to do with you, if elected. I say with you, because we must be united and all work together toward the betterment of our class and our position on campus.

Wayne Thomas

Vice-President

John Allan

On Thursday, October 21 you will be asked to vote in a primary election for five seemingly unimportant candidates. However, the five people you elect will be your only voice in Senate government at the University. Remember, both the primary and final elections on October 21, and October 28, are extremely important.

Vote John Allan for Vice-President.

John Allan

John Cushing

I am presently Chairman of Publicity on the Students Activities Committee in the Orchard Hill Residential College. As chairman, I have proved my eagerness to become actively involved in student affairs. As Vice-President, I want to work with the Class of '69—for the Class of '69. I can and will do the job.

John Cushing

Michael Davis

My campaign position is extremely simple. I, Michael Davis wish to take an active role in student government by representing the Freshman Class as Vice-President. I am a government major who participated vigorously in several offices and positions of leadership in high school. I desire to continue this privilege here at the University of Massachusetts. I know I can ably fulfill the obligations and duties of this office. I promise, if elected, to carry out the responsibilities of the Vice-Presidency to the best of my ability and to live up to the high standards of honesty and hard work which have been established by past Freshman Class Vice-Presidents. If I come up to your standards as a potential class representative I would consider myself honored and privileged to serve you as Vice-President of the Freshman Class.

Michael Davis

Douglas Green

I am seeking election for the office of Vice-President because I feel that I am well qualified for this position and that I will be able to represent you best. I have had experience in student government affairs in high school and outside organizations.

Please give me your support on Thursday, as I am anxious to serve you in this capacity.

Douglas Green

Edward H. Rubin

As a candidate for Vice President of the Class of 1969, I would like to present my beliefs. It is very important that the Vice President work hand in hand with the President in order to carry out a smooth flowing student government. Through this we can unify the Class of '69 and thoroughly represent its views and opinions in a manner worthy of the class. Vote for Edward A. Rubin—Vice President—Class of 1969.

Wilkie Ward

Each year the incoming freshman class is exposed to a rampage of posters, signs and campaign devices. If the freshman takes the time to vote, he proceeds to make his choice on the basis of the most widely publicized names. Enthusiasm may show much interest on the candidate's part but it does not necessarily produce the better class officer. This has been proven in the past and has established many unharmonious freshman executive councils. My plea is addressed to the class of '69 to get out and meet your candidates.

Wilkie Ward

Secretary

Martha Curran

Primary and final elections for freshman class officers will be held on October 21 and 28, respectively. You will cast your votes for five candidates who will be your voice in student government. These positions are important, and every vote counts toward the unification of the class.

Vote Martha Curran, Secretary.

Martha Curran

Vote in Tomorrow's Elections

Debbie Nicholls

Thursday you will be going to the polls for primary class elections. Undoubtedly you are not familiar with all of the candidates, so I want to tell you a little about Maggie Frey, who is running for your class secretary. Maggie has had experience in this field as she has been class president, class secretary and CYO secretary, among other things, during her high school years. But these are not her only qualifications. Maggie has plenty of school and class spirit. Enthusiasm means a great deal if you want active class officers and an active class. Maggie will represent us well, I'm sure, with her outgoing and sincere personality. She is my choice for class secretary and I hope she will be yours.

Debbie Nicholls

Scottie Terrier

Being a member of the freshman class I have entered my name as a candidate for Secretary. I believe that I am qualified for this position since I was secretary of my graduating class in high school last year. Also I was on the newspaper and was coordinator for the year book. However, one has to realize that a candidate, besides having good qualifications, must have a class spirit which I believe has much to be desired in this freshman class. Please give me your vote of confidence on Oct. 21. Thank you.

Scottie Terrier

Treasurer

Dick Coyle

The duties of treasurer include recording class revenue and expenses according to proper Recognized Student Organizations procedures, maximizing revenue and minimizing expense, and adding spirit and leadership to class functions. My qualifications include previous experience in student government, a familiarity with proper R.S.O. financial procedure, a familiarity with the Student Union facilities available for class functions and a desire to serve the class of '69.

Dick Coyle

Judy Leach

My name is Judy Leach, and I am running for treasurer of the class of '69. Because I was treasurer of my high school class for 4 years, I feel that I am well-qualified for the office. If I were elected, I would do my best to keep accurate accounts and to act in the best interests of the class.

I realize that most of you do not know me. It will be difficult placing your confidence in just a name that you have seen on signs. And because my name is Leach (Leech), people tell me that it might be even harder! But as much as I have tried, I just have not met all of my 2,699 classmates.

I can only ask you to trust me when I say that I know that I could handle the big responsibility of treasurer of the Freshman Class. When you vote at the Student Union this Thursday, please remember me—JUDY LEACH. Thank you.

Judy Leach

Senator at Large

Robert Grant

The office of Senator at Large is perhaps the most important of all the offices in this election. The senator represents his constituency in the Student Senate, which is the student governing body of the entire university. It is necessary for a senator to be an effective speaker, a quick thinker, and a parliamentarian. I believe I can fulfill these qualifications. Also, as your representative, I will always be willing to hear any suggestions or ideas you may have.

Robert Grant

Laurence R. Marcus

On the university level, as well as the national level, the office of senator commands much respect. The senator virtually controls all of the student tax money and the student activities on campus. He makes the laws that govern his constituents. He, therefore, must be a capable man.

I believe, I am qualified for the position in that I have been twice elected a class officer, four times elected a student councilor, and twice elected president of student organizations.

As your senator-at-large, I would act as a liaison between the senate and the class officers, as well as between the senate and the Freshman Class. I can not promise you the world; I can not promise you this University; but I can promise you an effective voice, and that is the next best thing.

Laurence R. Marcus

Theater--goers Have Fun, Culture

The University movie-goers have just been treated, at the Amherst Cinema this weekend, to what has been called a "frantic, far-out farce and free-wheeling romance" — What's New Pussycat?.

Starring Peter Sellers, Peter O'Toole, Woody Allen and a host of others, the film's main college attraction was the James Bond - famous Ursula Andress. The story's main plot is, simply, the story of a young man (O'Toole) who just can't get enough female company. His company, and his company's company, provide the comedy that sustains the rest of the film.

Perhaps of more importance to serious and cultural movie-philes, is the presentation this Wednesday and Thursday night of the world famous La Scala's, La Boheme, by Giacomo Puccini. The story, accompanied by music hailed as "some of the most beautiful music ever composed", is of young lovers in the Latin Quarter of Paris in the 1830's.

Setting another cultural date, the Cinema will be presenting, Oct. 13-14, An Evening with The Royal Ballet. Presenting Les Sylphides, Le Corsaire, La Valse and Aurora's Wedding, the ballet will star Margot Fonteyn, Rudolph Nureyev, and David Blair.

Advisors--from "great" to "terrible"

by Gerri Cote,
Feature Staff

What is an advisor anyway? In his freshman year each student is assigned to someone in his major department who, on the basis of his knowledge of the subject and the requirements for graduation in the field, is supposed to help the student to select his courses to his best advantage, and also act as a counselor.

Somehow the above description sounds entirely too idealistic.

More often than not, advisors are thought of merely as the one whose signature must appear on all orange and white cards, or just one more piece of red tape to go through.

SOME STUDENT responses to advisors were as follows:

"I don't know him."

"She smiles a lot and that's it. She always says '... and your name is ...'."

"He's terrible. Fouled me up. Made me take a course I couldn't handle."

"The only time I ever saw her alone was when I accidentally bumped into her in the ladies room."

"If I had followed his 'advice', I wouldn't have had enough credits to graduate."

"I GOT HIS SIGNATURE once! Actually, his secretary got it for me. He wouldn't see me."

"He's never in, so I usually go next door when I want something."

However, some students seem quite satisfied with their advisors:

"He was very helpful. He told me about his personal experiences as a freshman. Made me feel a lot better."

"I like him. He knows what my requirements are but is also interested in what I want to take."

"HE'S AMAZING. He took a genuine interest in me. I can go over to see him anytime and Sorry: Your major has been changed!

we just talk. He's a great guy."

So it seems that students object first of all to the lack of knowledge that the majority of advisors have about requirements in both major and minor fields; and secondly, with the obvious disinterest, and even distaste, with which many advisors view their duties.

In some cases the situation is understandable, although unfortunate, considering the fact that most advisors are professors with other duties besides counseling students. They simply do not have the time needed to get to know the students as they should and to keep informed about his requirements.

IF THE STUDENT happens to get as an advisor a dedicated, well-informed individual, he will probably have little difficulty.

But what about those students who are not as fortunate? As one disgruntled student put it, "Well, I just muddle my way through those 'distribution requirements' and hope I graduate."

Brooks, Detore Awarded

Rod Brooks and Bob Detore will receive the Varsity "M" Club awards for the outstanding defensive and offensive players respectively in the URI game.

Brooks proved to be the stalwart of the Redmen defensive line and consistently broke through for unassisted tackles. Detore, the smallest member of the Redman team, scored one touchdown on a third effort and picked up hard-earned yardage throughout the game.

FOOTBALL PROFILE...

The knee completely healed, Bob settled down to football and physical contact. Originally, Coach Fusia was planning to make a kickoff return specialist of the speedster, but with the injury of halfbacks Terry Swanson and Bob Ellis, Detore was pressed into action from the opening game of the season.

Now that he has won the starting right halfback assignment, Detore is working even harder at practice. When asked how he feels playing against men who out-weigh him 50-60 pounds, Bob said,

"I've been doing it ever since high school. I try not to let it bother me."

When Bob is on the playing field he is the easiest one to spot. At times he gets lost in the huddle, but when the ball is snapped from center and given to number 24 the fans are treated to an electrifying show of open field running and faking ability.

When he is hit by a defensive player he has the uncanny sixth sense to keep his feet moving to pick up an additional 2 or 3 yds. The working press recently honored Bob by selecting him as the outstanding offensive player against the University of Rhode Island.

Bob hopes to make a career in the field of athletics upon graduation. Until that time arrives, followers of the University of Massachusetts will be able to see this David use his feet as a slingshot against Goliaths.

NEW ENGLANDS...

The Woman's Athletic Association sponsored the three day trip. Since UMass. and UVM were in charge of the tournament, two players Betty Gilligan and Barb Martino also went along to help with administrative duties. Coaches Miss Rupp and Miss Tufts served as faculty advisors.

Intramural Report

By Dave Jarnes

As the touch football season moves into its final week, crucial games that decide league champions are taking place. Several of these games were on Monday's starry card.

Highlighting the action was TC's spine-tingling 24-19 triumph over SPE. Sig Ep held a 19-18 advantage with just 40 seconds left. However, TC, aided by a penalty, scored on a touchdown by Sacowerya with just seconds remaining. Miller (16-26 and 3 TD's) performed admirably in a losing effort. The loss eliminated SPE from contention while TC kept its slim hopes alive. Sig Ep must beat LCA in the final game in order to effect a tie between TC and LCA.

After an impressive 20-0 win over TEP, LCA is still undefeated and in a commanding position in the A league. Donahue's passing (18-25) and Larson's receiving sparked LCA.

TKE remained undefeated and in first place in the B league by virtue of its 20-0 whitewashing of fading BKP. Garbutt completed 15 of 30 for 3 TD's.

Meanwhile, KS flexed its muscles with a 4-0 walloping of PSK. Godak threw for 5 TD's, with a 32-7 decision over ASP. Johnny Parnell's accurate passing (13-19 and 3 TD's) broke open a close 12-7 halftime score. KS plays TKE this Wednesday and if KS wins and if AEP can there will be a three way tie for first in the B league. But if TKE wins AEP and KS will have to "wait until next year."

QTV, sparked by O'Hara's 6 TD passes, rolled over SAM 41-0, although SAM moved the ball much better than in previous games. Rounding out the frat games, PMD rallied from a 9-0 halftime deficit to edge ATG 13-9 and ZN beat PSD 25-7.

In the showdown battle of the south dorm league, the Oaks won easily over the Hoovers 26-6. Dudek's superlative passing (16-23 and 4 TD's) virtually clinched first place for the Oaks.

The Hi-lo's parlayed a strong defense (5 interceptions) and tions) from quarterback Rigney (20-35) to score its second win over the still winless Limes.

The passing combination of Joe Pedro (21-30 and 5 TD's) to Rick Dienstbach (14 passes for 4 TD's) proved to be more than enough in the Hicks' 37-12 romp over the Pines. After a tied half-time score, the Hickories won out over the Maples 31-12.

The Philosophers, who have lost only to the powerful Untouchables, easily beat the Selohassa's 32-7. The Banshees, after holding a slender 14-12 half-time margin, broke open the game with a 25 point second half barrage to top the Charley Browns' 39-12.

In the only lacrosse game played, Mills spotted The Brett Bombers a 2-0 lead in the first two minutes and then shut the Bombers out the rest of the way to triumph 5-2.

Gerry Johnson successfully defended his cross-country title Saturday with a new record of 8 minutes 2.7 second. He was followed by Bob Jenkins and the fast-finishing Steve Prouty.

Greg Landry ECAC QB

Greg Landry, sophomore quarterback for the University of Massachusetts has been selected as the starting QB on the ECAC weekly All-Star team for his heroics vs. Rhode Island.

Landry completed 10 of 15 passes and scored one Redmen TD. Head Coach Vic Fusia said that he believed Landry was worthy of the honor and hopes the Nashua, N.H., native keeps progressing at the rate he has thus far this season.

FOOTBALL PROFILE

BOB DETORE

By Howie Davis

How does it feel to be one David among a whole group of Goliaths?

Ask Bob Detore, a football player from the University of Massachusetts, Bob stands 5'7" tall and weighs in at 165 pounds. He is a junior at the University and is majoring in recreation.

A native of Greensburg, Penn., the 20 year old has been involved in athletics all his life. While attending Salem High School he played football, tennis, and basketball.

Bob was All-Conference halfback in football and an All-Conference guard in basketball, two sports in which a person of his height very rarely excels.

Upon graduation, he went to Dodge City Junior Col. in Dodge City, Kan. Bob started at right half for the two years he was in Kansas, and while the team only had a mediocre record (11 wins and 9 losses in 2 years) he was selected to the Conference All-Star team both years.

Detore came to the University of Massachusetts towards the end of last summer and started practicing under the tutelage of Head Coach Vic Fusia and Backfield Coach Jack Delaney.

Having missed Spring practice Bob knew that he would be behind the rest of the team as far as knowledge of the plays and general routine was concerned. To hinder matters further he pinched a cartilage in his right knee after the first week of the summer practice session.

Loco Bell, "Lulu-Belle" Lost

A reward is being offered for clues leading to the return of the "Lost, strayed or—" 200 lb. Loco bell #651, "Lulu-Belle," as the owner Mrs. Frank T. Welcome calls it, is gone and she would appreciate its return.

"Lulu-Belle" is used to announce meals for five sons and operations on our railroad," Mrs. Welcome stated.

"I have enjoyed students as a post office employee and as a resident of Amherst for 30 years and marvel at their complexities. This is probably a student prank, part of modern morality. Therefore, no questions will be asked," she added without malice. Can anyone assist in locating Mrs. Welcome's wandering bell?

Yahoo and Senate—No Love Affair

by Melinda Kriensky
Senate Reporter

Editor's Note: Due to University curfew regulations reporter Kriensky was unable to stay for the duration of the meeting and garner the nuances of the Yahoo debate. However, she has included the major arguments that surround the issue.

Yahoo funds are still in the Senate treasury until at least December 1.

The humor magazine funds will be held in escrow until a committee of administrators and students can investigate its goals and operation, the Student Senate decided at Wednesday's marathon six and one half hour meeting.

Another question resolved at the Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate.

Under the order of special business, Senator Flynn moved that, "The Student Senate, as a body, refuse to recognize the Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate under any grounds until such time as this Committee has been approved by the Student Senate and that no recommendations or appointments be made to this Committee until it has been so approved."

AFTER TWO HOURS of heated debate, this proposal was finally rejected. This committee deals with all aspects of student life of campus.

As Senator Bombardier pointed out, if this bill were passed, there would be a Student Affairs Committee without any student representatives, thus defeating its purpose.

Flynn stated he did not object to there being a committee, but rather, objected to the way in which it was set up.

Pres. Dacey stepped onto the floor in order to debate. He pointed out that the Student Senate has no control over the Faculty Senate.

He suggested that the Committee be allowed to develop, "If the Administration attempts to usurp student powers, we can blow it up into the biggest stink to ever hit this campus." Thus the motion was defeated on a roll call vote, 22-13.

Also considered Wednesday was Senator Greenquist's Vending Machine Committee report.

MONEY RECEIVED from the machines is now deposited in a Student Union trust fund and is to be used for three categories: 1.) salaries for administrators of the money; 2.) athletic scholarships; 3.) to provide the dorms with money for cultural activities. The Senate readily approved budgets for the other R.S.O. groups but the Yahoo issue concerning a binding clause took much more time.

IN ITS ORIGINAL form the clause stated that the printing funds of the Yahoo be held in escrow by the Student Senate Treasurer pending an investigation of the goals and functions of Yahoo. Previously the Committee was to report by Feb. 16, 1966, but as recommended by Senator Kripps of the Finance Committee, the

Yahoo Editor Roger Jones took time out from a Solitaire game at Wednesday night's Senate meeting to comment, "I'm getting more done with cards than they are." Yahoos budget is still in escrow.

Blood For Campus and Vietnam

Monday will be the kick-off date for the annual Campus Blood Drive sponsored by the Campus Religious Council in conjunction with the University Women. This year's drive is headed by Mrs. Harold Watts and undergrad Tom MacLochlan. Because of the great response received in the past, this year's blood bank will receive donations from only students. Faculty and Staff will have an opportunity to pledge blood during their special drive next Spring. For this reason the co-operation of every student will be necessary to make this year's drive as successful as those held in the past.

Anyone in normal health over 18 years old is eligible to give blood. Students under 21 must have parents' permission on a form which will be sent out to parents of those students who are under 21 and wish to give blood.

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (CPS)—Students are donating blood for American soldiers in Vietnam in a move that is apparently gaining momentum on the campus of New Mexico State University. Leaders in a group that are seeking student blood donors say it is a countermove to action by other U. S. student groups that protest U. S. policy in Vietnam.

The program got underway last week (Oct. 14) when 70 students offered blood to a medical team sent in from William Beaumont Army Hospital of El Paso.

Thirty of the would-be donors had to be turned away because the Army team was not equipped to handle such a large number. This week the team is returning with supplies to handle many more, an Army spokesman said.

Student leaders say a large turnout of donors is expected for weeks. Ed Hanes, the spokesman for a group of donors, says they consider it a very positive way to counteract the "loud minorities."

Smith S. D. S. Chapter To Examine Far East Policy

Smith SDS is sponsoring a program of speeches and seminars to be held on Sunday, October 24, U.N. Day, at 8:30 p.m. in Wright Hall.

Several weeks ago a national organization, Americans for Re-appraisal of Far-Eastern Policy (ARFEP), was formed in New Haven, Conn. Its immediate purpose was to form a national committee to reopen debate on United States' foreign policy in Asia.

Working in the four-college area in coordination with the Smith College chapter of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), as well as with other colleges in other parts of the country, it will focus on three aspects of U.S.-Asian policy.

It will urge a cease-fire in Viet Nam, United States' recognition of the People's Republic of China, and the admission of China to the United Nations.

This group and the groups sponsoring programs around the country on United Nations Day, this Sunday, will emphasize the importance of education, discussion, and revitalization of this subject, and contrasts quite sharply with the recent International Days of Protest activity.

CD Unit To Move Here

Federal funds totalling $7,434, were approved Tuesday evening by the federal civil defense agency to aid in purchasing, with matching state funds, equipment for civil defense sector 4C to be moved to the University early next year, Rep. Silvio Conte announced yesterday.

The sector radio station has been located in Leeds for two and a half years, director Everett Sporbett said.

The reason for the move, he said, is that "in Leeds we have no protection from radio active fallout in event of war. The Boyden building at the University, where we will move to, is a sheltered area.

The station will be strictly a radio center, acting to coordinate Hampshire county civil defense operations in event of war or national emergency, he said.

The center is a part of the State civil defense agency, although funds for the move are provided jointly by state and federal governments.

The 12,000 sq. ft. area given the sector for headquarters is a presently unused area in the basement of the Boyden gymnasium.

Sporbett said the move would probably take place in January of 1966.

Equipment to be purchased on Tuesday evening's federal OK includes: Space station and associated equipment, RACES equipment, self supporting 120 foot monopole with necessary antenna for radio equipment.

ARFEP hopes to broaden its appeal by de-emphasizing the traditional tactics of protest groups. It is hoped that discussion of these three fundamental aspects of U.S. policy in Asia will be extended from campus programs on Sunday to political and civic groups in the next few months.

The speakers will be Jonathan Stence, Professor of Chinese Studies at Yale University; and Charles Porter, former Congressman from Oregon.

It is hoped that a national telephone hookup will be arranged in connection with the main ARFEP program in New Haven, and thereby broadcasting short speeches by Norman Thomas, Mary Wright, Karl Deutsch, Hans Morgenthau, Norman Cousins and others.

clause was amended to Dec. 1, 1965. If the Yahoo is okayed, then this date will allow them to publish an issue first semester. (During the investigation, Yahoo will be allowed to prepare an issue.)

Concerning the matter of holding the funds in escrow, the most prevailing argument was that of Senator Tobin. He felt that holding the money in escrow is censorship and said the Student Senate is, "Losing its autonomy by capitulating to the administration."

However, whether or not the Senate approves the binding clause, the administration will withhold the money, Tobin said. If the Senate rejects the clause, the students will have no part in the investigation and Yahoo may never print again, but with a joint Senate-Administration Committee, there is greater chance of Yahoo getting back the money, the Senator argued.

IN OTHER WORDS, although we must bow to the administration in principle, in practice the

Old Road To Go, If UMass Has Way

by Amherst Record

Acting on a request from University President John W. Lederle, Amherst Selectmen inserted an article in the town meeting warrant allowing the abandonment of North Hadley Rd. west of Sunset Ave.

The University plans to construct a cross-campus road with entrances on Sunset and Lincoln and intends to use the present North Hadley Rd. area for expansion of its athletic fields.

The article also authorizes the Selectmen to petition the Hampshire County Commissioners for abandonment of the road, since it runs between two towns.

Only two houses—both belonging to the University—are on the portion of the road to be abandoned.

The University said it will construct a road to the town Sewage Treatment Plant as part of the agreement. Several Selectmen termed this the town's main concern in the whole matter, and questioned whether further details on this point were needed.

Another point in doubt, the Selectmen said, was possible interruption of access for residents on Sunset and Lincoln while the new road is under construction. The Selectmen directed Torrey to contact University authorities to clarify these points.

Further complicating the matter, the University noted that while the new road is being constructed a short temporary bypass of North Hadley Rd. will cross a University lawn. This results from one of the dormitories to be added to the Southwest Complex projecting onto North Hadley Rd.

Keep Off The Grass

Keeping green things growing on a rapidly-expanding campus is the job of William A. Lambert, campus landscape architect.

Without using one "keep off the grass" sign, Lambert and his staff make sure that the 1,100-acre UMass campus stays beautiful despite daily use by more than 12,000 students and staff.

In his first six months at the Amherst campus, Lambert has attacked the foot traffic problem in two ways—getting pedestrians to follow walks and making walks that pedestrians follow.

HE HAS BLOCKED favorite short cuts with hedges, flowering trees or shrubbery. To show he means business, he often plants a thorny Russian olive or Korean barberry to block a short-cut path.

However, he doesn't stick to old paths exclusively on a campus where new buildings can change old traffic patterns in a hurry. When need is established for a new walk—usually be the appearance of a well-worn path across a hitherto green lawn—he has a new walk put in.

Preserving the traditional beauty of the UMass campus during expansion and construction is a major objective of Lambert's 50-man staff.

AS THE UNIVERSITY'S landscape architect, he is also responsible for planning and supervising the design and construction of all site development, including drainage, roadways and walkways, and lighting.

IN THIS FUNCTION, Lambert must keep several considerations in mind, not the least of which is the convenience of student travel. His department is in the process of completing a quarter-mile walk from a dormitory complex to a designated dining area, and the walk is being built as substantially as any road—in a direct line of travel.

In another service to the Commonwealth, Lambert placed the University's sugar maples at the disposal of the botany department this summer for research into the cause of a mysterious affliction that had been killing sugar maples in Western Massachusetts.

The botany department and Lambert's crews were able to show how most sugar maples could be saved by simple treatment with water, fertilizers and mulch. Information derived from such tests is of great benefit to nurserymen, landscape architects, and tree-lovers.

The landscape architect cites campus planning and beautification, and pedestrian control as the two main functions of his newly created post, adding "we intend to have a beautiful campus—and good healthy grass—by rigid control methods."

Lambert is an alumnus of the University, having received a bachelor of science degree in 1953 and a bachelor of landscape architecture degree in 1956. He has held similar positions with municipal and state commissions in West Virginia and Connecticut, and with a private firm in Springfield.

He is married to the former Charleen Bearce of Melrose, a UMass alumnus class of 1956. The Lamberts are the parents of six children, five sons and a daughter.

The Pill

Few For College Girls

Princeton, N.J.—Pembroke College in Rhode Island recently made headlines throughout the nation, when a health official of the college, according to news reports, prescribed birth control pills for two unmarried students.

Though it is frequently charged that American moral standards are becoming increasingly lax, the public's reaction to this episode leaves no doubt that in this area of human conduct the great majority of Americans are still straight-laced. In the latest Gallup survey, three out of four (74 per cent) of all adults interviewed said they disapproved of giving birth control pills to girls in college.

This was the question asked: "The health officer of a university recently gave prescriptions for birth control pills to two unmarried students. How do you feel about giving birth control pills to girls in college—do you approve or disapprove this?"

THE GREAT majority of both men and women disapprove, although men are slightly more inclined to approve than women, as the following tables show:

BIRTH CONTROL PILLS Men
Approve .....	18%
Disapprove .....	70%

No opinion ..... 12%

Women

Approve ..... 14%

No opinion ..... 9%

Reports from other colleges indicate that the Pembroke incident prescribes the pills, not generally, but at their own discretion.

They cite as justification the fact that the girls are engaged and are planning to be married, or that a psychiatrist may advise that in a particular individual the sexual impulse is so strong as to be a kind of illness and pills are prescribed in preference to the risk of illegitimate children, or the temptation of illegal abortion.

As the public sees it, the greatest argument against prescribing the pills is that to do so is an open approval of immorality. Here are typical explanations of the proof:

"I'M DEFINITELY opposed to this. Our young people have too much freedom now. Why should we foster promiscuity? If the pills are distributed, who will marry?"

"It only condones illicit behavior. It shows a moral decline in our country, which people say is going on. It gives young people an easy way out."

Here is the reply of a person who approves: "First I'm in favor of a good strong sex education. Too many parents ignore the whole matter. If with this background they still want the pills, they're intelligent and adult and should be able to make their own decisions."

This is the attitude of a man who couldn't answer yes or no, but was somewhere in between. "It would be tragic if colleges were to give out the pills indiscriminately and promote illicit affairs among students. On the other hand, I can see that in some instances, it would be a shame to have a young girl's life shattered by not being able to take these pills. The vast majority shouldn't have them but a very few obviously make-up."

Gen. Inspects ROTC Unit

General Frank H. Britton, Deputy Commander of Second United States Army arrived from Fort George G. Meade, Maryland, Tuesday to meet University ROTC cadets and be briefed on the Army ROTC Program.

He was met by an honor guard, commanded by Cadet Lieutenant Colonel George P. Banks, composed of the Bay State Special Forces, Grenadier Drill Team and Army ROTC Color Guard. The General inspected the honor guard pronouncing them "one of the best" he had seen.

After the briefing presided by Colonel Joseph A. Bohnak, Professor of Military Science, the General was presented at a coffee hour to selected members of the Cadet Brigade by the Cadet Colonel Courtney K. Turner.

HOSTESSES at the coffee hour were Miss Diane Dube and Miss Carol Higgins, members of the select Colonel's Cadre. Also present at the coffee hour were Cadet Lieutenant Colonels George P. Banks, Alan R. Burne; Cadet Majors John W. Hardy, John F. Soares, Earl W. Finley; Cadet Captains Homer L. Davis, Victor P. Mesarch; Cadet Sergeant Bernard H. Woods and two of the University's ROTC scholarship students, Cadet Sergeant Major Anthony F. Manfredi, Jr., and Cadet Private Bevin A. Beaudet.

GENERAL BRITTON was especially interested in the progress of the new ROTC Scholarship Program which pays tuition, books, fees and $50.00 per month.

Hampshire College Board Named

The presidents of the four co-operating colleges in the Connecticut Valley—Amherst, Smith and Mount Holyoke Colleges, and sets—this week named an advisory committee of college teachers to help plan an educational program for Hampshire College, the new institution which will be established in this area.

Hampshire College is being established as a coeducational liberal arts college of about 1,000 students. It will carry on academic experiments designed to provide high quality education at the lowest possible cost per student.

Members of the new advisory committee are Sidney R. Packard, professor of history emeritus at Smith, chairman; Robert C. Birney, professor of psychology at Amherst; Alice B. Dick-mathematics at Smith; Frederick C. Ellert, chairman of the department of German and Russian at the University of Massachusetts; and Roger W. Holmes, chairman of the Philosophy Department at Mount Holyoke College. The Hampshire College member of the committee ex officio.

MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE were told that their task will be to "advise the academic leadership of Hampshire College as to the design of an educational program for Hampshire College. That is, an undergraduate program, experimental in nature, fashioned to encourage and take strength from the present with the least possible expenditure."

"Your primary responsibility is to represent yourself and your ideas as a professional educator, interested in the creation of a new college, rather than as a representative of your home institution. It is likely, however, that the interest of your colleagues will provide added and useful points of view to the committee's deliberations. In addition, it is hoped and expected that the committee will wish to consult on a formal basis with a number of persons in the four colleges and elsewhere."

The Committee will continue to function through the fall, and possibly longer, even though no president or other academic officers have yet been named. "It is assumed," the group was told, "that the committee would avoid any formal recommendations on major policy at least until the new president would be able to take over the chairmanship of himself with its earlier work."

THE STARTING POINT in the groups' deliberations will be the New College Plan, a proposal for a new institution in the Connecticut Valley which was drawn by a four college committee in 1958. The New College Plan outlined an academic program designed to provide high quality education at the lowest possible cost. Although it was never enacted in entirety (it influenced and continues to influence academic planning in many institutions) it ultimately provided the impetus for the Hampshire College proposal.

Plans for Hampshire College, announced in August, received major support from Harold F. Johnson of Southampton, N.Y., a retired attorney, who pledged $6 million toward its establishment and who now serves as chairman of its first board of trustees.

Other trustees (formerly known as the trustees of Tinker Hill are Charles W. Cole (vice chairman, former president of Amherst College; attorney, Winthrop S. Dakin of Amherst, and the presidents of the four neighboring colleges, who have pledged academic support. This support will be part of a continuing program of academic cooperation between the colleges and is expected to strengthen and broaden existing cooperative arrangements.

Jeff Alums To Return Tomorrow

Several thousand Amherst College alumni and other friends of the College will return to the campus this weekend to attend the dedication of the Robert Frost Library, witness athletic events, and take part in other events associated with Amherst's annual alumni weekend.

Among the highlights of the weekend is the 100th anniversary concert of the Amherst Glee Club, founded in 1865 through the merger of three small musical societies. The concert is scheduled Saturday at 7:45 p.m. in Alumni Gymnasium, includes works by Beethoven and Berlioz as well as college songs and folk music. It is open to the public without charge.

ALUMNI RETURNING to the campus will hear talks Saturday morning by President Calvin H. Plimpton of Amherst, by the undergraduate president of the Student Council and by Charles R. Longworth, the chairman of the Hampshire College Educational Trust. Athletic competition in football, soccer and cross country is scheduled against Wesleyan late Saturday morning and Saturday afternoon.

The major event of the weekend is the dedication of the Robert Frost Library, scheduled at 2:30 p.m. Sunday. Participating in the dedication are Frederick H. Wagman, the librarian at the University of Michigan and Richard Wilbur, a Pulitzer Prize winning poet and teacher of English at Wesleyan.

Unique Retreat

Research Officials Confer

—The weekend retreat, a method usually used to strengthen religious faith, has been adapted by the School of Education as an aid to research.

On a recent weekend a group of 20 members of the school held the first such "research retreat" at a resort in the Berkshires, meeting for three days of talks with research officials from government agencies and private foundations.

The Berkshire setting was chosen to give participants a feeling of physical and mental removal from their daily routines, allowing them to devote their total energies to the task at hand, according to Dr. William C. Wolf, Jr., retreat coordinator.

The retreat's main task, he added, was to acquaint School of Education faculty with available research support programs. In the field of education alone, he noted, there are thousands of private foundations and 12 to 15 federal programs that offer such support.

Large and small group meetings were held with administrators of research and research professors. Areas covered included studying the role of research agencies as educational innovators; proposal preparation problems; and discussions of research ideas with agency officials.

The retreat seemed to accomplish its purpose, according to Dr. Wolf, particularly in informing faculty in these three areas: preparation of well-written and organized research documents; awareness of how these documents are treated by research agencies; and importance of sharing research ideas with research administrators.

Financial support was by the University's Faculty Research Council. University Provost Oswald Tippo and Dr. Edward C. Moore, Dean of the Graduate School and Coordinator of Research, were guests.

Dr. Wolf and Dr. Robert Schweiker of the School of Education were speakers, along with Dr. Mario Fantini of the Ford Foundation, Dr. Glenn C. Boerigter and Dr. Richard McCann of the bureau of research, U.S. Department of Education, and Jesse Richardson of the state Department of Education.

Education Battle Seen

Washington (CPS)—The Higher Education bill finally won conference approval last week (Oct. 14) and is headed for a battle on the House floor.

The bill, which carries a first-year price tag of $841.4 million, provides for a federal scholarship program for the first time. Repeated efforts to set up such a program in the past have failed.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Federal Money For Schools?

Yes!

In analyzing government aid and the so-called encroachment of government, one has to look at where responsibility lies in solving certain problems. Are people's problems their own affair, or are they shared by someone else? Who is to have the responsibility—the family or the society that is made up of all the families put together.

Responsibility in problem solving has shifted hands in America's growth. The pivotal point appeared somewhere around the Depression. Before this time such problems as education, medical care, care for the elderly, and supporting a family were tackled by the family. Each family solved its own particular problems. Then came the Depression. A shift occurred when the family could not cope with its heavy-laden problems. There was a great need for assistance—instant aid.

As a result, Roosevelt's New Deal was born and the shift was on. Government had taken the responsibility away from the family. American society saw that many of its problems could be alleviated through government intervention. In short, a national need had been born. It now exists and will probably grow in the future.

Then is education a national need? Does government have to really lend a hand? With an increase in both quantity and quality of education constantly stressed in all of man's endeavors, the need has certainly outgrown the capacity for local communities to meet. Throughout history as the cost of education grew the federal government was asked to act. In 1862 the Morrill Act set up sixty-eight land grant colleges to promote agriculture. During W.W.I. the government supported vocational high schools, and the G.I. bills were a result of W.W.II. The "Sputnik scare" encouraged the National Defense Act which now supports math, language, and science instruction in public schools and it also sets up loans to college students.

Today the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is law. Americans have made up their minds that it is easier and, in many ways, more efficient for government to take over or partially take over many problems that once burdened the family of community. In short, those that were once family or community concerns are now national concerns and included in these concerns is education. Thomas Braden, chairman of California's State Board of Education put it this way. "With the rapid moving of families in our

No!

The Education Act recently passed by Congress will eventually lead to complete federal control of all the nation's school systems.

Title I of the act, which draws most of the attention and most of the money ($1.06 billion), is designed to aid local school-district projects. The money will go to state education officials, who will decide what specific projects originated by local public-school districts qualify.

It thus appears that responsibility for setting up the projects lies with the state and local school boards, but the catch is that all projects under Title I must be reviewed annually by Washington. This could lead to national testing and eventually to the standardizing of courses and curricula according to what the federal government deems best.

Federal aid may therefore raise the standards of education in a few educationally deprived areas, but it will be at the expense of the majority of those school districts where there are no problems. Should federal controls be placed upon local boards it will mean a tightening of curricula and a lessening of the experimentation of new methods of teaching. The initiative of city school superintendents to test new devices of learning will be stifled, and the variety and liberalism that distinguished American education from that of other countries will disappear.

In English, Please

Dear Editor:

Those who read your article on Hitch-hiking (Collegian, Oct. 18) might or might not have grasped the total meaning outside of the heading. Being a "Foreign Student" myself—and a fervent believer of hitch-hiking as a means of survival on an isolated campus like ours—I had to seek out my fellow Americans in order to make more explicit what was so "implicit" in the article. Unfortunately, even they could not easily read between the lines or in the lines of those paragraphs full of "famous quotations".

As you can see, I am not—yet—after an argument defending the hitch-hiking institution, but after a more basic problem of organized English (or is it American?) essays in our University newspaper. From a foreigner who thought she knew the English language.

To the Dean

To the Editor:

Dear Dean Curtis:

Despite your clear apology for bedchecking in the Collegian, misunderstanding still exists in my mind. No official at any of the four colleges in our area has been able to give me an understandable reason for curfews. Upperclass women at such superior colleges as Brandeis and Radcliffe enjoy the responsibility of returning to their dorms at any time they see fit during the night. Yet more "emergencies" would seem to happen in the city of Boston and it would follow that bedchecks should be more desirable at Brandeis and Radcliffe than at a college in Amherst. But only the University of Massachusetts gives its women so little responsibility for getting back to the dorm on time.

You claim to cater to the "wishes of parents." Do you really know what all the parents wish for their daughters? Why are the daughters threatened with a punishment—expulsion—no parent would "wish" on a daughter who stayed out too late? Many families allow reasonable discussion to set curfews. No parent "expels" a daughter for not being home on time. Few parents lock the door on a daughter who gets back one minute late. But this University conducts itself more strictly than any parent—without exercising the responsibility owed by a parent to a daughter or son—that of letting free discussion and working agreements set convenient rules.

Why should a twenty-one-year-old adult or an eighteen-year-old adult have less responsibility here than he or she does anywhere else?

The Proper Path

To the Editor:

Being one of those students who were amazed to find a forest growing in my favorite path, I would like to state my opinion on this strange phenomenon. While the dirt paths are certainly unsightly, planting trees in them is not the best answer. Every time a new building goes up, the overall traffic pattern changes. With our University constantly changing, some paths become comparatively useless, while others spring up where before there was nothing but green grass.

The answer is not in planting trees all over the place. The answer is in constantly changing the walks to fit the direction of the walker. Thus, I suggest digging up the unused paths and paving the new ones, which are easy enough to find.

An Indiscrepancy?

To the Editor:

The draft age is 18 and as we all know all males reaching this age are expected to serve their country for a period of time. They are charged with the ever important responsibility of protecting this country's freedom and way of life. Yet on the other hand the voting age is 21 and it is widely excepted that people younger than this are not responsible or intelligent enough to choose their country's leaders. Does this seem reasonable? As for being responsible: If they can be entrusted with the job of protecting our country's safety then surely they can be considered responsible enough to vote and vote wisely. And as for being intelligent: All 18 year olds who have graduated high school have completed a required course in U. S. History not to mention other courses they could have taken while in high school such as, civics, problems of democracy, and government.

Now looking on this situation open minded, isn't this basically the same situation the colonists were up against all most 200 years ago. At the age of 18 we really have no voice in the government yet we have a duty to the government. Isn't this wrong and unjust? Isn't this the type of thing the colonists fought against? It is my firm belief that this injustice should be corrected by either raising the draft age or lowering the voting age.

I'll Stay Unaffiliated

To the editor:

As a counselor on duty in one of the girl's dorms, I had a very "enlightening" experience pertaining to Greek life. At curfew, a boy was kissing his date good-night and in the midst of this touching scene, one of his fraternity brothers charged up the stairs, into the lobby and yelled to him, "If you want to remain a pledge, you'd better get your — to the house in three minutes flat." When the pledge exclaimed that he had twenty minutes to spare, more brotherly comments were hurled at him with the result that he had to say a hasty good-night and run out the door.

If this is a typical example of Greek life-brotherly feelings ad nauseum—the Greeks can keep it. I'd rather stay an independent.

World Police?

To the Editor:

In reply to your Monday, Oct. 18 editorial concerning student protest and American policy in Vietnam, I would like to make several comments. When students protesting against American policy in Vietnam claim they are for a democratic society in Vietnam, they mean exactly that. Not a democratic society the American Government desires to see in Vietnam, but for which they have been struggling for over twenty years. If the U. S. Government is fighting for the freedom of the Vietnamese peoples, its genocidal methods certainly are the antitheses of its noble claims.

You stated that "if we allow the takeover of South Vietnam, we are announcing to the world that America will no longer be the guardian of the free world." Mr. Hartstone, by your above statement you are assuming that the U. S. is legitimately in Vietnam. If you consider the Saigon regime a "legitimate government" trying to defend itself and all the U.S. is doing is lending it needed assistance, then our invitation to assist Saigon is indeed legitimate. But if one considers the puppet-dictator Ngo Dinh Diem entirely dependent upon American support, as many of us do, then one cannot help but conclude that the U.S. Government invited itself into the revolution in Vietnam, against the will of the people.

Thus the self-appointed "guardian of the free world" is looking out, not for the interests of the Vietnamese people, but solely for the interests of the United States of America. And since when does the U.S. have the right to appoint itself international policeman? For assuming this role, in trying to defend the "free world," we are posing as the greatest threat to colonial revolution throughout the underdeveloped world, as our recent intervention in the Dominican Republic has plainly demonstrated.

My last comment is one concerning your mention of aggressors. You stated that if we end the war in Vietnam, an invitation would be open to all aggressive nations in the world to march right into Vietnam. Mr. Hartstone, by your statement we can only infer that you desire war, and this will keep Vietnam free. Can't you see that the only sensible way to insure a free, democratic election in Vietnam would be to halt all fighting and have a withdrawal of all foreign troops from Vietnam, while having a force under the supervision of the U.N. directing and insuring the election of a single popular government freely and democratically chosen by the people of Vietnam and not by the United States of America.

getting home). Also, if the girl signed out where she was going to begin with, she could be located immediately just as easily as if she were at the dorm. What then would be the need for curfews?

And don't think we're foolish enough to actually believe that "Once the women students return to the dorms, men students will automatically return to their dorms also." Just toddle into Amherst Tower some night and see how many of them return. Not only don't they have curfews, but they don't even have to sign out. How can they be located in an emergency — or doesn't it matter if their great uncle dies?

Granted, parents do tend to worry more about their daughters than about their sons, but what parent would keep his daughter in on a Friday night for coming in five minutes late and at the same time allow their son to come home at whatever unearthly hour he chooses?

Oh, curfew, curfew, what for art thou? Only Dean Curtis knoweth.

Obligation To...

To the Editor:

During the next weeks, there will be many demonstrations by college students and faculty against the war in Vietnam. Because our society is a democratic one, this is their privilege, but with every privilege there remains an obligation.

We have many obligations—an obligation to those many men who fought and many times died so our country would endure, an obligation to our heritage and principles, and an obligation to our soldiers in Vietnam.

War is most horrible and mankind would greatly benefit by its abolition, but when war is forced upon us, there can be no alternative but to bring it to a swift end. War's object is victory and in war there can be no substitute — no substitute for victory.

There are many who would resort to appeasement, but they are blind to the past, because the past shows very clearly that appeasement brings new and bloodier war. Like blackmail, appeasement brings harsher and harsher demands until a point is reached where the appeased must be stopped.

Peace with honor and respect is most wonderful; but peace without honor, peace without courage to fight for your beliefs, peace with slavery—this peace is by far worse than the war.

Curfew, Curfew

To the Editor:

We certainly hope that Dean Curtis credits us with a little more intelligence than to have us believe that the purpose of curfews is to make it easier to locate us in case of an emergency. Be real—how many girls out of approximately 4,000 are going to have an emergency over a period of five hours between seven and twelve on any given night. But we realize the necessity of this curfew for the sake of the one girl it may happen to, about her great uncle's death at 12 or at 12:10?—about her great uncle's death at 2 or at 12:10?—he'd still be dead, and no buses run at that hour anyway. Maybe it would give her ten minutes more to start "thumbing" (which is considered illegal in Amherst, but probably her only way of Shein vi di l'vone, lichtig vi di shtern—"Beautiful as the moon, bright as the stars, you are heaven's gift to me" goes the old Yiddish favorite they're dancing to on their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

It's a sentimental occasion that brings on happy laughter and happy tears. Also a thirst. And with the thirst, naturally, comes Rheingold Extra Dry.

After all, why not?

Rheingold is the beer that refreshes tarantella dancers at Italian weddings, cools the Latin fire at Puerto Rican jibaro feasts, and gets called for after waltzes and polkas alike. In fact, in New York City, where thirst comes in more than 30 languages, more people buy Rheingold than any other beer.

How come?

We don't know. But we must be doing something right.

Stockbridge Has On-the-Job Work

"What is learned through books must be practically applied in order to be thoroughly learned." Working on this principle, Stockbridge School of Agriculture requires each student to gain on-the-job experience for three months during his two-year course. As part of the curriculum, each student is required to submit a non-credit summer report which goes into his permanent record. This report must be recognized or the student isn't able to graduate.

Included in the Stockbridge School of Agriculture are various departments, each having a file of prospective employers. Although this file is available to the students when needed, the School boasts an average of 80% of their men and women obtaining their own jobs each year. Stockbridge is only part of the College of Agriculture.

Upon graduation, the Stockbridge student receives an associates degree in his specialty from the College of Agriculture.

Some fascinating places are visited. Some interesting people are met.

For example, Kenneth Jones, due to receive his associate's degree this June in Park Management and Arboriculture worked for Heath Survey Consultants this past summer from March through September.

From Boston, Ken travelled to Louisiana where he was an electrical-leak prodder probing for leaks in the natural gas lines. For three months he remained in the Arkansas-Texas area training for experience in making vegetation surveys. This correlates to his leak prodding experiences as he was doing research in detecting natural gas leaks by the vegetation. $900-100 weekly as "take home" pay—besides a wealth of practical knowledge.

As part of their on-the-job experience, Dick Lamore and Donald West worked for the Forest Service in Oregon. They fought fires, climbed trees, sprayed, diagnosed, planted, pruned, took down trees, and set up wind breaks to prevent soil erosion. Charles Kupfer did the same sort of forest service work in Wyoming.

Students in Animal Science received training in their fields by working on farms. Some worked for dairies, others worked for selective breeding establishments, still others worked at veterinary hospitals for experience. Floriculturists worked for greenhouses, supermarkets and park commissions. Many, many other students had equally fascinating jobs, and ex-

Verbal 'Pen' Replaces Red Pencil

Some students at Kalamazoo are getting verbal grades.

What they hear, simply, is the recorded voice of their professor evaluating and grading their term papers or lab reports. By replacing the red pencil with a dictation machine, several professors have found that they can give students more than twice as many comments without increasing the time it takes to grade a set of papers.

Thus far the system has been tried by professors in the English, history, philosophy, and chemistry departments. All the teachers who have tried the new form of grading plan to keep using it. Dr. John B. Moore, who introduced the system at Kalamazoo says that student-teacher contact is greatly increased. Dr. Moore originally tried the idea in an attempt to save grading time. Instead, he found he was spending about the same amount of time grading papers but was making far more detailed comments than he did with a pen.

There have been no student complaints and much praise from those who felt they were receiving more personal attention. "We get a lot more understanding just by hearing the tone of the professor's voice," one student said.

Phi Kappa Nu Gets IFC Boost; Lambda Chi Wins In "A" League

By Ken Berk and Paul Ponte

In line with the Interfraternity Council's (IFC) planned development of new fraternities at the University, eleven undergraduates have obtained colonization rights as Phi Kappa Nu Colony to the IFC.

IFC granted these rights to Vito Colona, Phil Esposito, Steve Ganas, Jack Kelly, Robert Klaucek, Fred Litcoff, Ted Lylis, Greg Mayhew, Gerald Pellegrini, Kevin Sullivan, and Frank Tarantino on April 27.

THE FOUNDING BROTHERS first joined together in January. After a series of meetings with the IFC and the Fraternity Managers Assn., the petition for colonization was formally presented.

Phi Kappa Nu has recently obtained the services of Georgios Pan Piperopoulos of the Sociology Department as their faculty advisor.

With his help, PKN participated in the Homecoming Parade. The colony's float, entitled "Bury the Rams", was considered a fine contribution to the parade and it also exemplified the members' spirit.

PHI KAPPA NU is participating in the Intramural athletic program in the Independent League. The brothers are also formulating plans to affiliate with a national fraternity.

The IFC, under President Sam Armstrong, is moving decisively to expand the fraternity system and is extending to this new colony IFC's support, through experience and other aid.

Al Burne, executive vice-president of IFC, commented: "Phi Kappa Nu has the promise to become an integral part of the Greek System and the campus community."

Said Gerald Pellegrini, president of Phi Kappa Nu: "With our present spirit and our expanding brotherhood the future can hold only success."

IN OTHER GREEK NEWS, Sigma Alpha Mu has obtained the services of Dr. Harold Hartzler as their new advisor. Dr. Hartzler received his A.B., and his J.D. at Indiana University. He is a Professor of Business Law in the School of Business Administration's department of General Business and Finance. Sammy's previous advisor was Capt. McGinnis of the ROTC department, who is now serving in Korea.

In fraternity intramural football, Lambda Chi Alpha has captured the championship of the "A" League. In the "B" League is a three way tie between Alpha Epsilon Pi, Kappa Sigma, and Tau Kappa Epsilon for the championship. There will be elimination games set up to determine which of the three teams will meet LCA for the overall championship, and then go on to play the Independent League champs.

UM Chorale Set For Spring Tour

The University of Massachusetts Chorale practicing for their upcoming 1965 Spring Tour.

The University Chorale, granted $2,000 by the Student Senate, is now finalizing plans for a two to three day tour this spring in local high schools and churches throughout the area.

Working at least four hours each week, the University chorale is fast approaching the degree of perfection considered necessary for both the Christmas Concert and the Spring Tour.

Their music includes madrigals, southern folk-hymns, sacred pieces, and works with a modern emphasis.

Trying to cut tour costs, the students plan to stay in hosts' homes while making similar arrangements for meals.

The Chorale members, newcomers to the tour circuit, feel that they will do their best to provide concerts of the best musical quality to their audiences.

They feel that, in doing this, they will be fulfilling the two-fold aims of the Chorale's Board of Officers—to bring the finest musical performances to residents of Massachusetts; and to bring credit to their University of Massachusetts.

New Baez Record Has Electric Guitar

by Nancy Abrams
Feature Staff

At first glance, Farewell, Angelina (Vanguard 9200) by Joan Baez seems to be quite a disappointment. The album contains none of the Child ballads or Latin American songs that Miss Baez does so well. There is nothing approaching the aria and poetry that were included in her last album.

To top it off, Joan is accompanied by an electric guitar on five of the thirteen numbers.

After hearing the album, however, one realizes that it is an excellent product, if not typical Baez.

AS IN THE PAST, Joan sings several songs having to do with love. "Colours" by Donovan explodes with the joy of being alive in the morning when your true love is by your side. "Daddy, You Been on My Mind" is another version of the Dylan theme that loving a person is not synonymous with possessing a person.

In "It's All Over Now, Baby

Blue," also by Bob Dylan, love comes to an unhappy end. "The Wild Mountain Thyme," a traditional British lyric, tells of love in the mountains amidst the heather. Courtship, marriage, and tragic death is the subject of "The River in the Pines," a traditional American ballad. "Pauvre Rutebouef" is a very haunting French lament.

JOAN ALSO SINGS two Dylan "protest songs," "Farewell, Angelina" and "A Hard Rain's a-Gonna Fall." Both contain poetry that is a joy to the ear, filled with imagery and symbolism.

Three of the songs on the album, "Satisfied Mind" (money does not buy happiness), "Ranger's Command" ("don't ever run as long as there's bullets in both of your guns"), and a German translation of "Where Have All the Flowers Gone," do not seem to be as interesting as the other ten songs. There is nothing really wrong with them, but they lack the power of the Dylan tunes and the gentle beauty of the traditional and French songs.

SO THERE ARE THE SONGS, ranging from exquisite to boring. To them all Miss Baez brings her beautiful, soaring soprano voice and her intensely emotional interpretations.

No matter how bad the material, she turns every song into a work of art. Her own guitar accompaniment, as well as that of Bruce Langhorne on electric guitar, provides just the right background. The album is a thing of beauty and will be a cherished addition to any record collection.

When Autumn Hits Campus...

The colorful leaves that cover the campus in autumn are not so pretty to William Lambert, University landscape architect. He is the man who has to pick them up.

To handle this extensive project, the University has two machines and several dozen men. "The larger tractor-type machine can hold five cubic yards of material," reported Lambert. This machine is preferred, because of its efficiency, over the smaller, a power sweep, which holds much less. "The more rigs that we can put out, the better off we are," Lambert said, "but our funds now are limited to these two pieces."

Beyond this mechanization, the rest of the job is left to manpower, which is scarce this fall. "It's hard to get men from outside construction to work for us, and although we're cleaning things up as we can, our ground forces are quite depleted," added Lambert.

Curiously, the leaves picked up this fall will never leave the campus grounds. "When they're collected," Lambert explained, "they are taken to the nursery area and put into large mounds. They are shredded and broken down into humus, then mixed with other fertilizer, forming a good quality organic humus. This will be used, in a few years' time, for fertilizing the trees around the campus."

In the past, the leaves were destroyed after pick-up. "Now," said Lambert, "everything is salvaged—even the grass clippings from the Stadium."

Trivia Reaches UMass, "Who Was Gus Goose?"

By Lois Cohen
Assoc. Feature Ed.

Who was Superman's mother? If this question reminds you of the TV programs you watched as a child, if you start to think of comic books you used to read, and if you smile slightly at these childhood memories, then you are probably a potential Trivia fiend.

What, exactly, is Trivia? It's bits of information and memories of Anything! It can be a small fact about baseball, an old movie, a comic book, a television program, a childhood game.

What's so good about Trivia? Just sit down with a friend for a few minutes and start throwing some facts around. Begin, for instance, with the question, "What was Zorro's real name?" or "What was Batman's secret identity?" Feeling nostalgic? Isn't it fun?

Trivia is now enjoying great popularity at the Ivy League schools. Last spring, Columbia sponsored an all-night Trivia contest over a local radio station. Last week, each Ivy League school sent a representative to a Trivia contest.

If the profound philosophers and scientists at those awesome and impressive Ivy League schools are abandoning their other forms of mental gymnastics for this sport, then why not bring it to UMass?

By the way, Superman's mother was Martha Kent!

On October 21, the Smith College Museum of Art will open an exhibition covering 160 years of lithography. Some 60 lithographs, the earliest dated 1803 and the latest 1964, will be shown in the main gallery and main hallway of the first floor. Most of the examples chosen are from Smith's collection, but the Yale University Art Gallery, the Fogg Museum of Harvard University, the Worcester Art Museum and various private collectors have lent important additional works.

The exhibition will continue until Nov. 21. Museum hours are from 9 to 5 Monday through Saturday, and from 2:30 to 4:30 on Sunday.

Vietnam

Protests Protested

by the Collegiate Press Service

A new hunt for Communists may be one result of last weekend's (Oct. 15-16) protests of the widening United States role in the Vietnam war.

In Chicago Sunday night, U. S. Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach claimed that Communists are active in the marches and demonstrations protesting the war in Vietnam and that the justice department has begun an investigation.

Katzenbach charged that some Communists were working for the Students for a Democratic Society, a national group that has been a leader in the anti-war movement. The attorney general said he is awaiting results of his department's investigation to determine the strength of SDS and whether there are any direct ties between the group and the Communist Party.

KATZENBACH CITED federal laws against aiding and abetting persons to avoid the draft and described SDS pamphlets that were distributed at several rallies that tell how to avoid military service.

Paul Booth, a spokesman for SDS, said Monday that "our program is perfectly legal. We are advocating that people should become conscientious objectors, not draft dodgers." SDS leaflets and literature do not advise people to avoid the procedures of the Selective Service Act, he said, but to file with their draft boards as conscientious objectors.

"Most importantly," Both said, "we feel that the attorney general's drumming up of the Communist issue only serves to obscure the real issue which is the war in Vietnam." He said that SDS would be willing to explain its program to any interested group, including representatives of the justice department when and if they inquire.

In a staff study released last week, the Senate's Internal Security Subcommittee also charged that the demonstrations have "clearly passed into the hands of Communists and extremist elements."

Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (D-Conn.), ice-chairman of the subcommittee, said that the weekend demonstrations were especially characteristic of Communist tactics.

THE SUBCOMMITTEE'S STUDY, prepared at Dodd's direction, conceded that "the great majority" of persons who differ with the administration's policy in Vietnam are "loyal Americans." But the study suggested that leaders in the anti-war movement have failed to prevent or limit Communist infiltration of their ranks and have thus left control to people "who are openly sympathetic to the Vietcong and openly hostile to the United States."

In a chapter of the report titled "Biographical Notes on Some of the Participants," 19 academicians are listed as sponsors of the Inter-university Committee for Public Hearings on Vietnam and are said to have "persistent records of Communist sympathies and/or of association with known Communists and known Communist movement and front organizations."

(The academicians listed include: T. Arthur Bisson, intercultural studies at Western College for Women; Derk Bodde, associate professor at the University of Pennsylvania; O. Edmund Clubb, a member of the political science department of Columbia University; Nathaniel Coburn, of the mathematics department of the University of Michigan; D. F. Fleming, a former research professor of international relations at Vanderbilt University; Robert J. Haighurst, professor of education at the University of Chicago; Halstead Reid Holman, chairman of the department of medicine at Stanford University; Thomas I. Emerson, of the Yale University Law School; Oliver S. Loud, of Antioch College; Helen Merrill Lynd (Mrs. Robert Lynd), of the philosophy department of Sarah Lawrence College; Robert S. Lynd, of the sociology department of Columbia University; Staughton Lynd, assistant professor of history at Yale University; Harry Magdoff, of the economics department of the New School in New York City; John Somerville, of the philosophy department of Hunter College; Philip Morrison, professor of physics at Cornell University; Melba Phillips, of the physics department of the University of Chicago; Anatol Rapoport, of the department of mathematical biology of the University of Michigan; Theodore Rosebury, a bacteriologist at Washington University in St. Louis; and Harry Slochower, of the psychology department of the New School in New York City.)

MEANWHILE, impressed with their weekend showing, leaders in the movement have pressed plans for a March on Washington against the war. The march, now being organized by SANE, an established pacifist group, will be held Nov. 27 and will include rallies at the White House and the Washington Monument.

The weekend demonstrations ranged from a parade of 10,000 down New York's Fifth Avenue to a memorial service for Vietnam war dead at Purdue University. Similar demonstrations were held overseas and in Canada. In London, some 20 pickets marched in front of the American Embassy while others paraded in Trafalgar Square.

North Vietnam's official newspaper, Nhan Dan, described the protests as a "hammer blow at the Johnson clique."

THE NEW YORK MARCHERS were greeted by jeers and occasional violence. Eggs were thrown and several demonstrators were splashed with red paint. At several points along the parade route, small groups charged the marchers and were quickly hauled back by police. No arrests were made during the march.

In Berkeley, thousands of students gathered in a plaza at the civic center. An estimated 10,000 marchers were turned back by police as they attempted to march to Oakland Army Base Friday night. A second effort to march to the base on Saturday after an all-night vigil Friday night was also rebuffed.

A number of faculty members from the University of California, among them Prof. Owen Chamberlain, a Nobel laureate in chemistry, were reported to be among the marchers.

THE VIETNAM DAY Committee at Berkeley plans to attempt the march again early in November, with sympathy protests organized in Washington by the National Coordinating Committee to End the War.

Eleven persons were arrested at the main gate of Truax Air Force Base near Madison, Wis., the headquarters of the National Coordinating Committee, when they tried to enter the base and make a citizen's arrest of the base commander.

Seventeen persons were detained for three hours for picketing outside the Special Forces Training Center at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, Saturday. The demonstrators, organized by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill Student Peace Union, had driven from the campus to the only known Special Forces base in the U.S.

THE PICKETERS were taken to the office of the provost marshal and threatened with arrest but were released later in the afternoon.

On Sunday, 2000 demonstrators paraded in San Francisco with a police escort.

Other protests were held in Boston, where 2000 persons marched on historic Boston Common. At Bennington, Vt., 200 townspeople confronted students from Williams and Bennington College with flags and patriotic songs.

TEACH-INS took place at Purdue, the University of Minnesota, the University of Illinois at Chicago, Clark University, New York University, and Rutgers University.

Frank Emspak, chairman of the National Coordinating Committee, claimed that over 70,000 people had taken part in the protest during the weekend. "Our expectations were wonderfully fulfilled," he said. "Final reports should show that at least 100,000 persons took part."

Card Burner Arrested

UPI Telephoto

College grad, David J. Miller was arrested Monday by the FBI after publicly burning his draft card. He wears a "Ban The Bomb" pacifist button.

Hold Draft Cards Until 43, Or Else

from the Springfield Daily News

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI)—An official of the Catholic Peace Fellowship says a movement is under way to flood the courts with draft card burning cases.

Thomas Cornell, director of publications for the fellowship, disclosed the tactic Tuesday night shortly after helping to bail out of a jail a 22-year-old pacifist charged with burning his draft card Friday at a New York rally.

David J. Miller, 22, of New York became the first person arrested under a new federal law forbidding destruction of a draft card when he was picked up Monday by FBI agents in the Hooksett.

Cornell said Tuesday night that Miller's action in burning his draft card was "the first step of a movement to eventually abolish" the new law. He said there will be more draft card burnings in New York within the next eight days.

"As Many As Possible"

"The idea is to get as many people as possible to burn their draft cards so that the government would not be able to prosecute all of them," Cornell said. The crime is punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine of up to $10,000.

Miller, who spent one night in jail following his arrest, was indicted on the charge Tuesday by a federal grand jury in Manhattan.

U.S. Atty. Robert M. Morgenthau said Miller would be returned to New York to stand trial. He is scheduled to appear before the U.S. Commissioner here again Friday and it appeared unlikely any action would be taken before that time.

"IT WAS MY CARD and I burned it," the soft-spoken Miller said Tuesday following his release. The nattily dressed graduate of LeMoyné College in his hometown of Syracuse said he hoped he would not go to jail but was ready to accept the consequences of his action.

"If Jail Comes, I'll Go" ... "I hope they repeal the law," Miller said. "But if jail comes, I'll go."

The $500 bond which freed Miller was posted by Thomas Haesler, a theology instructor at St. Peter's College, Jersey City, N.J.

The FBI charged that Miller burned his draft card Friday while addressing a crowd of anti-war protesters in front of a U.S. Armed Forces induction center in Lower Manhattan. Films of the card burning were later shown on network television.

He was seized by FBI agents Monday just after he had visited St. Anselm's College with five other men. The group had hoped to set up a "peace booth" on the St. Anselm's campus.

Cadet Bernard H. Woods represented ten Juniors who participated in the new two-year ROTC program at Fort Knox, Kentucky last year. This program is open to second semester sophomores who were unable to take freshman and sophomore ROTC but would like to earn a commission in the Army while in college.

Judge Deplores Phoney Crime Dodge

from the Springfield Union

Judge Samuel Blassberg of the Greenfield District Court Tuesday said one of the hidden "draft dodging" tricks being used by some youngsters nowadays is to get themselves a small court record.

Blassberg said the idea of most such cases is that the youngsters think a first offense will result in a light sentence, but one that is just enough to keep them out of service.

CURRENT RECRUITING practices, he noted, do not accept youngsters with certain offenses, and even require waivers after a certain number of traffic violations. Blassberg said he did not think many of this type of case actually existed, but added, "there is definite evidence that such actions are taking place, even here in Franklin County."

In one recent case, two youngsters facing the draft, broke into a store, made a lot of noise, banged things around, "and just waited for police to arrive."

Police and court officials, the youths' actions, and it was not until sentence was imposed that it was learned both were facing probable draft calls.

A LOT OF these youngsters who have been rejected due to a number of minor traffic violations, are usually youngsters with too little to do, and are not the potential criminal type.

Time in service, he noted, would teach most of them a sense of responsibility simply from being constantly occupied and busy.

"We do know," Judge Blassberg said, "that there are youngsters who are not doing well enough in school to continue to rate draft deferments, who have suddenly gotten into trouble with the law on minor scales, mostly in the area of contributing to delinquency for minors, purchasing liquor for them and leading the way to minor thefts."

Judge Blassberg said, "the pity of it is that youngsters who might be taking this tack do not apparently realize such a record could be of some harm to them later in life when they apply for a job, etc."

Crew Loses First Race to Amherst

by Cliff Snickers

IN SPITE OF working out for only four weeks the newly organized UMass Crew rowed a very impressive race against Amherst College. The race was rowed for one mile on the Connecticut River, the course being located just below the Coolidge Bridge.

Using a borrowed shell and oars the UMass crew got a good start. At the quarter mile mark they had a lead of about half a boat length which they maintained for the body of the race.

With about a quarter mile to go both crews took up the stroke from 24 to about 28 strokes a minute. The inexperienced UMass crew was unable to maintain the faster pace and crossed the finish line about four feet behind the Amherst crew.

A SECOND AMHERST crew finished about two feet behind the UMass crew. The race was rowed in a downpour with a slight head wind.

Intramural Football Season Ending; Play-Offs Are Next

by Dave Jarnes

WITH THE conclusion of Wednesday's games all the league championships have been settled with the exception of the B fraternity league, where a probable three-way tie will necessitate a playoff.

COMING THROUGH like the champions they are, LCA overcame two Sig Ep leads as well as adversity in the form of a dropped touchdown pass and a TD called back on an apparent official's error. Sig Ep led at the half 6-0, and also led 13-12 with less than two minutes remaining. With third down at the Sig Ep three yard line, LCA's Jim Donahue fired a pass to star receiver Jeff Larson in the end zone but Jeff dropped the pass. With the clock showing just 40 seconds left Donahue calmly hit Larson for the do-or-die fourth down TD. Larson caught the extra point and LCA completed an undefeated season with its 19-13 win.

KS threw the B league into mass confusion with an easy 22-6 victory over previously unbeaten TKE. Jim Neary caught 9 passes and Godak, who has sparked KS' comeback, completed 13 of 16. KS and TKE finished the season in a tie for first.

Meanwhile, AEP, led by Johnny Parnell's spectacular passing (15-17 and 4 TDs) rolled over ATG 41-0. AEP must beat weak sister PMD in a makeup game Monday in order to effect a three way tie. A coin flip amongst the three captains will determine who gets the bye.

BKP, WHICH was a B league contender until last week, wound up in fourth with an 18-14 decision over ASP. A bizarre score saw TEP nipping ZN 1-0. The game ended 0-0 but TEP was awarded the verdict on a first down advantage. PMD got its second win of the season by beating PSD 30-0.

For the third time this season the Intramural Individual scoring record was broken as Hurley checked in with 32 points in the Lemons 45-7 romp over the Limes. Curiously, the Lemons have beaten the two teams ahead of them, the Oaks and Hoovers, but losses to the second division Hicks and Hickories cost them the south dorm league.

MIKE SHEARS' eleven receptions paced the Hoovers to a 13-0 blanking of the Hickories. Mike Antonio's passing helped the Pines beat the Maples 26-12 and the Hicks ended their season on a bright note by edging the Hi-lo's 14-7.

The Grayson Flaming A's, who never received a stiff challenge all season, clinched first place with an easy 26-14 win over the previously unbeaten Grayson Aces. Jack Thomas, with eight receptions for the Aces, tried his best but it wasn't enough to offset a great performance by Brown (9-15 and 3 TD's).

The Webster Rams overcame a 13-6 halftime deficit to top the Webster Hawks 26-13 and end up with a 3-3 record. Another inter-dorm rivalry saw the offensive-minded Thatcher Redwoods bomb the Hemlocks 32-6.

The Chadbourne Maroons tuned up for the upcoming campus championships with a 27-7 pasting of the Chadbourne Eagles. Jim Dennis spent most of the night trying to run for his life from the hard-charging Maroon Line.

BILL THOMAS' one-hand circus catches were instrumental in the Greenough Garfields 32-18 win over the Greenough Grants. The Baker Bruins edged the Baker Buffaloes 19-13 as Ed Polchopek completed 17 of 32. The Baker Baracudas closed out their season with a 32-0 shut-out of the winless Middlesex Braves.

The powerful Plymouth Patriots remained unbeaten with a 45-12 whumping of the Wheeler Trojans. Lynch (14-25 and 5 TD's) led the offensive parade.

The Mills Cherrys had to hold on for dear life to top the Mills Birch 20-19 and keep its slim title hopes alive. The Birch, who have lost to the Trojans, must beat the Patriots in their final game to tie for first place.

Rounding out the dorm games, the Chestnuts blanked the hapless Slippery Elms 8-0.

TURNING TO THE INDEPENDENT games: the first-place Hampshire Hardnoses withstood a surprisingly strong challenge from the UM Band to win out 32-15. An evenly matched contest saw the Buglers beat the Land Architecture 27-19 to score their first win. Don Tudryn's 8 receptions sparked the once-beaten Courtesies Taxi to a 27-6 decision over the Chem Club.

IN THE ONLY lacrosse games played, TEP tipped TC 5-4. Sinclair, who leads the league with 8 goals, scored 3 in LCA's clobbering of BKP.

Most division winners have been determined in the tennis tourney. Oldach, Barron, Chap, Rice, Kahn, and Welsh are among those who will be competing for the campus championship.

BOWLING LEAGUE entries are due by November 10, so you should begin to think about forming your teams.

Candidates For Ski Team To Meet Thurs.

Candidates for this year's ski team will meet with Coach William MacConnell in the Nantucket Room of the Student Union on Thursday, Oct. 29 at 7 p.m. At this meeting rules for eligibility will be discussed.

Last year's team finished fourth in the Osborn Division of the New England Intercollegiate Ski Council with a record of 53-17. THIS YEAR'S schedule has been expanded to ten meets, which will include two downhill, three giant slaloms and five two run slaloms. According to MacConnell, this will provide a rugged test for the UMass skiers. MacConnell feels that the potential and depth of this year's team will enable them to better last year's mark.

RETURNING from last season's squad are co-captains Pete Plasteridge and Don Piegza along with lettermen Tom Pittendreigh. They will be re-inforced by the addition of several impressive performers from last year's junior varsity team.

MacConnell emphasized that he hasn't made any definite decisions yet, and that all candidates will be judged both on their ability as a skier and ability to perform as a member of the team.

Redmen Leaders

THE LATEST Yankee Conference statistics released yesterday show three UMass players leading in their specialties.

SPLIT END Bob Meers is atop the field in pass receptions with 18 for 199 yards. Meers needs nine more receptions to tie the UMass career mark of 70.

UMass punter Terry Swanson leads the league with a 37.4 average on 13 kicks.

GREG LANDRY, Redmen soph sensation, once again leads All Yankee Conference quarterbacks with 48 completions in 82 attempts for a .585 percentage. Landry has hit for 712 yards and four TD passes.

IN OTHER categories, tight end Milt Morin is second in scoring with 31 points on three touchdowns, 10 PAT's and one field goal. Landry is sixth with 224 points.

Paul Milnar, defensive end, is fourth in punting with a 34.6 average.

In the rushing department Landry has moved into third place with Phil Vandersea, Redmen fullback, in fourth.

MORIN is holding down the fourth position in pass receptions with 12 for 286 yards.

Basketball Practice Sessions Begin

Fifteen candidates reported to Head Coach Johnny Orr for the opening of the UMass varsity basketball practice sessions this week.

FIVE LETTERMEN from last year's team that finished 13-11 overall and 8-2 in the Yankee Conference were among the group. The lettermen are: senior guard Clarence Hill, 6' (Washington, D. C.) and juniors John Lisack, 6'3" (Allendale, N.J.), and Frank Stewart, 6'4" (Lynfield), forwards, and guards Jim Babyay, 6'3" (Easthampton), and Mike Meola, 5'11" (Schenectady, N.Y.). Senior forward Jack Forst, 6'4" (Union, N.J.) and junior guard Bob Murphy, 6'1" (No. Andover) also reported back.

Coach Orr will be minus the services of lettermen Tim Edwards, 6'4" (Duquesne, Pa.), who did not return to school this fall, and Paul Gullicksen, 6'5" (Quincy), who decided to concentrate on his studies. Both won letters the past two years and were strong rebounders.

OTHER CANDIDATES are eight sophomores—guards Don Alberico, 6' (Utica, N.Y.), Hagan Anderson, 5'11" (Haworth, N.J.), and Rick Perkins, 6'2" (Ramsey, N.J.), forwards Gary Gasperack, 6'4" (W. Springfield), Jim Girotti, 6'5" (W. Springfield) and Russ Vitallo, 6'3" (Schenectady, N.Y.) and centers Billy Tindall, 6'5" (Mt. Kisco, N.Y.), and Greg Rand, 6'5" (Marblehead).

Redmen Are Hoping To Spoil BU's Homecoming Celebration

by Mike Gould

EVERY WEEK IS homecoming for Vic Fusia's Redmen, and this Saturday our heroes are guests at Boston University's festivities. The game will be the third successively in which UMass or its foe has had its alumni present to support the Alma Mater.

THUS FAR IN 1965, the Redmen have found the homecoming atmosphere to their fancy. Redmen fans will remember the 20-7 defeat which UConn absorbed at the hands of UMass as Fusia's hard-hearted boys took away a bit of the gaiety from the Huskie homecoming.

URI TRIED hard to give the Redmen a taste of their own medicine last week, but the Redmen rose to the occasion with their best effort of the season to date—a 30-0 whipping of the Rams.

TO MAKE IT three wins in a row, the Redmen must outplay a solid and spirited BU team.

COACH WARREN SCHMAKEL, in his second year at the helm, has his beantown boys riding the crest of a 2-1-1 record. The Terriers have lost only to Maine, tops in the Yankee Conference, while defeating Temple and Buffalo and playing Holy Cross to a tie.

BU'S STRENGTH LIES in its stingy defensive unit, a group which has allowed only five touchdowns in four games.

The Terriers will counter the Redmen beef with a defensive line averaging a lusty 230 lbs.

CREW LOSES...

Ron Murphy.

Amherst College's Crew Coach Hank Dunbar commented on the fine showing and great potential demonstrated by the UM crew.

THE UMASS CREW is looking forward to a successful season this coming spring. Tentatively, they have races scheduled with Harvard, Boston U., and Amherst. They also are looking forward to entering the Rusty Callow Regatta in Worcester and the Dad Vall Regatta to be held in Philadelphia.

Leading the charge will be 240 lb. tackles Eleo Remis and Ray Norton. Should the Redmen elect to go to the air, BU will present obstacles in the persons of safety Earl Lewis and corner backs Ed Sindoni and Jim Banks.

The BU offensive show features the passing of quarterback Bob Kobus to ends Jim Donahue (5'9, 165 lbs.) and Bob Nichols. Backs Pete Hayes, Dave LaRoche, and Dick Farley will be the chief rushing objectives of Redmen defenders.

THE REDMEN are in good shape for this week's big game, defensive tackle Dick Qualey being the only questionable starter. Soph Doug Faucette will spell Qualey if the latter is incapacitated.

The offensive unit is intact, with Mitchell, Gogick, Harrigan, Santucci, and Connor doing the job up front, while Landry plays catch with Morin and Meers, and Detore, Lewis and Vandersea lug the leather.

The Redmen defensive squad, so brilliant of late, will feature the great line play of Ed Toner and Bob Santucci; and the line-backing wizardry of Bernie Dallas, Rod Brooks, and Dave Kelley.

THE RUMOR IS that Coach Fusia has had his Redmen on a special diet for the past week. All meals have consisted solely of rare dog-meat and Boston Baked Beans. Let us hope that the boys will have acquired a taste for such a delicacy by Saturday afternoon.

Phil Vandersea will be the starting fullback against B.U.

Dick Lewis will start on both offense and defense tomorrow.

University Policies Are Challenged By SWAP Delegates

by Peter Hendrickson,
Managing Editor

Editor Note: Stories on the controversy discussions will be published in Wednesday's Collegian. Topics were incentives, faculty senate and four-college co-operation.

Senior curfews and other University policies were challenged this weekend at the sixth annual SWAP conference held at the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, Mass.

Over 150 students, faculty and administrators met this weekend to explore activities problems away from the commitments of the University and on an equal footing with each other.

Delegates from the various offices and organizations met in discussion groups and controversy sessions in hopes of strengthening both group interaction and the internal structures of the participating groups.

SWAP, Student Workshop on Activities Problems, was a more successful venture this year than last according to Kip Johnson, chairman. Kip said, "The discussions have been more dynamic this year, possibly because topics have been centered primarily towards the specific problems of the organizations and not toward general University problems."

THE SPIRIT of honest, independent thinking and discussion was set Friday night by keynote speaker, Dr. Robert Stanfield of the sociology dept. who called for more permissive University policies to allow students to mature more quickly and fully. He said he hopes the school will reach a more satisfactory balance between the cloister of protective regulations and the call for free and responsible experimentation in student life.

Daylight hours Saturday were filled with informal examination of policy and operations by residence groups; service and religious groups, communications media, class representatives; and theatre, arts and music representatives.

Perhaps the most dramatic fruits of discussion were plucked by delegates from the Women's Residence Halls whose representative Mina Blackwell called for more freedom so that women may become more "useful citizens at the University and in the world."

MINA'S PLEA for support from the delegates was typical of the innovations outlined during the day. The delegates at large endorsed the following four-point proposal:

- Seniors and those over 21 shall have permission to live off campus since they are mature and responsible students, judged to be legally responsible citizens. Housing in the Amherst Area would be available the representatives discovered.

- The signature of the Head of Residence shall not be required on the blue overnight cards as it does not truly signify overnight permission but is only used for location in case of an emergency.

- Seniors and those over 21 will not be required to observe curfews with the possibility of dorm keys for those older women, or special night watchmen, or friends to wait up or an exclusive senior dorm.

- The final proposal calls for a repeal of Sec. 6, Art. 3 of the Women's Dormitory Regulation Code which has required hosts to countersign when their guests return in the evening.

These proposals will be followed up with a meeting Thursday, Nov. 4 for all others interested. The allegiance and support of the Women Affairs Committee of the Senate is assured.

The move to lift some of the residence restrictions took time to develop in the discussion sections as Mina pointed out, "We were afraid to say what we really felt until we got warmed up and realized that we were not here to talk platitudes but to air our grievances and better our conditions."

THE VOTE to accept the recommendation of the discussion group was cast without dissent although a few hands were conspicuously unmoved. Miss Helen Curtis, dean of women, stated later that she does not "make the rules."

Mina Blackwell plans to launch a campaign even before the November meeting. She said she has received indications of support from many fronts but admits that the stickiest problem may be finding an acceptable method of enforcing any revision in regulations that may result.

Summaries of the other discussion sections included the following points:

- Men's dormitories need a stronger council.
- Sororities should not be on the defensive in their dealings

Stanfield Addresses SWAP; Seeks Balanced Campus Society

by Peter Hendrickson,
Managing Editor

Dr. Robert Stanfield told University of Massachusetts student leaders, faculty and administration members Friday night that many students feel they are worthless marginal citizens—unproductive members of society.

This feeling, he told SWAP delegates, may explain the Berkeley revolt and the recent rage for student activism that has sparked protest marches, teach-ins and sit-ins throughout the country.

The seventh annual Student Workshop on Activities Problems began Friday in the Red Lion Inn in Stockbridge, Mass., a small Berkshire community 60 miles from the University campus site of the first conference.

Two days of idea-swapping were scheduled.

Stanfield reminisced about his own undergraduate activities at City College of New York and mused over the thousands of hours spent in the counter part of the Hatch. He said that "extracurricular activities have a strong educational value and believes patterns of adult behavior are highly influenced by these activities that are outside the scope of the classroom."

He noted that universities and colleges have constructed a wall between the students and society. This, he said, prolongs the maturation process.

As one contemporary phrased it, "When are you going to stop going to school and become an honest individual?" He laments the unfortunate, "moratorium on consequent lingering adolescence."

It fact he hopes that Thorau's idea of a more simplistic education will be achieved with adult responsibility with the

Senate Approves Liquor Study

LIQUOR STUDY—Rules were suspended by the Senate to approve a resolve calling for the creation of a special commission, which will investigate and study the laws of the Commonwealth regulating the manufacture, transportation, storage and sale of alcoholic beverages. The resolve, sponsored by Senator Oliver F. Ames (R-Boston), was sent to the House. The commission will consist of two Senators, three Representatives, the Attorney General, and five persons named by the Governor.

Freshman Candidate Hour Tomorrow

By Karen Rose
Senate Reporter

Tomorrow at 11:15 a Freshman Candidates Hour will be held in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union.

The Elections Committee of the Student Senate has arranged this first Candidates Hour in hopes that the freshmen will take an interest in their elections.

During the hour the frosh will have a chance to meet and hear speeches by the eight final candidates.

The finalists include William King and Gary LeBeau for president; Douglas Green and Thomas Mitchell for vice-president; Martha Curran and Margie Frey for secretary; and Gary Bianchi and Judy Leach for treasurer.

Many freshmen and upperclassmen have expressed interest in this meet the candidates idea.

In the words of one sophomore: "It's about time that some unification and organized personal contact was established in elections."

A freshman commented that: "... This is a good idea—there are only a few kids who really know the candidates well while the rest of us have nothing to go by."

"Although there are no political parties or candidate platforms on campus this hour will enable the freshman class to acquaint themselves with electioneering on a college level," remarked Senator Jacquie Hall.

The final elections for the class of '69 will be held on Thurs., Oct. 28 in the lobby of the Student Union.

SUG Board candidates are reminded that drawings for the arrangement of names on the ballots will be held on Thurs., Oct. 26 at 1:30 in the Senate Office.

Each candidate is reminded that he may send a representative to this drawing but attendance is not mandatory.

Students are reminded that elections for SUG Board representatives will be held on Thurs., Oct. 28 in the Student Union.

Alabama Atty. Gen. To Speak At Amherst On Civil Rights

By Flora Jacobs
News Staff

Alabama's Attorney General, Richmond M. Flowers will speak at Johnson Chapel, Amherst College, tomorrow night at 9:00.

Flowers, who will speak on "Southern Justice" personally handled the State of Alabama's case against Tom Coleman, alleged murderer of civil rights worker Jonathan M. Daniels of Keene, N.H., and the case against Collie Leroy Wilkins, Jr., charged with the murder of Mrs. Viola Gregg Liuzzo of Illinois.

Coleman was indicted by a county grand jury for manslaughter, defined in Alabama as killing "intentionally without malice."

Flowers tried unsuccessfully to obtain a postponement of the early October trial because the state's key witness was hospitalized and was too ill to testify.

The next day he again requested a postponement until the state could better prepare itself for the trial... this too was denied and Circuit Judge T. Werth Thagard put the case into the hands of local officials. The verdict in the end was not guilty.

As Time Magazine put it: "Nonetheless, Attorney General Flowers, a courageous, outspoken anti-segregationist whose own life was threatened during the trial, denounced the verdict as an outrage."

Flowers said in response: "Now those who feel they have a license to kill, maim, and destroy have been issued that license."

In the trial of Collie Wilkins, Jr., Flowers lost all attempts in the Hayneville courthouse to purge the jury of race prejudice. The New York Times stated that the jury "included six men who said on Monday that they believed in the superiority of the white race, six former members and two present members of the Citizens Council and four men who said they believed white civil rights workers to be inferior persons."

Despite the efforts of Flowers, the trial proved to the Negroes of Lowndes County in which Hayneville is situated, that it well deserved its title of "bloody Lowndes."

During the trial, which ended with the acquittal of Wilkins Trooper H.L. Burgess of the Alabama State Police repeated the account of Mrs. Liuzzo's murder on the night of March 25, 1965.

He recalled how he found the car in a grassy slope with its windows shattered. Inside he found a .38-caliber slug, and the victim's body.

Later on, Leroy Morton, the 20 year old Negro who was in the car with Mrs. Liuzzo, related how the attack took place.

Quoted from the New York Times, defense counsel Hanes then asked him abruptly, "Leroy, was it part of your duties as transportation officer to make love to Mrs. Liuzzo?" Joseph Gantt, Flowers's assistant, leaped to his feet to object and the objection was sustained.

With the acquittal of Wilkins, Flowers expressed with regret his belief that the entire case would now become a dead issue.

UN Representative From Norway at DVP

Distinguished Visitors Program will present his excellency Sivert A. Nielsen, permanent representative of Norway to the United Nations, on Wed., Oct. 27 at 8:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Having had the distinct honor of twice serving as President of Council, Nielsen is well qualified to speak on "The United Nations at the Crossroads."

Acclaimed as one of the leading statesmen in the tricky business of international relations, Ambassador Nielsen first served as Security Council president in August, 1963, and served again in August, 1964.

This post is considered by many well qualified observers among the most dangerously sensitive in the world today.

Before coming to the United Nations Ambassador Nielsen was Chief of Section, Norwegian Ministry of Defense and Director of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) International Staff.

Nielsen also helped to develop an integrated program for the defense of NATO and was also responsible for the negotiations of the Command System for Northern Europe under NATO.

A key figure in international relations, Sivert Nielsen's outlook on world affairs is knowledgeable and respected.

Blood Drive Begins Today Donor Registration for

Beginning today, recruiters will go to individuals in all campus residences to seek volunteer donors for the annual campus blood drive.

Registration forms will also be available in the Student Union lobby every afternoon this week for commuters and graduate students.

Anyone in normal health between the ages of 18 and 59, is eligible to give blood.

Since parental permission is necessary for those under 21, committee of the University Women will mail letters to parents asking permission and giving information about the Red Cross Blood Insurance Program.

Each donor becomes a member of the Hampshire County Blood Insurance Program. The provisions of this program are as follows:

By donating a pint of blood, a person automatically becomes a member of the Insurance Program.

Membership entitles the donor and his immediate family living under one roof to any blood they need during the next 12 months.

Members of the Program and their families will receive free blood without having to replace it. Non-members are required to replace pint for pint as soon as possible.

When you give a pint of Blood Drive you also contribute to a special pool specifically reserved for the personal use of any UMass student in case of emergency.

with the other groups and offices on campus. They should realize that criticism from the administration is in their own self-interest. There is a lack of communication between the houses that must be corrected.

• The class discussion pointed to the need for greater awareness of the class members in regards of class business. More Collegian and news letter coverage will be used. A Sunshine Committee will be established to visit infirmaries—ridden students to remind them the classes do care about them. Exchange students at other schools will receive Collegians in a swap program. The classes seemed to fear excessive faculty control of the organizations. The budgets will be submitted in the Spring.

• The services group decided that the most valuable organizations are those that perform a definite service but that Keys, Scrolls and revelers received the most criticism.

• The Communications and Arts seminar recommended that University services be available on Saturday. A managerial training session could be set up in the fall. More professional assistance should be available for the staffers to offer a higher quality educational experience and lessen the work load.

A photopool should be set up to reduce time and expense. Publicity Liaison services should be available for publicity chairmen. A comprehensive calendar of events must be arranged to serve the community.

Critique should continue its services as they are valuable to both students and professors in assessing the worth of courses and the quality of teaching. It was advised the critiques be mandatory in all courses, though.

The Collegian should serve the campus community and should do more to inform the readers about the services of the administration and the achievements of the faculty.

It was strongly recommended that the communications media experiment more as the learning experience would be greater.

Technical Paper To Be Presented

Dr. Charles E. Hutchinson, associate professor of electrical engineering at the University of Massachusetts, will present a research paper to the National Electronics Conference next week in Chicago, Ill.

To be presented Oct. 26, the technical paper presents a technique whereby a satellite and an inertial system are combined to provide a navigational system.

Dr. Hutchinson is co-author of the paper with Dr. B. E. Bona, supervisor of the research and engineering division at Autonetics, a division of North American Aviation, Inc. The title of their research report is "Optimum Reset of an Inertial Navigator from Satellite Observations."

Hutchinson received his bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from Illinois Institute of Technology in 1957. He was awarded his master of science and Ph.D. degrees by Stanford University, both in electrical engineering.

He joined the UMass engineering faculty this year. He is a member of Sigma Xi and Eta

Caravan Arrives Wed. To Back War Protests

The peace caravan of the New England Committee for Non-Violent action is scheduled to be at UMass on Wednesday, Oct. 27.

The caravan will have already visited throughout New England, including stops at Dartmouth, Middlebury, Bates, Williams and Bennington Colleges, and the Universities of Vermont, Maine and New Hampshire.

On Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 the members of the caravan will hold a workshop on Non-Violence, to be given in the Bartlett Faculty Lounge, and open to anyone interested in learning non-violent techniques or the background behind them.

Wednesday evening at 6:30 there will be a lecture-discussion on "How to end the war in Vietnam" in the Nantucket Room, SU.

The stated purpose of this CNVA group is "to encourage protest against and resistance to continued US participation in the war in Vietnam . . . and to broaden discussion and action from the focus of the war in Vietnam to consideration of the whole question of military preparation and military foreign policy in the United States, with emphasis on non-violent alternatives, both nationally and internationally."

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

Castro! Why The Exodus?

Fidel Castro's speech of two weeks ago reflected a marked deviation from his previous line. In the seven years that have elapsed since the ousting of Batista, Castro has repeatedly emphasized his role as protector of the Cubans from the "American Imperialists". The question now in the forefront is why is he encouraging an exodus from Cuba to the "Yankee Paradise".

Since the Revolution the Castro dictatorship has had to cope with a steady stream of setbacks. An unsuccessful attempt to industrialize, The U.S. economic blockade, lack of finances, and an internal split in the Communist Party all have prevented Castro from realizing the ideals of the Revolution. The dictator's accomplishments up to now have done little but arm the Americans with anti-Castro propaganda.

In an attempt to turn the direction of propaganda, Castro has stated that the earlier ban on leaving the Island was a dictate of the U.S. and not the responsibility of the Castro Regime. By encouraging immigration to the U.S., without that government's consent, Castro presented himself as the all-powerful leader capable of dominating America's conduct. This action can be interpreted as an attempt at the reconstruction of an image of himself that has gradually been torn apart.

Castro's action can also be seen as a maneuver to rid Cuba of certain unbenevolent elements. He has opened a path along which troublesome revolutionaries can be conducted out of Cuba. Encouragement of immigration also provides a useful method of exposing the Anti-Castro segment of the population.

The new immigration policy may also be a move to divert the population's attention from a regime suffering from a prolonged illness. The disappearance of Castro's #2 man, the pro-Chinese Guevara, and the further development of an involved bureaucracy along Russian lines all have had the effect of reinforcing Castro's image as a puppet of Moscow. This move to promote an exodus places the Premier of Cuba in a role he hasn't acted for some time—that of an independent, iron-willed leader.

In accepting refugees the United States is acting as a "good humor man". We are bowing to the desires of Castro. Anti-Castro Revolutionaries in Florida are a potential source of embarrassment to the U.S. The same malcontents if left in Cuba at least leave hope for the fomenting of a counter-revolution from within.

Goals of Education: Part I

College and the Cult

"The result of your college education will probably be to reinforce the biases and prejudices of your class."

When Dr. Feldman made this statement in his Psychology 101 class recently, it disturbed some students.

It is upsetting to be told that one is wasting four years of one's life.

So Dr. Feldman was asked for a clarification of his statement.

In the last two thousand years, the professor explained, we have made some improvement in man's condition. But we have improved most in areas such as technology and medicine, where science in accepted with more confidence.

Man has failed most in areas where science is just getting a foothold—in the social sciences.

In the humanities, the same problems that have existed for the last two thousand years still exist. We still can not define truth, justice or beauty.

After centuries of questioning, why haven't we come up with some answers?

Because, says Dr. Feldman, we are still depending on magic and mysticism to solve these problems.

Magic and mysticism is more pervasive in our society than is science.

Scientists advise us on such problems as population, feeding the masses, reclamation, crime prevention and city planning.

And who pays any attention to them?

When the scientist tries to help in these areas, people treat him with disrespect. They call him an egg-head, a crack-pot, a dreamer.

Educated people are not much more tolerant in this respect than are the non-educated.

It is futile to hope that a little education will undo the damage done to men's minds by thousand of years of magic and mysticism.

The teachers themselves are not free of magic and mysticism.

In fact, there are many areas of education where the person who is unadorned with these influences (the atheist), will not be allowed.

More colleges will fight the appointment of an avowed atheist than support it.

Professors can not always openly espouse their beliefs. Often, teachers are criticized for making remarks against the cherished beliefs of people.

And so there is a constant struggle to maintain the traditional academic freedom.

Dr. Feldman sees little hope for the future.

It is hopeless to expect students to come to college and suddenly see the light. The history of education is against such an illumination. "Education is the white man's fetish."

The only hope is that education will make a small dent and over the centuries, we may feel some effect.

Presently, several institutions exist on campus which hinder any effect education might have.

With the growth of a mammoth university, pressure has been put on the university to permit religious centers to encroach on the college.

There is no place for organized religion on campus.

Religions are not interested in finding the truth; they want to sell their own version of the truth. Since religions are trying to win converts and retain their present adherents, they do not examine all sides of the question.

When Bertrand Russell gives a lecture at the Newman Center, Dr. Feldman will believe differently.

Does 'Quiet' Mean 'Peace'?

To the Editor:

As the war in Vietnam intensifies there is one probable consequence that greatly disturbs us. The readiness of the government and large sectors of the public to suppress by slander and intimidation legitimate and peaceful dissent is an uncalled for violation of democratic liberties. The supporters of the Administration have by careful selection of the facts even argued that domestic protests encourage significantly the Vietcong effort. Implicit in this argument is the suggestion that if domestic dissent was stifled, Vietcong morale would decline enough to interest the involved parties in negotiations. The failure to achieve negotiations by escalating the war would seem to indicate that the Vietcong and North Vietnam are not interested in negotiations, regardless of American public opinion.

The purpose of the escalation as originally conceived was to bring about negotiations. We have failed in this and we must now re-examine our policy. In such a complex and amorphous situation no one can claim to have the absolutely correct policy. The Administration's failure to achieve negotiations through escalation certainly indicates that it is not infinitely wise. To stifle dissent and criticism by the use of innuendo and character assassination would be asserting this while making a mockery of the ideal of a "free and open society".

Soc. Club Stages Harlem Symposium

by Joanne Rogers
Feature Staff

For all the students who have followed the policies and plans of LBJ in his War on Poverty and the demonstrations of the Negro in Selma and Washington, the Sociology Club is presenting this Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the S.U. a symposium of social workers from East Harlem.

Benjamin Garcia, grass roots director of the Neighborhood Youth Corps, will be one of the three principal speakers.

His interest is in the activities of the social workers in organizing the now incorporated Youth Corps, and of the present activities of the Corps in Harlem. His "brain child" now has over 350,000 underprivileged children enrolled in the program. TIME accredits the Youth Corps for the prevention of a major riot comparable to the famed Watts incidence.

Ralph Lopez, a Puerto Rican negro representative of the American Friends Service Committee from East Harlem will discuss his activities with the Youth Corps and HARYOU-ACT, the War on Poverty's counterpart to the Youth Corps.

Lastly, Reverend Roy Hanson, director of the American Friends Service Committee of East Harlem and of the recently incorporated Sheffield Projects will be the third of the interesting speakers. His major concern is with the newly established Sheffield School for High School Drop Outs.

These speakers are all co-workers and together will evaluate the War on Poverty—its assets and shortcomings.

Good Grades Preferred

(ACP) — Texas Tech is the only college in the nation where students have no one to blame but themselves for late registration times, reports the Daily Toreador.

At Tech, top students register first under the college's unique scholastic rank-order system of registration.

Only graduate students and entering freshmen are not included in the scholastic order time assignments.

To determine a student's rank-order number, the total number of hours and total number of grade points the student has accumulated are added together. Students with higher numbers receive registration time priority.

Grade point averages are not considered. A person may register before someone with more hours than he has by having better grades.

Entering freshmen were allowed to register during the summer, or if unable to pre-register, were given the first day. Previously, freshmen registered last.

DVP Will Host Irish Harpist

An Irish singer and harpist with an international reputation for her renditions of traditional Irish songs and harp airs will perform at the University of Massachusetts this week.

Grainne Yeats (pronounced Granya Yates) will perform Wednesday, Oct. 27, at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium. Her appearance is being sponsored by the UMass department of English in conjunction with DVP.

Miss Yeats is making her first American tour, having won wide acclaim for her concerts and radio and television broadcasts throughout Ireland, Britain and on the European continent.

Her repertoire of over 200 songs and harp airs is the culmination of a life-long study of Irish traditional music. The oldest music to be performed will be the 14th century "Lament of Tristan."

Univ. To Present Renowned Baritone

Tom Krause, outstanding Finnish baritone, will be the guest artist for the second concert in this season's University of Massachusetts Concert Association series.

Mr. Krause, a regular member of the Hamburg (Germany) Opera, will perform in the Student Union Ballroom Tuesday, Oct. 26, at 8 p.m.

The United States debut of the young opera singer was in 1963 when he performed the American premiere of Benjamin Britten's "War Requiem" with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

With the Hamburg Opera Company, Mr. Krause has sung in many European operatic centers, including the Bayreuth Festival in Germany; La Scala; Berlin; and Vienna. In his native Finland, Mr. Krause is regarded as the leading singer of the works of Sibelius, to which he contributes a perfect command of Finnish, Swedish, German, and English.

Tickets for the concert are on sale now at the Student Union and will be available at the door the evening of the performance. Season tickets can still be obtained for the remaining seven concerts of this year's series.

DeVarney Sets Records

Maine Defeats Rams to Cinch Yan-Con Bean Pot

by John Cunningham,
Sports Editor

Any hopes that UMass might have had for the Yankee-Conference beanpot were dashed as Maine rolled over Rhode Island last Saturday to the tune of 36-0.

Dick DeVarney, who was instrumental in the defeat of the Redmen, led the charge as he passed for three touchdowns and picked up 210 yards rushing.

Three conference records were set by DeVarney while leading Maine to its 5-0 record in the Yan-Con. The records were most scoring passes thrown (11); completed passes (71); and total passing yardage (859).

Maine is on its way to an undefeated season as its record against teams both in and out of the conference, is now 6-0.

The victory means that Maine is now rated third in the nation among small schools.

Even if the Redmen win the rest of their conference games the best that they can do is a second place finish. Maine has gained its revenge for UMass domination of the Yankee-Conference during the past few years.

One thing Redmen fans have to root for is that Greg Landry has a good chance to beat two of the records set by DeVarney this season. Greg has still two more conference games to play this season and he could run his completions up from 48 to the record of 71; also Greg's 712 yds total passing yardage is a sure bet to be increased enough to beat DeVarney's 859.

Improving UMass Soccer Team Defeats Jumbos 4-1

IN A ROUGH, hard-fought soccer match, the Redmen downed Tufts, 4-1, at Amherst Saturday. Bill Burgess paced the attack with two goals as UMass ran its season record to 4-3. Although both teams played exceptionally hard, Massachusetts held the edge throughout the game to send the Jumbos to their eighth setback in nine contests.

When the game was just 31 seconds old Burgess headed in the first score. It was the result of an apparent mixup by Tufts. The visitors came right back, to score at 3:48 on a goal by forward George Meyfarth.

A CORNER KICK by Marty Smith was deflected by a Tufts player into his goal for a UMass tally at 20:17 of the second quarter. This bizarre score turned out to be the winning margin.

BURGESS SCORED his second goal at 5:47 of the third quarter when he lobbed a rebound over the head of the Jumbo goalie into the net. The score remained 3-1 until the game was all but wrapped up by Phil Bozenhard, who scored with just 22 seconds left in the third period. Richard Hale was credited with an assist on the play.

THE REDMEN ENJOYED an edge in shots taken, as the Tufts' goal tenders combined for 27 saves. UMass goalies had to make only fourteen saves. The offense was outstanding, and the defense played a good game. Coordination between the two, which had been lacking this season, showed an improvement.

Bill Burgess's two goals gave him the team lead in scoring. He has been something of a sensation of late, scoring five goals in his last two games for a total of seven on the season. For this senior forward, the season has just begun.

A UMass attackman uses his head as the Redmen defeated Tufts 4-1 in a hard-fought contest.

First UMass Judo Team To Open Season

JUDO COMES TO U. OF MASS.

This year, for the first time in the history of the University, it will be represented by a Judo team in intercollegiate competition.

The 40 member Judo team has high hopes for the coming season. It has been practicing for the past month in preparation for its first exhibition match against Northeastern on October 30. This match is to be followed by others against MIT, Williams and various other New England colleges and universities. These matches are to prepare the team for the New England intercollegiate championship, in which the U. of Mass. team hopes to be a definite contender.

This year's team has an advantage over the other New England teams, in that it has three brown belts to spearhead it to victory. Robert Biglio is the instructor for the Amherst branch of the team. Frank Ingram (New England all-around brown belt champion) and Bruce Kirby are both on the UMass. Boston branch of the team.

Any organization desiring a demonstration should contact Richard Rheume, Rm. 414, Grayson.

Intramural Report

By Dave Jarnes

The regular intramural football season has ended but two league championships are still up in the air.

THE UNDERDOG Mills Cherrys went into their final game, with the powerful Plymouth Patriots, needing a win to tie the Pats for first in the west dorm league. The fired up Cherrys not only accomplished this goal, but did so in a convincing manner with a resounding 25-0 victory.

Defense told the story in this game as time and time again the hard-charging Cherry line forced the Patriots, who had been averaging over thirty points per game, into numerous errors while supplying a superb offense themselves in the person of quarterback Gary Gibbons (3TD passes, 1TD scored).

These came two teams will meet again to determine the league champion.

MEANWHILE, in the north league, the Thatcher Redwoods, led by Knight's passing (15-23) wound up in second place, ahead of the Grayson Aces by beating the Aces 25-21.

In another makeup game the Thatcher Hemlocks completed a sweep for Thatcher with a close 7-6 victory over the Grayson Phallics.

ALTHOUGH the Greenough Grants displayed a tough defense, the Baker Buffaloes were able to eke out a 9-7 decision. Ed Polchoppek's passing again paved the way for a 20-12 win for the Baker Bruins over the Baker Barracudas.

In the only other dorm game, the Middlesex Redmen walloped the Brett Slippery Elms 38-0.

The Hampshire Hardnoses warmed up for their playoff game with the Untouchables by bombing the Innkeepers 40-0.

Losers of only one game this year, the Philosophers wound up the season with a 42-12 romp of the Charley Browns.

IF AEP defeats PMD today there will be a three-way for first place in the B fraternity league. A coin flip was made to determine who would get the bye and KS won.

AEP will play TKE on Tuesday (assuming AEP beats PMD) and the winner of that game must play KS on Thursday.

LCA, A league champs, must sit and wait until next Monday.

THE ANNUAL all-star touch football game has been set for alumni stadium on Nov. 11, Veterans Day, complete with the band and

Second-Half Comeback Gives UM Redmen Victory Over BU

by Howie Davis

IF YOU ARE A combination of a UMass football fan and a heart patient, the best prescription would be to stay away from the first 30 minutes of Redmen games.

For the third game in a row the UM eleven played far below their potential in the first half and then came back to run the opposition off the field in the last stanza.

LAST SATURDAY the opponent was Boston University. The score at half-time read BU 12 UM 6; the final score was in the favor of the Redmen 34-18.

UMass was without the services of ace cornerback Dave Giarla. Knowing this, BU quarterback, Tom Thornton, immediately started hitting Giarla's side of the defensive backfield for completions. By the time he finished, the young sophomore had picked up 260 yards in the air, four yards short of the B.U. record held by the late Harry Aganis.

The Boston Terriers opened the scoring when Thornton hit halfback Dick Farley on a 32 yard TD pass in the first quarter.

In the second quarter BU scored again and the long bomb was also an aid to this one. Thornton hit Neil Smith for 43 yards down to the Mass nine yard line. Four plays later fullback Pete Hayes took it in from the one. Once again the conversion failed to make it BU 12 UM 0.

Sophomore quarterback Greg Landry finally started to maneuver towards the end of the second quarter. He hit split end Bob Meers for 42 yards down to the BU 24. Between the passing of Landry and the running of Bob Detore and Phil Vandersea the Redmen were able to get on the scoreboard before the end of the half when Vandersea finally scored from the three. Milt Morin's kick failed, to make the score BU 12 UM 6.

UM HEAD COACH VIC Fusia says or DOES something to his football team at halftime. He has to. For the third week in a row his charges completely steamrolled the opposition after the twenty minute break.

The Redmen scored three times in the third quarter. Detore scored from the two after a short BU punt landed on the Terriers' 35 yard line. Don Durkin, men uniform brought the ball in close enough for the shifty Detore. Morin's kick was perfect and UM held a 13-12 lead.

DURKIN TOOK care of the next Redmen score after Leo Biron recovered a BU fumble on the Terriers' 10. Durkin carried twice, the second time from the four for a score. Morin's kick made it 20-12.

Landry scored the most sensational TD of the day when he shook off three BU tacklers at the line of scrimmage, regained his seemingly-lost balance and scampered 33 yards for a TD. Landry was so close to going down that the referee had nearly blown the play dead.

THE FINAL REDMEN SCORE was a series of 12 plays that covered 96 yards. In the series there was only one pass, a nine yard completion to Durkin. The drive exhibited the hard running of the entire backfield. Durkin picked up his yardage around the ends as Vandersea, Detore and Landry went through the line. Vandersea plunged over from the two to cap the scoring.

Halfback Don Durkin slices through the B.U. line for a large gain that helped to set up the second Redmen score. The Redmen went on to crush the Terriers 34-18.

SUG Hatch Study Now Under Way

by Richard Danca,
Day Editor

Studies of the Hatch and of bulletin boards in the Student Union are now being made by the Student Union Governing Board (SUG) with reports due out of committee at the Nov. 4 SUG Board meeting.

Action on the two studies is expected to begin as soon as possible. "Something will be done this year," said Sheila McGrevey, SU Program Advisor.

The Hatch Study Committee, headed by Kip Johnson, is looking into the possibility of enlarging the facilities and methods of speeding the food lines. They are complementing their own ideas with student surveys. Interested students can contact them through the RSO office.

The other members of the four man committee are Joseph Champagne, Lauren Mokaba and Prof. Robert Conouyer.

The Bulletin Board Study Committee, concerned mostly with the bulletin boards outside the Hatch, will make a complete re-evaluation of all SU bulletin boards, including requests for specific club notice boards.

Elections of class representatives to the SUG Board will be held tomorrow in the Union. SUG Board officers will be elected at the regular Nov. 4 meeting.

In other Student Union news, the men's bowling leagues start action this week and the women's bowling leagues meet to consider organization next Monday.

The leagues will bowl on Tuesdays once the season has begun.

The SU Program Council is now completing plans for a competitive intercollegiate sing to be held here in the spring. The sing will be sponsored by the Arts and Music Committee which is presently co-sponsoring the Art Corridor exhibits with the University's Art Department.

Two exhibits currently on display, "Emerson's New England" and William Kent's Collection will continue here through November 7.

The Drawing Society National Exhibition will be placed on display November 5.

Tuesday Meeting Sees New Accord Reached In Faculty-Student Clash

by Karen Rose,
Senate Reporter

At an informal meeting yesterday attended by representatives from the Student Senate, Faculty Senate, and Administration it was decided that the current discrepancies concerning the present state of the Student Affairs Committee of the Faculty Senate should be resolved through negotiation.

This committee was formed last spring and written into the present Faculty Senate constitution.

Discrepancies arose at a Student Senate meeting last week over the manner of appointment of student members to this committee.

The Student Senate felt that the by-laws of the Faculty Senate Constitution from which SAC derived its power could be exploited and that as Student Senator Flynn pointed out "the Faculty Senate could legally take over campus publications and indeed the Student Senate."

Dissent also arose because the R.S.O. committee, Disciplinary Board committee, Student Social Affairs committee and Foreign Students Affairs committee all previously University committees—have been incorporated as sub-committees of the Student Affairs Committee. This in essence makes them committees of the Faculty Senate.

Here Faculty Senator Clay attempted to defend this assertion by saying that "University committees are in essence University-faculty committees."

Faculty Senator Wellman added that the primary motivation behind the formation of this committee was not faculty takeover of student rights, but a move on the part of the faculty to prevent administrative encroachment.

"The 5-4-1 (faculty-student-administration) ratio of the committee is justified by the fact that this is a faculty committee," Wellman stated.

Here Prof. DellaGratte spoke strongly in student favor saying that "the locus of power (at UMass) should rest in the student body."

In opposition Clay claimed that the faculty has the advantage because "it is a professional body concerned with the University." He concluded that therefore the faculty has the right to make recommendations concerning student affairs.

Under this general discussion it was brought out that the Faculty Senate could conceivably overrule Student Senate actions.

At this point Wellman admitted that the faculty senate had made an error because student opinion was not solicited before establishing this committee.

Student-Faculty Factions Split SWAP "Controversy Group"

Editor's Note: This is the first in a series on the SWAP "Controversial Groups" discussions. Dan Glosband is a former editor-in-chief of the Collegian.

by Dan Glosband

"Controversy Groups" read the schedule, and the discussion on incentives fulfilled all controversial expectations. Discussion leader Jim Allen had his administrative hands full trying to control a vociferous battle between a Collegian-centered pro-incentive segment and a more conservative faculty-administration element.

Dr. Ray Wyman and Robert Morrissey delivered opening statements indicating opposition to paid incentives for the sake of payment. Wyman pointed to the need for student participation in extra-curriculars purely on the basis of interest and desire. Morrissey noted that remuneration should be offered to need students whose participation in activities prevents them from taking part time employment or work scholarships.

Collegian forces posed the rhetorical question, "When does an activity cease being a learning experience and become a job?" Present Collegian structure was cited as containing many time consuming, trivial, necessary tasks, which involve little learning or thought. The problem of securing people willing to do these thankless chores is a difficult one, which might be solved by financial incentive, they said.

An alternative proposal of filling these slots with paid professional, technical assistants would remove the problem and alleviate the need for monetary incentive to other staff positions, who would no longer have such technical work in addition to their regular jobs.

A similar technical program was seen as a possibility for solving related problems in WMUA. Despite the initial arguments, general group agreement was that some corrective measures are needed to solve the incentive, and the closely time problem.

The time issue becomes a problem when lower level incentive and responsibility are lacking, and the upper officers of an organization are left with much of the trivia, along with their administrative duties.

The financial remuneration and technical assistance suggestions emerged as prime areas of investigation for the Student Senate to pursue, if efforts are to be made towards removing the problems of product-service producing student organizations.

Alabama Attorney General Calls For Moderation

By Pat Petow
4-College Reporter

"I have called and begged in my state for moderation," said the Attorney General of Alabama, Tue. evening, Oct. 26, at Johnson Chapel, Amherst Col.

Those in the extreme, defined Atty. Gen. Richmond M. Flowers, demand "quick and easy solutions" to problems.

He thought radical ideas have produced most of the significant changes in our civilization and that extremes are offered to the problems of the Cold War, the Vietnam war, nuclear disarmament. "Yes, even in Alabama," he said, "extremes are most certainly present in our problems... both social and economic."

"PATRIOTISM...the pride of citizenship" places an "obligation to the law of society" and "force...by its very nature lacerates and destroys human freedom," Flowers declared.

Thus, "no society, whether free or tyrannical, can give its citizens the right to break the law; we cannot sanction terror." He appealed, there being "no easy solutions to man's inhumanity to man," "Let us not forget there is nothing new in violence."

Emphasizing his belief in observance of the law, but saying "Let there be no question of where we stand on human rights," the state attorney general quoted a Supreme Court Justice who predicted first chaos and then tyranny for the society which allows each individual to judge the law for himself. He hoped that no one would "err in the belief that the law can be best administered" by taking it in one's own hands.

"CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE" in his opinion, "is negative" where we (do) require "affirmative" action.

The decisions of the not-sacrosanct Supreme Court and other expressions of our law and order have their proper time and place of dissent, Flowers pointed out. "Progress cannot be written with an accusing finger," he asserted.

Dissent, of this nature, is honorable but, said the lawyer, should never be an instrument for the destruction of the traditions of "judicial priority."

"We have seen the techniques of civil disobedience," and they are dangerous ad hoc devices, Flowers said citing student protests of university policy and protests against American foreign policy.

IN THE SPEECH, he proposed that they, the civil-disobedient, "must be dealt with severely," those who cherish equal rights must be taught an equal responsibility he continued.

Calling education the "cornerstone of amicable race relations, Flowers did not mean to imply that Negroes in America do not have their grievances."

Flowers ended his address, time for several questions. Of "Southern Justice," allowing George Wallace, described as a political foe, Flowers said, "He will not be the next governor of Alabama." (Wallace's attempt to change the state constitution to be allowed to run again was defeated in the Alabama Senate.)

In the same vein, he suggested that "90 percent of Alabama's troubles have been caused by poor leadership." "Facile demagogues" was the term used in the speech to describe those who bemoan that "our free society is at an end."

HE CONFIDED that he was considering whether to run for governor, senator (possibly against Wallace), or not at all.

In regard to the cases of the accused (and acquitted) murders of Jonathan Daniels and of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo (both civil rights workers), Flowers explained how, he as Attorney General intervened after observing the "Kangaroo Court" which "tried" Daniels' accused murderer, Tom Coleman, and observing the hung-jury of the first Liuzzo trial.

He acted to assume the prosecution against the alleged murderer of Mrs. Liuzzo so that the "state of Alabama would have nothing to apologize for." But Flowers made no attempt to exonerate the jury, which he found objectionable on grounds of cause, or the four members of the state Supreme Court who refused him a writ of mandamus (re: jury selection) against the trial judge.

"I DID the very best I can and no man can do anymore" in the case, Flowers said, and the capacity audience applauded him in answer.

The Attorney General, who asked not so much for endorsement of all his thoughts as for a commitment to his support of the law, received a final standing ovation.

Contract Given To O'Connell's

Governor Volpe announced yesterday the award of a $2,738,941 contract for construction of the new UMass Administration Building to Daniel O'Connell's Sons Inc. of Holyoke.

The modern 275 by 175 feet structure will house the President's office, administrative personnel, data processing equipment and the University records.

The contract includes site preparation, utilities connections, plumbing, heating and elevator work.

Work will begin as soon as possible.

Saturday Night in a Cruiser

Campol's Eternal Vigilance

Editor's Note: Police Reporter Alan Grigsby went along with the campus police cruiser last Saturday night to get this story.

Every Saturday night as the UMass campus gears itself for a night of revelry, the campus police prepare to protect the campus and the students.

Two of these men, Frank Mazzei and auxiliary policeman Dave Southard, worked the 7 p.m. - 3 a.m. shift this Saturday.

Frank Mazzei has been struggling with students for six years, likes night duty best and wouldn't want any other kind of work. The only time patrol gets monotonous, he said, is in the summertime when most of the students have left. "Thanksgiving and Christmas are even worse," he added, "because nobody is around then."

DURING THE NIGHT they patrolled the campus and adjacent areas of Amherst looking for fires, traffic violations, suspicious groups, and checking on University property.

Parts of the campus most students after four years of college never knew existed are checked regularly, although no set pattern of patrol exists.

During the night's patrol, calls from the Amherst and Hadley police and the University telephone operator occasionally break in on the radio. Mazzei had nothing but praise for the campus telephone operators who, he said, were very calm and efficient during an emergency.

These calls ranged widely from stolen car reports to infirmary calls to incidents on campus.

Campus Blood Drive Already Underway

With the help of several student organizations the 1965 UM blood drive recruiting program is off to a flying start. Dormitory counseling and section representatives have begun canvassing their houses for donors. Members of the Inter-Fraternity Council are contacting their fellow Greeks.

Alpha Phi Omega Service Fraternity has set up a booth in the lobby of the Student Union where commuters, graduate students, and those not contacted elsewhere can volunteer.

Aside from contributing to a worthy cause when he gives blood, the student makes blood available to all students in case of emergency. Each blood donor becomes a member of the Red Cross Blood Insurance Program which applies anywhere in this country and in parts of Canada.

Any student enrolled at the University, who is over 18 yrs. of age and weighs more than 110 lbs., may pledge.

The utmost care is taken to provide for the donors' welfare when blood is given. Donors are accepted only after their medical records have been reviewed and they have passed a brief physical examination.

There are no harmful after-effects of donation; resistance to disease is not lowered.

Summer School

Success Portends Better Things

By Pamela Metaxas

"We had 4,800 different students on campus for various sessions this summer, 2500 of which were full time," said Dr. William C. Venman, assistant Provost. He added that the swing-shift system was offered to 350 students and 286 accepted it, a very high percentage of acceptance.

He explained that the swing-shift freshmen were chosen from a pool:

- "those who would not normally be accepted" (for reasons of space)

- "those outstanding students who applied too late"

In a comparison of marks with freshmen who started their year in September, swing-shift marks were found to be about the same.

He believed the difference was caused by the fact that the swing-shift students did not have time to adjust to college. There was too much academic rushing and not enough time to be in contact with more mature students. He also added that the students did not have time to adjust to their professors and to reflect on their reading assignments.

HAVING the swing-shift at nearly 300 students, we are actually taking 3,000 freshmen this year," Dr. Venman pointed out. He called the entire venture a "pioneering" first since UMass was the first to try this in the country. Now Maine and Tenn. have followed, with the help of Mr. Starkweather who had the initial idea.

Venman hastened to say that the swing-shift program was only a part of the '65 summer session. A fine-arts festival was offered that included plays, movies, lectures, concerts and art exhibits.

This summer ('66) two foreign programs are being offered in connection with the fine-arts festival. One is six weeks at Oxford, Eng. at St. Hilda's Col. for $750. The courses in English will relate mainly to the 19th and 20th century.

Another program is at the Univ. of Bologna from June 23-Aug. 18, 1966. The cost per student is $800 and the courses are taught in English for non-Italian speaking students. The courses deal mainly with the Italian summer study abroad is a val-Renaissance.

DR. VENMAN thinks that uable experience for every student and that these new programs are especially beneficial since the University will accept the credits.

"If we are going to have limited resources we are going to allocate our resources where they will do the most good," said Dr. Venman. He sees more of these summer abroad programs as the pathway to expansion of the University's resources.

He does not believe students are taking full advantage of the summer session on campus at the present time. "I'd like to see students consider the summer session as a way of supplementing their education and a ing," he commented.

He also added that several improvements could be made on the summer session. One of these is a solution to the six-week short course. He believes the course to be too fast and the approach the instructor must take with the course too difficult. The student is left with the "stigma of the short course."

The solution may lie in the lengthening of the courses and in the offering of "more upper division courses."

The eventual solution in 5-10 years may possibly be the trimester where the year would be divided into three equal parts. The University would then be in operation year-round and the students and faculty would be free to choose the amount of time they wished to attend school and teach. "All would be equal as far as course offerings and availability of other activities," Dr. Venman concluded.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

"Negotiate, Not Rectify"

Yesterday there gathered in the Colonial Lounge of the Student Union a somewhat indefinable group, indefinable because its jurisdiction to act was predated on little else other than its interest in Student affairs and the maturation of the University.

The basic controversy discussed involved a widening schism between basic student philosophy, as represented by the Student Senate, and prevailing faculty ideas of the theme "University," as espoused by the Faculty Senate. Cries of "Berkeley" and student demonstrations have been heard recently as a result of the conflict between these two groups.

Admittedly there was cause on each side; errors in judgment were admitted by Faculty Senate representatives and student representatives were understandably upset.

There was, then, cause for discussion. The admirable thing about this meeting is that it produced discussion, rational, intelligent debate among interested parties.

Perhaps the most memorable remarks to come from the entire program were those made by the Student Activities Co-Ordinator, Dr. Mark Noffsinger. He said that nobody should claim a victory or a defeat as a result of the meeting.

He pointed out specifically the difference between "rectify" and "negotiate". These two terms had flown through the air at the meeting with a great degree of regularity.

The purpose of the meeting, Noffsinger stressed was negotiation, that the real winner or loser as a result of the confrontation was the University itself, students and faculty alike.

And this is a consideration that should be paramount in the minds of all leaders at all times. The University exists neither specifically for the students nor the faculty. It stands instead as an entity unto itself; more than anything else, a University is an atmosphere in which progress and growth may be achieved. Students and faculty comprise merely the means, the University itself is the ultimate end.

How often is it that the considerations of the times are allowed to dominate vastly their place in the total perspective. In an institution as vast as the University, it is inexorable that a formidable amount of interplay and inter-relationships must be evident.

The striving of each component of a whole to better itself will not readily ameliorate the entire; instead each component must interact with another to produce harmony and progress.

It is certain that conflict and clashes of interest will make themselves apparent frequently in the future of the University. We are all behooved to remember the great perspective of this thing which lies before us. Only by constant cognizance of the ultimate goal, will that goal ever be achieved.

Please--Let It Grow!

In an interview recently, Dr. Gage, Director of the University Health Services, outlined plans for expansion of the Infirmary. He announced that he and the Health Service Board hope to double the size of the infirmary within the next five years.

The crowded conditions at the Infirmary, said Dr. Gage, are due to two mistakes made in planning when it was built in 1957. At that time, enrollment was not expected to reach the ten-thousand mark until 1970. Also, the average number of yearly visits per patient to the Infirmary has increased from 2 to 4 since 1957.

In addition to this, the out-patient facilities have been diminished because of the addition of a mental health and a physical therapy department.

Being suggested for inclusion in the new plan for expansion are new facilities for a mental health department, a physical therapy department, an emergency dental service, and a much larger out-patient department.

Dr. Gage spoke of consideration being given to provisions for treating the families of married students. The expense for this would not be taken from the general student health fee but would be an extra charge to those who elect to take the plan. However, unless response to this plan is great enough, it will not be used because of the expense it entails.

It has also been suggested that facilities for faculty members be incorporated. This will be considered, but if there is any inconvenience to the student because of it, it will be rejected.

Request for funds has been made to the state, and if the plans are approved and supported, the infirmary will have doubled its size by 1970!

The Senate—The Student Voice

The United States Senate is composed of 100 members, each of whom represents many thousands, or even millions of people. Many of these politicians bargain their way into office, while taking only a limited interest in its proceedings. Out of the barrage of bills introduced, only a handful are passed into law. Yet, despite these apparent shortcomings, we still consider our U.S. Senate to be an effective legislative body which represents the people the best way possible.

Here at UMass our Student Senate is nearly as large as the U.S. Senate. However, each senator here is representing only a couple of hundred people. Still, a direct student voice in the Senate is impossible, simply because 12,000 people cannot function together into one body. Therefore, the Senate is a compromise where 60 or so senators work in behalf of 12,000 students and still operate as a single unit.

In any legislative group, direct representation of the people can only be a compromise. Student senators are open for opinions on various issues and will vote in the best interests of their constituencies. If views are not presented by the students, senators can only act in accordance with their own inclinations.

The Senate, however, is powerless to do many things. It can only recommend legislation, not enact it. Everything the Senate recommends must be followed up by administration approval. Insofar as the boundaries of administration sanction allow, the Senate can function as the voice of the students.

Responsible to Parents?

To the Editor:

As a senior woman who has lived for the as yet to be completed four years of my UMass education in a dormitory, I feel compelled to offer my view of the proposed change in University policy regarding women's regulations. My critique will center mainly on the provision of the recommendation concerning off-campus housing for women.

The general consensus of opinion among our educators, psychologists, and psychiatrists is that a girl matures at a much faster (approximately two years faster) rate than a boy until a certain age level at which a leveling off takes place. If a sophomore man (average age 19) can maintain a residence off campus, a senior woman (average age 21) should also be allowed to prove her sense of responsibility and reap the harvest of benefits from living outside the pale of University shelter.

Second, in the past, various officials have relied on the argument, "We have a responsibility to the parents as well as to the students," to deny permission for University women to live off campus. I submit that no University woman whose parents forbid her to live off campus will be given that opportunity, the chief reason being that most women's education is paid for by their parents, who can have the option of paying a dormitory fee or paying a real estate agency. In reality the final judgment rests with the parents since "he who holds the purse strings rules the world." If, on the other hand, a University woman is putting herself totally through college and not relying on her parents, then she has, ipso facto, proved herself to be a responsible adult who has earned the right to "be her own boss" off campus.

UMass Horse Farm Moves To Deerfield

By Ginny Sheinhouse

The UMass Morgan Horse Farm will be moved to new quarters in South Deerfield, Dr. Anthony Borton, assistant professor of veterinary and animal sciences, announced today.

The farm's 30 horses will be moved from their barn near Machmer Hall at the center of campus.

Meanwhile, because of campus construction activity and traffic resulting from the constant expansion of the University, all trail riding has been eliminated.

"The main purpose of the program is educational—to provide students with a sound knowledge of equitation," Dr. Borton said. He observed that this would be impossible to achieve without a new location.

The original plan was to move the horses to the Tilson Farm on the southeast side of campus but it was decided that the same problems would exist.

Dr. Borton described the University's South Deerfield property as having approximately 300 acres between the Connecticut Rv. and Mt. Sugarloaf Reservation. Excellent riding trails on the reservation would be available, he declared.

The barn would accommodate a herd of 30 horses, 24 of which

An indoor riding arena will also be constructed. The arena, would be available for riding, measuring 100 x 180, will include seating facilities, rest rooms and a holding area for stock.

Dr. Borton added that a shuttlebus service will be available to transport students from the Student Union to the farm.

All this is perhaps two years away. The legislature must provide funds before construction can begin.

Under the present program, equitation classes are the first eight weeks of the fall and the last eight of the spring semester. Dr. Borton explained that the new arena will make possible year-round classes for 300 students each semester.

Dr. Borton said the program is aimed at a triple goal: equitation experience; developing student riding instructors; and promoting student participation in horse shows.

President of Mass. Young Reps. Wants Political "Motivation"

John Brandt, the president of the Massachusetts Young Republican Assoc., stated here Thursday that the purpose of his organization is to "try to motivate people into politics".

A student at a Boston law school, Brandt feels that too much politics is left to "professionals" and feels he has a personal responsibility to "encourage as many people as possible in politics."

Brandt's trip to UMass, his first, is part of a move on the part of the Young Republicans to improve its organization in the western part of the state, which he feels has been "lacking".

"The Y.R. isn't out to force any ideas," Brandt told the Collegian, "we are trying to draw people into the Republican Party on principles of sound and practical government."

Brandt feels that the left-wing oriented Young Independents have had more success on campus because of their "outside support and financial assistance" and he believes that their "broad" stand on issues also draws support.

"Socialist groups on campuses draw a great deal of support from national organizations," he said and commented that the Young Independents are more of a "college-type organization" being a "catch-all" for the student left.

"The Young Republicans have a responsibility to the Republican administration," Brandt pointed out. "We don't just go out and think things up as we go along," he exclaimed.

With campus political growth increasing toward the left, Brandt considers his group a "leveling force—so people don't think all students are left-wing radicals".

Speaking in a free, easy manner, Brandt said that he voted for Goldwater in '64 but admitted that he would not vote for him again.

"A lot of things he said were not well thought out," he commented and said that if he were to identify with a national republican leader it would be Senator Everett Dirksen.

Brandt feels Dirksen has the "tact and responsibility" of a good politician.

Commenting on Viet Nam, Brandt expressed approval of Pres. Johnson's handling of the war. "It is the way I would conduct it," he said.

"We must guard against our will being worn down in Viet Nam," he stressed. "Our settlement must be final and favorable to the U.S."

Brandt believes that the people burning draft cards are protesting the government's war policy rather than its draft policy. "It is the best way they can think of to demonstrate their objections to the war," he said.

He doesn't feel the protests will bring about any change in the draft, but he sees a possible future for "a basic low-level training lasting for two or three months".

Expressing disfavor with Johnson's social legislation, Brandt observed: "L.B.J. is very clever but in his head-long dash to establish himself as a great man he is not always prudent."

"I have never been a very strong supporter of medicare," he admitted with a smile. "I can see its usefulness but question the necessity of it at this time," he said.

Brandt expressed pleasure with the turnout at his talk and he said that it was well worth his trip to Amherst.

Brandt admitted being impressed with the "beautiful campus and 22 story dorms" and he hopes to return again. "Maybe the next time I'll be back in a non-political capacity," he said with a grin.

Operetta Guild Shows "Kiss Me Kate": Comedy That Brings Ear-to-Ear Grins

By Nancy Abrams
Feature Staff

The Operetta Guild's production of Kiss Me Kate is a show one watches with an ear-to-ear grin. A happy, bouncy musical, it has to its credit perfect timing, clever direction, singer-actors who can put over a song and make broadly comic characterizations believable, an excellent sixteen-piece orchestra, pleasing scenery and costumes, and a well-trained chorus and dance group.

The show concerns the antics of a troupe of actors during a pre-Broadway run of Taming of the Shrew. One of the actors, Bill Calhoun (Ray Poole), signs an "I.O.U." for his gambling losses with the name of the star, Fred Graham (David Kidd). Fred, meanwhile, has sent a bouquet with a tender note to a pretty actress named Lois Kane (Kelley Schwartz). The flowers are given by mistake to Fred's co-star and hot-tempered ex-wife, Lilli Vanessi (Patricia Kelley).

During the performance, Lilli discovers the flowers' mistake and vows to leave the show. At this moment two gangsters (Steve Rosoff, Rick Kaplan) arrive to collect on the "I.O.U." Lilli becomes their hostage so the show can continue and make money to pay the debt. All ends well as Fred Petruchio tames his shrew, Lilli Katherine. As the curtain falls, Fred commands "kiss me, Kate" and Lilli obeys.

The dialogue, written by Samuel and Bella Spewack, is adequate. The real star of the show is the songs of Cole Porter. While all are excellent, the show-stoppers are "Brush Up Your Shakespeare," sung in true vaudeville style by the gamblers, and "Always True to You (In My Fashion)," belted out in a pert, wide-eyed manner by Lois Lane.

All of the people connected with production are to be congratulated, especially stage director Joel Friedman, musical director Paul Bartsch, choreographers Marilyn Patton and Sharonjean Moser, and designer David Ludlam, in addition to all the students who appeared on stage or in the orchestra. Both the Operetta Guild and the University can be justifiably proud of the production.

If you are looking for an evening of light entertainment that will tickle the funny bone and delight both eye and ear, attend a performance of Kiss Me Kate this weekend in Bowker Aud.

Crew Quips

Who expected it? — certainly not the 3,000 spectators who had come that sunny July 21, 1871, to see the crew race on the Connecticut.

That was the day the inconspicuous college in Amherst—Massachusetts Agricultural College—had raced Harvard and Brown and won. In a record 16 minutes, 46½ seconds, Massachusetts won the three-mile race, thus beginning the history of crew racing at the University.

Some time after this memorable victory, interest in crew racing at MAC waned. Losing its standing as an intercollegiate sport, it disappeared completely as a campus activity. But, after long decades, interest in crew racing is returning to campus, mainly through a crew club of about 20 wildly enthusiastic guys who are giving much time and effort to developing their skills.

Although the club has done some racing, its main concern is organization. Awaiting official clearance for an exercise-meeting room on campus, it has also appealed to the Student Senate for a $1,200 appropriation. Under direction of Coach David Clark, the club's chief occupation now is preparing a schedule for a busy and successful spring season.

An Irish singer and harpist with an international reputation for her renditions of traditional Irish songs and harp airs will perform at the University of Massachusetts next week.

Grainne Yeats (pronounced GRANYA YATES) will perform Wednesday, Oct. 27 at 8 p.m. in Bartlett Auditorium. Her appearance is being sponsored by the UMass department of English in conjunction with the Distinguished Visitors Program.

Miss Yeats is making her first American tour, having won wide acclaim throughout Ireland, Britain and on the European continent.

A teacher of the Irish harp at the Royal Irish Academy of Music in Dublin, Grainne Yeats specializes in music of the 16th and 17th centuries.

In contrast to this grave music of a bygone age will be a cycle of songs to the words of William (Continued on page 11)

University International Club Initiates New '65 Programs

FOREIGN STUDENTS RECEPTION

Colorful national dress was evident at a grand reception party, given by President Lederle, to welcome UMass foreign students last Tuesday in Memorial Hall.

While greeting students from virtually every part of the world, Lederle expressed hope that they would enjoy studying and staying at UMass and the USA.

Others present at the festivities were Edward C. Moore, dean of the Graduate School, William D. Tunis, dean of admissions and records, John C. Wells, director of housing, and Mrs. Evelyn Russell, foreign students advisor, who took an active part in organizing the reception.

AMERICAN HOSPITALITY:

Foreign students from UMass and other area educational institutions enjoyed the hospitality of American homes last weekend when they stayed with several families in the Springfield area.

The program, started Saturday, included a guided tour of Springfield; a visit to the Town Hall; and a tea party given by Steiner's Department Store.

"It was a nice experience for me, and I was very impressed by the American way of family life," one girl noted.

By the same token, the host families came to know more about the various countries represented and to "remove many misconceptions about other people which we previously held."

The program was organized by the World Affairs Council of the Connecticut Valley in cooperation with the Faith and Old First churches of Springfield.

field.

TALK ON NEPAL:

An enthusiastic gathering of members enjoyed a 30-minute talk with color slides on "Nepal—The Land of Mount Everest" Wednesday night by Prakash A. Raj, a graduate student in the Geology Department, at the International Club's weekly coffee hour held at the Governor's Lounge in the S.U.

This was the first talk in the "Land and People" series organized by the International Club.

TODAY ON "AFRICA":

The second talk in the series will be held this evening (Wednesday) by representatives of Operation Crossroads Africa, Mr. Leroy O. Smith, on the "African Continent" along with a documentary film. Mr. Smith has lived in Africa for about two years. All are cordially invited.

VOLPE INVITES FOREIGN STUDENTS

John A. Volpe, Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, invited all foreign students from the state to a convention last Friday.

More than five hundred students from many continents saw the places of historic interest in Boston and attended a luncheon party given by the House of Representatives of Mass.

In a speech, Governor Volpe said that about ninety-two thousand foreign students from one hundred and fifty different countries are at present studying at American institutions.

He wished all foreign students a "gainful stay" in Massachusetts and that the training they receive here will be of benefit to them and to humanity.

Arrangements for the trip were made by Mr. John Welles, Director of Housing.

FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS:

The Festival of Lights, "Divali," was celebrated by the Indian Students Association of UMass last Sunday night in a colorful way.

Typical wax lamps were burned on the occasion, and there was an exhibition of Indian dress. There were movies shown about Indian history, and sweet and spicy Indian dishes were enjoyed by the guests.

A number of the American women present wore beautiful Indian saris.

Mr. Ash and Miss Kumuk Bhav, President and Secretary of the Indian Student's Association delivered speeches on the occasion.

WHY NOT ONE RELIGION?

Quality Of Religion Is At Least As Important As Quantity Of Religion

Accident of Birth

Religious preference is, for most of us, but an accident of birth. We belong to different faiths because the ancestors of each accepted the faith of the community where they happened to live, and we in turn accepted without question the faith of our family. Thoughtful people know there is no reason to believe their religion is the one true religion.

"The faith of your choice" is misleading. We do not choose our religion—it is indelibly branded into us by indoctrination in childhood much as calves are branded on a Western ranch. THE GREAT AND INEXCUSABLE TRAGEDY IS THAT PEOPLE OF THE HIGHEST INTELLIGENCE IN NONRELIGIOUS FIELDS AND OF THE GREATEST GOOD WILL REMAIN DIVIDED AND IN CONFLICT BECAUSE THEY REFUSE TO EVALUATE OR PERMIT OTHERS TO EVALUATE THAT WHICH THEY ACCEPTED IN IMMATURE AND INEXPERIENCED CHILDHOOD.

The Sectarian Mind

Members of the board of trustees and faculty of a college in Rhode Island subscribed annually to the doctrinal statement following: "We believe in the Scriptures of the Old and the New Testament as verbally inspired by God and inerrant in the original writings, and as the supreme and final authority in faith and life." Untold millions of people agree. Could any but a sectarian mind believe that a loving, merciful, just God would harden Pharaoh's heart (Exodus 11:10) so that he would not let the Israelites go, then kill in each Egyptian family because he would not (Exodus 12:29)? Or kill everybody on the earth except the few people in Noah's Ark? Surely the slaughtered children were not to blame! Your sectarianism may be less crude than at the Rhode Island college, but sectarianism is basically the same everywhere—a blind and blinding belief which will not permit the sectarian to make free use of accumulating knowledge or other evidence which disproves or casts doubt on the basic sectarian commitment.

Conspiracy of Silence

Persistence of sectarianism is promoted strongly by the "conspiracy of silence" or so-called "religious toleration." There is a deadly parallel between the "conspiracy of silence" on sectarianism today with the "conspiracy of silence" on the "social diseases" a few years ago. So long as people were "too nice" to mention gonorrhea and syphilis, these diseases went largely untreated and ate away at countless victims. Because we are "too nice" to call attention to the errors and other evils within one another's sectarianism, they eat away at our religious life. The less defensible the practices of a sect, the more it stands to gain by the "conspiracy of silence." While critics of sectarianism generally remain silent, zealous sectarians urge their points of view with emotional fervor. Free and frank evaluation would reduce many evils of sectarianism, but neither sectarian leadership nor sectarian dictatorship willingly submits to such evaluation.

The "conspiracy of silence" seems as prevalent among educators as among others. The president of the West Liberty State College of West Virginia wrote me that he approved of Truth First discussion groups in religion but that the discussion should never question doctrine or belief.

Channels of Communication Closed

Many channels of communication are restricted or closed to those who would evaluate sectarianism. The Editor of Free World wanted to publish my article "Brotherhood: New World Religion" but some members of the editorial board objected and it was never published. A paper in a neighboring city has refused to run the ad, "Which is Wiser? To remain divided into the hundreds of religious sects into which we happened to be born, or to unite in an inclusive Brotherhood to replace existing sects?" on the ground that "Our publisher feels that the interests of the greatest number of our readers are best served by avoiding controversial subjects of a religious nature." A Boston paper has rejected the ad, "Brotherhood Church is a free pamphlet."

When I submitted an ad of my Toward World Brotherhood to World Report, its Vice President in Charge of Advertising returned the check with the comment: "We do not think, however, that our columns can be available for this type of advertising, since we are quite sure it will involve us in controversy with other sects. If you feel there is some other way of writing your copy so that the controversial angle will not appear, then we'd be perfectly happy to run it." Is there any field except sectarianism where a great national magazine feels it must avoid a controversial issue?

Calling itself "Holy" and its tradition "Sacred," a sect considers any "attack" on it too wicked to be tolerated in the public press. Would any but a group unsure of itself deny its critics the opportunity to sell their points of view in an open market of ideas? Is that which must protect itself by such censorship really worth protecting?

Bulwarks of Sectarianism

These, then, are the four bulwarks of sectarianism: (1) Childhood indoctrination; (2) Reluctance of sectarians to reexamine their beliefs and practices freely; (3) "Conspiracy of silence"; (4) Closing of the lines of communication to those who would evaluate sectarianism.

Can anything be done to break through or by-pass the bulwarks?

One Religion Offers Most

One Religion defends six theses:

1. Refusing to examine itself critically or to face searching questions by others, a religious sect retains obviously untrue and harmful—even degrading—items side by side with items that are true, helpful and elevating.

2. Mutual, frank evaluation of points of view by various sects is very much better than silent indiscriminate toleration by each of anything and everything that another calls religion.

3. A great proportion of the resources of each sect, given in the name of religion, is wastefully used up in just keeping alive and in promoting self-centered sectarian ends rather than in ministering to the religious needs of individuals and communities.

4. Unless Christianity, Judaism, Islam, Hinduism, Buddhism, and other sects are merged into or replaced by a great One Religion, sectarianism will continue to divide the world and communities into self-centered groups, isolate peoples, use sectarian prejudice for political advantage, and stimulate conflict which is deadly dangerous in the atomic-space age.

5. Religious life should and will be integrated in One Religion which should and will absorb or replace existing sects.

6. The intelligently religious person, knowing that religious preferences which divide people into sects are the result of indoctrination in childhood rather than of the greater truth, plausibility or superiority of any sect, will not hesitate to change to One Religion.

Are Brothers Fools?

Are those who try to organize One Religion of Brotherhood but fools rushing in where even the bravest angels fear to tread? At least we have received much encouragement from many who could scarcely be called foolish. Some comments on my Toward World Brotherhood which suggested and explained the Brotherhood Movement are:

"You have struck a very important note in the problem of world organization and unity. In fact I think the most important one as well as the most neglected and most needed. There is almost a conspiracy of silence on this phase of the problem—not deliberate, but certainly testifying to the immense strength of the sectarian evil you so ably discuss. Yours is almost a voice in the wilderness." —John Dewey.

"... your book which I am sure will make a real contribution to our present day thinking." —Rabbi Joshua Loth Liebman, Temple Israel, Boston.

"I am confident that it will do much to contribute toward the advancement of the high objectives which it so eloquently urges upon American public opinion." —Sumner Welles, former Under Secretary of State.

"You are stressing one of the most important phases of religion that the world needs at the present time." —Ernest John Clave, Divinity School, University of Chicago.

"I am referring your book immediately to certain members of our faculty and a committee which is now concerned with the development of a program in religion and ethics for The State College of Washington." —E. H. Hopkins, Vice President.

"Your booklet is a fine statement." —Henry Noble MacCracken, former president of Vassar College.

"Its contents are undeniable facts. . . . It is a masterpiece, and should accomplish the purpose for which it was written." —Thomas L. Clarke, Justice of the Peace, Brown City, Michigan.

"I have placed it in the Library of International House where I am sure it will be profitably read and appreciated." —Helen Taubenblatt, Director of Admissions, International House, Chicago.

"It will prove a fine addition to our reference shelves." —Jean M. Murdock, Librarian, Public Library, West Bridgewater, Massachusetts.

"... it will be the re-making of the world." —Eleanor V. Young, Boston.

"I agree with every word in the book." —Carl C. Taylor, former president of the American Sociological Society.

"If at any time you form an active unit of this sort, I should like to be considered for membership." —Herbert J. Redfern, Keene Teachers College, Keene, New Hampshire.

Just Another Brain-Washing Sect?

Is One Religion just another brain-washing sect to divide religious people still further? There is a vast difference between an inclusive Brotherhood, modern in outlook and knowledge, where varying points of view are adjusted in the search for a fuller brotherhood, and the excluding, binding authoritative tradition built up over the centuries about a personal Savior or a chosen people.

One Religion is free to evaluate—free to accept or reject on the basis of quality alone. It is truth-seeking. Adherents believe that an earnest, intelligent search yields far more religious truth than the blind acceptance of the tradition of any sect.

Sectarianism is blindly propagandistic. A sect has been defined as a group with closed minds who propagate what it already "knows" is the truth. Sectarians who mistake gullibility for faith are prisoners within the shell of their own sectarian tradition—no matter how fine or how foul the shell.

Brain washing, begun as early as possible and continued throughout life, is the sectarian process. Prospective clerics are brain-washed for years.

Each sect has its own "reforms" from time to time and may talk of "unity," but that is like clipping a few whiskers off the sectarian tiger and leaving the temper and the claws of the tiger intact.

IF YOU PREFER INTELLIGENT CHOICE OF RELIGION TO BLIND BRAINWASHED, CLERICALLY MANIPULATED ACCEPTANCE OF FAMILY TRADITION WHICH KEEPS RELIGIOUS PEOPLE SEGREGATED, ASK FOR THE FREE PAMPHLET, "BROTHERHOOD: ONE RELIGION FOR ALL."

MEETING...

DellaGrotte came into the discussion again — returning to Clay's remarks — and said "it does not follow that the Faculty Senate, because of its position, knows what is best for the student (governing)."

Dr. Noffsinger, attending in the capacity of an administrative representative, interjected that "this meeting must not be regarded as a battlefield in which one side wins and the other loses."

"Here, now in 1965, haven't we learned enough about pitting one group against the other?" he queried.

With this in mind the committee began to move toward negotiation — the outcome of which was the decision to establish a drafting board comprising Student Senators Dacey and Flynn and Faculty Senators Clay and Wellman.

This board will draft resolutions delineating the charges of any future committee concerning Student affairs and the resolutions will be presented to both Senates for ratification, and establishment of a committee to review current constitutional changes.

POLICE...

One call came from a policeman on duty in plain clothes. These plainclothesmen are occasionally sent out to watch areas of vandalism and to provide the force with an extra arm.

This particular call concerned two minors who were drunk and attempted to steal a car. The plainclothesman, Peter Sienkiewicz, who was at the scene prevented a crime and had the boys picked up for drunkenness.

LATER, IN THE Amherst jail, the officers were careful to protect the boys' rights so that they wouldn't lose the case when it came up in court.

Among other places visited that night was Eastman Lane. Earlier Mazzei had commented, "I wish I had the parking meter business there."

He said that they made occasional checks to make sure there was no trouble and a post-curfew check to see if any stragglers were left behind. This same check is also made of all girls' dorms.

WHEN ASKED ABOUT drinks they said their policy was to leave them alone if they were quiet and minded their own business. However, they can stop any person at night and ask him to give a reason for being abroad.

At one point, when they stopped a car for speeding, Southard mentioned that a driver must have his license and registration with him or he will be prosecuted. The best way for a driver to handle this situation, he said, is to be courteous.

As in any other occupation, the police business fluctuates. During nights, holiday weekends, away football games, and during exam periods things slow down. During the spring and big weekends the action speeds up, and surprisingly enough even after curfew things go on until 4 or 5 a.m.

After averaging 70 miles a night and some weekends where one call is followed by the next, these men look to their job with cheerful optimism.

TWELVE IS A MANY-SPLENDORED THING

Today I begin my twelfth year of writing this column in your campus newspaper.

These dozen years have passed like a dozen minutes. In fact, I would not believe so much time has gone by except that I have my wife nearby as a handy reference. When I started this column, she was a mere slip of a girl—supple as a willow bough and fair as the morn. Today she is gnarled, lumpy, and given to biting the postman. Still, I count myself lucky. Most of my friends who were married at the same time have wives who chase cars all day. I myself have never had this trouble, and I attribute my good fortune to the fact that I have never struck my wife with my hand. I have always used a folded newspaper, even during the prolonged newspaper strike of 1961 in New York. During this journalistic period I had the airmail edition of the Manchester Guardian flown in daily from England. I must admit, however, that it was not entirely satisfactory. The airmail edition of the Guardian is printed on paper so light and flimsy that it makes very little impression when one smacks one's wife. Mine, in fact, thought it was some kind of game and tore several pairs of my trousers.

But I digress. For twelve years, I say, I have been writing this column. That is a fact, and here is another: I shave every morning with Personna Stainless Steel Blades. I bring up Personna Stainless Steel Blades because this column is sponsored by the makers of Personna and they are inclined to brood if I omit to mention their products.

Not, let me hasten to state, that it is any chore for me to sing the praises of Personna—as you will agree once you try this sharpest, smoothest-shaving, longest-lasting blade ever devised by the makers of Personna Blades—now available both in Double Edge and Injector style. Personna, always the most rewarding of blades, today offers even an extra reward—a chance to grab yourself a fistful of $100 bills from a $100,000 bowl! The Personna Stainless Steel Sweepstakes is off and running, and you're all eligible to enter. Visit your friendly Personna dealer soon to pick up an entry blank (void where prohibited by law).

And, by the way, while you're at your friendly Personna dealers, why don't you ask for a can of Burma Shave? It comes in Regular or Menthol; it soaks rings around any other lather, and it's made by the makers of Personna.

But I digress. For twelve years, I say, this column has been discussing, forthrightly and fearlessly, such burning campus questions as "Should students be allowed to attend first-hour classes in pajamas?" and "Should deans be retired at age 25?" and "Should foreign exchange students be held for ransom?"

Today, continuing the tradition, we take up the thorniest academic problem of all: the high cost of tuition. Let me tell you how one student, Lintel Sigafos by name, solved this problem.

Lintel, while still a boy in Straitened Circumstances, Idaho, had his heart set on college, but, alas, he couldn't afford the tuition. He applied for a Regents Scholarship but, alas, his reading speed was not very rapid—only two words an hour—and before he finished even the first page of his exam, the Regents had closed their briefcases crossly and gone home. Lintel then applied for an athletic scholarship, but he had, alas, only a single athletic skill—balancing an ice cream cone on his chin—and this, alas, aroused only fleeting enthusiasm among the coaches.

And then he found the answer: he would get a student loan! Of course, he would have to pay it back after graduation, but clever Lintel solved that, too: he kept changing his major, never accumulating enough credits to graduate until he was 65 years old. Then he repaid the loan out of his Social Security.

Where there's a will, there's a way.

The makers of Personna Stainless Steel Blades and Burma Shave are happy to bring you another season of Max Shulman's uncensored, uninhibited, and unpredictable column. We think you'll be happy, too, when you try our products.

Special Forces Toughen Up

The Army ROTC Bay State Special Forces (B.S.S.F.) moved out of the year's first field maneuver Oct. 8 and 9 to Fort Devens, Mass. The B.S.S.F. is an elite unit of the Army ROTC specializing in the rugged outdoor skills used by the Regular Army Special Forces units.

The first weekend of training specialized in night movement in swamps and woods. Land navigation and map reading were reviewed and then practice problems were run in the woods during both day and night.

As usual, physical conditioning was stressed with the cadets running the Army physical training and obstacle course several times. The ROTC unit ate in a mess hall with the soldiers of the 595th Signal Company. They spent Friday night in a barracks getting an idea of how the Army private lives and spent most of Saturday night in the woods.

This weekend the B.S.S.F. will go into the field as aggressors for the Springfield National Guard, which will be of battalion size. The B.S.S.F. will employ guerrilla tactics and this will provide valuable training in acquainting them on how guerrillas operate.

Sororities On The Way Out, Says Calif. Sociologist's Study

DAVIS, Calif. (CPS) — A University of California sociologist says that sororities, long influential in manipulating the campus social order, now face extinction.

John F. Scott, professor of sociology at the University of California, Davis, says that the factors that caused the growth of these social institutions during the first half of the century have changed and that rigidly structured sororities are finding it more and more difficult to mesh with today's highly competitive campus society.

Dr. Scott, who has studied sororities in detail, says he finds them an outgrowth of society's efforts to control marriage and the selection of the "right man."

"University administrations are not as hospitable to Greeks as they once were," he says, citing regulation changes that tend to minimize the influence of Greek activities on campus. Extensive dormitory complexes are effectively competing with sorority housing and off-campus activities are proving to be just as popular.

"BUT THE WORST BLOW of all to the sorority system comes from the effect of increased academic pressure on the dating habits of college men," Scott says. Academic competition on most campuses is keen and college men no longer have time for the form of courtship that made sororities so exciting, he says.

Scott concludes that the sorority system, "not likely to yield to change," will no longer be able to sustain itself. "When parents find that sorority membership does their daughter little good, the system as we know it will go into history," he says.

On the University of California's 27,500-student Berkeley campus, the predictions made by Dr. Scott are already beginning to come true.

SORORITY RUSH participation was down this fall to 340 coeds as compared with 437 just a year ago. The dean of women's office could not explain the drop.

The sorority representative to the campus student government said, however, she felt the drop reflected a "steady trend."

ANOTHER TROUBLE within the Greek system not mentioned in Dr. Scott's study is either implied or actual racial and religious discrimination. Last spring, the national Sigma Chi fraternity organization dropped the Stanford University chapter from its rolls after it had pledged a Negro. The national body said this was not the reason the chapter was dropped, however.

Because of the Stanford incident, which prompted Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel to warn that any institution of higher education allowing fraternities or sororities to discriminate would not qualify for federal funds, Sigma Chi is now under scrutiny at campuses across the nation.

At Yale University, the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity chapter just voted to go local in opposition to its national's membership selection policies. The chapter had pledged the first Negro in the history of the national last spring and had subsequently been subjected to heavy pressures from the parent body.

THIS FALL, the chapter of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority at the Catholic University of America in Washington, D. C. terminated its affiliation with the national group. The local chapter had just joined in May. Pam Hull, chapter president, said the decision was made after some chapter members attended the sorority's national convention in New York City.

"During the convention," she said, "I discovered policies of the organization which had not been made known to our group when we joined." Informed sources within the chapter have made it known on campus that the "unacceptable principles and traditions" involve discrimination.

Four national fraternities and two sororities took their fight to remain at the State University of New York at Buffalo all the way to the New York Supreme Court. The school had adopted a policy that national Greek organizations would have to leave campus or drop their national ties after this school year.

In a July decision denying the sororities and fraternities the right to remain at Buffalo, Justice Matthew J. Jansen said the school had the right to regulate its own student organizations.

Caesura Staff Plans To Publish Nov. 15

by David Haracz

Harriers Impressive in Last Two Victories

by Terry Carpenter

THE CROSS COUNTRY team bounced back into the win column last week with two impressive victories after losing a tri-meet to powerhouses Providence and Central Connecticut.

The harriers first beat Rhode Island, last year's Yankee Conference champs, in a dual meet in Amherst. In winning the meet, the team surrendered first place to URI and took 2nd and 3rd, then after two more Rams the harriers swept five straight places. This depth told the story in the end. The score was UMass 33, URI 26.

CO-CAPTAINS Steve S. Clair and Terry Carpenter were second and third. Mike Sheeley, Jeff Lunn, Pete Saunders, John Andersen, and Greg Tsoucalas finished sixth through tenth. Tsoucalas finished only a minute and 18 seconds behind St. Clair. This is one of the best time spreads the team has had in years.

LAST SATURDAY the harriers had a field day at the Coast Guard Academy. Not only did they shut the Academy out, they took the first 7 spots to make it a perfect score (15-50).

Finishing in a first place tie for the Redmen against Coast Guard were co-captains Steve St. Clair and Terry Carpenter. John Andersen and Pete Saunders were a close third and fourth, while Jeff Lunn, Greg Bowman, and Bill Thoms tied for fifth.

Following them was the first Coast Guard runner, and then in ninth was Mike Sheeley, the final UMass harrier. The team spread for the first seven men was a phenomenal 23 second.

THE NEXT MEET will be held at the University of New Hampshire and offers a stiff test for the Redmen against the host. UNH. also beat URI this year, but by a more convincing score (19-40).

The UMass harriers would like nothing better than to upset the home forces, since UMass teams have finished second best the last two years.

Lose Sumpin'?

(UPI) Police in San Diego, Calif., caught a cab last week and jewelry salesman Charles Barnett is glad. He had left a packet containing nearly 32-thousand dollars in diamonds in the back seat. The cab and his diamonds were found an hour later. All of the later passengers had sat in the front seat.

Patriots Blast Cherrys To Win Right to Meet Maroons

by Dave Jarnes

IN ONE OF THE most exhilarating games of the season, the Plymouth Patriots avenged last week's 25-0 shellacking by the Mills Cherry (which had enabled the Cherrys to tie the Pats for first place) with a spine-tingling 19-13 thriller. With just 35 seconds remaining and the score tied at 13 all, Leland was hit by a pass all alone on a Z-out pass pattern for the winning score.

In what can best be described as a rough game, PMD gave a creditable showing before bowing to AEP and Johnny Parnell (12-15). The win enabled AEP to tie KS and TKE for first place in the B frat league.

OTHER FRATERNITY games saw TC nip QTV 14-13; and Kaukows' pass receiving (six receptions, two for TD's) spark TEP to a 26-19 decision over PSD.

Although the regular season is finished, three league championships remain to be determined. In the B fraternity league KS will play the winner of the AEP-TKE game on Thursday at 6:45. ICA is the A league champ.

The Hampshire Hardnoses, who went undefeated, were forced to forfeit their game with the Chem Club because an ineligible player was used. As a result a three way tie exists amongst the Hardnoses, the Chem Club, and the Courtesy Taxi in the American League. Thursday the Hardnoses will play the winner of the Chem Club-Courtesy Taxi game. The powerful untouchables are the National League champs.

With the Patriots win, the pairings for the dorm championship are set. The Pats will meet the mighty Maroons tonight at 7:00 to be followed by the Grayson Flaming A's-Gorman Oaks contest at 8:00. These playoff games are certain to prove a fitting climax for what has been an exciting season.

COACH GLADCHUK urges everyone to come out and root for his favorite team. The games promise to be close with no team being as superior to the opposition as KS was last year.

REMEMBER, get those bowling rosters in.

BILL TINDALL...

In his "spare time," Tindall likes to follow all sports, especially pro and college basketball. He says, "Oscar Robertson is the guy that I try to pattern my play after."

He is an avid reader and is very interested in campus politics. Tindall's favorite subjects?

"Those in which I am stimulated to think on my own, like sociology and psychology. No memorization."

On a date Tindall likes to go to dinner, and then to a dance or to the theatre. He's likely to order Chinese foods, chicken or steak. The well-dressed, good-looking Bill claims he has no steady girl.

"My ideal girl would have to be sympathetic, fairly attractive, have a good personality and be warm and intelligent."

DURING THE SUMMERS, Bill works five days a week, plays basketball several times weekly, plays tennis, swims, and when he has the chance, he likes to go to outdoor camps.

Bill is undecided whether or not he would like to make a career in the sports field.

That's Bill Tindall. A young man of many interests, going many places, at a fast pace.

The Ski Club will sponsor a John Jay ski movie, at 8 p.m. in the Amherst Regional High School auditorium. Tickets are on sale by club members.

Homer Clarke was elected president last Thursday. Dick Taylor is vice-president; Russ Dean, treasurer; and Kim Garrison, Pat Davenport and John Williams, secretaries. Nancy Vajcovec was appointed ticket chairman for the John Jay film.

A ski movie made by Adi Scheidle, director of the Mt. Tom Ski School, was shown by Dick Hurlbut, club adviser. The film included scenes from Stratton where Scheidle formerly instructed.

The club's next meeting will be Monday in Student Union.

Basketball Profile*BILL TINDALL

ASK ANYONE around campus who Bill Tindall is and the most common answer will be: "He was the center of last year's freshman basketball team, and he's probably going to be the center of this year's varsity team."

Most students probably think Bill Tindall does nothing but eat, think and sleep basketball. This is partially true, especially during the basketball season, but in reality, Bill Tindall is a young man of many talents, sports, moods and interests.

Bill Tindall first took an interest in basketball in his early junior high school years. He explained, "I first began playing basketball because everyone else used to play. It was just the thing to do."

AS HE BECAME OLDER and taller (6'5" now), he liked basketball more and more. By the time he reached high school, Tindall was regarded as one of the best basketball prospects the Mount Kisco, N. Y. area had seen in several years. But Tindall didn't limit himself to basketball. He logged three years of football, four years of track, three years of cross country and a year of baseball.

HE DIDN'T LEAVE ALL his activities behind after receiving his high school diploma. Besides playing basketball at the University of Massachusetts, the physical education major also participates in track. Because these two sports run from October to May, Bill is busy for most of the school year.

DURING BASKETBALL season, he has practice from 4-6:30, usually after a full day of classes. By the time he finishes dinner, it is after 7 p.m. Then it is time to study. Despite this full schedule, Tindall maintains a middle C average in his studies.

BU Wrap-up: Award Winner Landry Closes In On Records

by John Cunningham

The Varsity M-Club awards for last Saturday's game against B.U. were awarded to linebacker and co-captain Bernie Dallas, and to Greg Landry, sophomore quarterback.

DALLAS WAS awarded the certificate of achievement for his hardnosed defensive play against a heavy and rugged team. The Redmen defense led by Dallas gave up only 69 yards on the ground and forced the Terriers to go to a passing attack.

GREG LANDRY received recognition for his total offense of 185 yards. Greg passed for 104 yards and rushed for 81 more.

This 185 yards for Landry now has given him a total offense of 1,161 yards this year which is the third highest total in UMass history, and makes him the first sophomore to surpass 1,000. Jerry Whelchel with 1317 yards is in second place and Landry with three more games to play has a good chance to surpass him.

NOEL REEBENACKER holds the record for total yardage in one season for the Redmen with a total of 2080 yards, a record which seems out of reach for Landry this season. However Greg has two more years of varsity competition to go.

Landry didn't make the Yankee-Conference team this week, being ousted at the quarterback slot by Maine's Dick DeVarney who led his team to the Yankee-Con championship this year, but Dallas and halfback Don Durkin were nominated for their respective positions.

DON DURKIN played one of the best games of his career, gaining 70 yards rushing, scoring one of the touchdowns and setting up two others.

Greg Landry, the M club award winner this week, is now third in total yardage in the Redmen record books.

FINE ARTS COUNCIL

SWAP Stresses Faculty -- Student Rapport

by Fred Pilon, Photography Editor

"Today the students, tomorrow the world," said Dr. Burke of the Geology Department. At a quick glance this statement might seem to reflect a master Faculty Senate program designed to completely dominate all student activities. The SWAP conference, in general and the discussion on the Faculty Senate, in particular, dispelled any allied feelings that SWAP delegates might have had.

Controversy centered around student-faculty relationships with regard to the Fine Arts Council and the Student Affairs Committee, both under supposed control of the Faculty Senate.

Dr. Robert Stanfield of the sociology department brought out the fact that in various schools throughout the country there is a trend for faculty members to move into the administrative spheres, in an attempt to realize certain demands. Stanfield said it is time for students to get their own representation on various faculty and administrative committees, senates and forums.

Student Senate President, Dick Dacey, pointed out that the Student Senate has attempted to get such representation on the Faculty Senate, but met failure.

Dacey explained that the Senate is only concerned in areas that relate to students and would be quite willing to have student representatives leave any Faculty Senate meeting when areas other than student affairs are to be discussed.

The Fine Arts Council controversy resulted partly because students do not have a say in student affairs when discussed on the floor of the Faculty Senate.

The Faculty Senate, before the start of the school year, adopted the recommendations of the Hicks report and incorporated the Fine Arts Council into their constitution. Thus any former Fine Arts Council was superceded.

All previous Fine Arts Councils had equal student-faculty representation but, the Faculty Senate's Fine Arts Council would have five faculty members and three students.

Dissatisfaction with Faculty Senate action covers many areas. The main area of disappointment concerns the Faculty Senate's lack of initiative in seeking student opinion on the Fine Arts Council (which, incidentally, all students and faculty at the SWAP Conference consider lies within student affairs).

The Faculty Senate included no means for financing this new Fine Arts Council.

Staff Votes Monday

Collegian elections for the positions of Editor-in-Chief, Managing Editor, News Editor, and Sports Editor are slated for Monday evening, Nov. 1.

Resignation of former Editor Dan Glosband, and the resultant vacancy, added to the several interim appointments of present Editors, precipitated the need for an election to formalize the Collegian's internal structure.

To be official, the election must be attended by 51% of those staff members whose names appeared on the Oct. 25 mashead. Attendance for present staffers is therefore compulsory.

Election time is 6:30 to 8:30 P.M. and room notification will be posted on the door of the Collegian.

Staff meetings with the new Editors will follow the balloting. Monday's election is an interim one, with the express purpose of filling present vacancies until the regular election date, March 1.

The March Elections are for all major editorial positions, and for Business Manager.

Dacey to Revamp Senate; Two Appropriations Passed

by Karen Rose,
Senate Reporter

Wednesday's Student Senate meeting saw the passage of only three out of twelve bills brought to the floor.

Passed were appropriations for the Univ. Volunteer Fire Dept. ($121.) and the Pre-Med Club ($250).

ALSO PASSED WAS Senator Bob Cripp's bill establishing a subcommittee of the Elections Committee to conduct a study of the entire allocation and apportionment system used by the Student Senate. This committee will report its finding in March of 1966.

There was some dissension over this bill. Senators Garvin, Chambers, and Cass were among those urging immediate passage of this bill. Senator Kaufman, on the other hand felt that with the openings for new dorms the status of present dorms may change and in light of this fact such a study should be put off until next year . . . for the date for a report should be extended."

Of the remaining bills three were withdrawn and the others were tabled and, with the exception of one, will be brought Convention.

Among the tabled bills was one by Senator Bombardier which, if passed next week, will require each class to budget its funds.

The reasons for this bill, said Bombardier, is that at present the class tax (general) stands at $1.00 and this is merely accumulated in each class treasury with no other purpose than to be the financial backbone of the class. Bombardier would like to see specific stipulations made for the funds.

The stipulations would be made by each class treasurer in the spring of each year for the following fall. On the basis of his estimate the treasurer shall determine the class tax.

The treasurer's recommendation shall then be brought before their respective class's executive council for final review and approval.

Bombardier feels that the current practice for handling of class funds "is financially unsound."

He said that he sounded out many class officers on this proposal and that the general opinion was favorable.

In other Senate action President Dacey stated that "there is going to be a major re-organization around here . . . of all the duties concerning officers, committee chairmen and the individual senators."

Dacey also swore in four new senators at the meeting.

Under announcements it was brought to Senate attention that a misake in a political campaign ad in the Collegian could conceivably damage the candidate's election chances.

It was decided that filing a protest was not in order at this time and would not have to be done after the elections. Senator Wim-

STATE HOUSE NEWS

Scholarship, Kennedy, Vietnam Subject of Bills

No opposition was recorded at a public hearing before the joint committee on Education on a bill sponsored by Senate President Maurice A. Donahue of Holyoke, to provide tuition-free scholarships at state institutions of higher learning for children of police and firemen killed in the line of duty.

Senator Donahue termed the bill "a re-affirmation of the faith of the Legislature in the jobs being done" by these civil servants. "I think the very least we can do is to guarantee a quality education to the children of men who sacrifice their lives for the public good," he said.

He said the bill would cover the tuition fee of $200 at state institutions. He said the measure, which includes children of hospital and firemen killed since 1960, would apply to 25 children.

Administration will hold a public hearing on Thursday at 11 a.m. in the state House on a bill authorizing the transfer of land in Cambridge to the federal government to create a memorial to the late President Kennedy.

Grant Awarded UMass To Further Soil Discovery

The University has been awarded a grant in aid to further investigate a discovery by Dr. Haim B. Gunner, College of Agriculture microbiologist, on a potentially beneficial side effect of pesticide application to soil.

According to Dean A.A. Spielman of the College of Agriculture, the $5,000 annual grant from the Geigy Chemical Corporation, Ardsley, N.Y., will support work to be conducted at the college's Institute of Agricultural and Industrial Microbiology.

The grant will be applied to develop Dr. Gunner's finding that the Geigy pesticide Dialon stimulates remarkably the numbers of certain harmless soil microbes. It is hoped that a technique may be evolved using this effect to crowd out other microbes that cause plant disease.

Dr. Gunner, a specialist in microbiology of the soil, is already conducting a two-year research project on the genus arthrobacter, one of the most common microbes found in the world's soils, under a $20,000 National Science Foundation grant.

He came to the University two years ago with a background that included serving as coordinator of agricultural research for the Research Council of Israel and as research officer for the Microbiology Research Institute of the Canadian Department of Agriculture.

UMass News Head Discusses The Collegian

Daniel Melley, editor of the University's news service, in an interview this week with the Journalism 391 class, criticized The Collegian for its lack of substance.

He said the UMass student-operated newspaper placed too much emphasis on being first with the news while ignoring in-depth reporting.

The Collegian is reporting in a manner better suited to television than a newspaper, in Melley's opinion. The publication of more advertising and less news, combined with an over-reliance on press releases from the University News office, has contributed to what he called a lack of good reporting. He stressed that press releases offer an excellent opportunity for The Collegian to go beneath the surface story to produce interesting background material.

Despite this, Melley said he believes this year's Collegian is a better paper than it was last year. He claimed the 1964-65 Collegian relied mainly on headlines written for the sake of sensationalism.

The main problem facing The Collegian, Melley said, is the lack of editor continuity. As has been shown in the past, only a good editor can improve both the quality and the professionalism of the college newspaper.

House Committee Gives Setback To Mass. Cities

BY THE STATE HOUSE NEWS SERVICE

City and town officials, hopeful that municipal budgets would be relieved of the $20 million cost of court operations, have received a setback from the House Ways and Means committee which opposes action on Governor Volpe's recommendation this year.

Four and one-half months ago, Volpe sent a special message to the Legislature, in which he proposed that the Commonwealth assume the financial burden of $20 million—now borne by the cities and towns through county budgets, and met primarily from proceeds of the real estate tax.

The Executive Department's recommendation went to House Ways & Means, where from time to time, it became part of committee's deliberations on various tax programs that have been considered to date. Ways and Means has placed the court-cost bill, along with approximately 40 others, in an omnibus order for a recess study, to be conducted after the end of the present session of the Legislature.

The order has been referred to the committee on Rules, which will make a report to the full membership of the House. It is anticipated that the Republican leadership, once the order reaches the floor, will move to take the Governor's bill from the study.

The Volpe bill would relieve the cities and towns of approximately 50 per cent of the costs of county government—the budgets for 12 of the 14 counties in the state now pending before the Legislature total close to $40 million. But the Democrats, too, at least a majority of the Democratic-controlled legislative committee on Taxation—have expressed an interest in state-assumption of county government costs. That interest was contained in the so-called Democratic tax plan to raise an estimated $214 million—since rejected by the House. In that tax program, the Democrats proposed that cities and towns would be reimbursed by the state for the amount of county taxes assessed in all counties except Suffolk and Nantucket, with the reimbursements based on actual county costs included in municipal budgets. In lieu of passage of a tax program, to make the necessary funds available, it remains to be seen what the Democrats' strategy will be when the Governor's court-cost bill is considered in the form of a study.

When he sent the bill to the Legislature, Volpe outlined one of its general purposes as follows: "It would cause the financial responsibility for the operation of our court system to reflect more appropriately the increasing centralization of judicial administration within the Commonwealth. For the past several years, our court systems have moved away from the concept of the county court."

Among the costs which the state would assume under the Governor's bill would be salaries and expenses of justices, clerical personnel, and probation officers; criminal and civil costs in Superior Court; salaries and expenses of court-connected libraries; and group insurance coverage and retirement benefits for transferred employees.

House Ways and Means has set up the first roadblock to passage of the bill.

Racing Dates Will Be Discussed By Senate

Final adjournment of the 1965 Legislature is not yet in sight, but already new business is being filed for consideration at the 1966 session. The State Racing Commission was the first agency to file departmental recommendations for next year. Proposals by state departments must be in the hands of the Secretary of State's office on or before the first Wednesday in November, for action at the next session.

The principal recommendation filed by the Racing Commission is aimed at meeting the racing date competition from tracks in Rhode Island, New Hampshire and Vermont, which, the agency points out, "draw a very large percentage of its patronage from Massachusetts."

While not increasing the number of dates that could be awarded for racing, the commission has proposed bills which would make it possible to change the dates awarded, to extend the time during which horse racing could be conducted to from Feb. 1 to Nov. 30, and to extend the time for the running of dog races to from April 1 to Nov. 30. The present law limits flat and harness horse racing meet to from April 18 to Nov. 30, but none between August 10 and the second Sat. after Labor Day; and it restricts dog racing from April 18 to Oct. 31.

Fac. - Senate Controversy at SWAP

so the Student Senate concluded their money must be handed over to the Faculty Senate.

The student representation on the Fine Arts Council would also be reduced to five faculty members with only 3 students.

Ron Kelcourse, treasurer of the Fine Arts Council, pointed out that students formerly had equal representation while they financed the Fine Arts Council; now, however, students would still continue to pay for the Fine Arts Council, but they would have unequal say in determining the program of events.

Eugene McCartney, secretary of the university, urged students work to develop better Student Senate-Faculty Senate relations. He stressed the need for better communication between the two senates.

One instrument, created by the Faculty Senate, to increase effective communication is the Student Affairs Committee. This body is to be composed of an almost equal number of students and faculty members. It's stated purpose is to make recommendations concerning student activities.

This committee is presently offering the Faculty Senate several proposals to allow student representation at Faculty Senate meetings.

Students were hesitant to form any joint committees. Sen. Betty Chambers warned that students can't be sure of the committee's functions. Kelcourse noted that the Student Affairs Committee is under Faculty Senate control, and thus the Faculty Senate could, at any time, change the role of the committee from a recommending body to a dictating body.

If students accept the Student Affairs Committee as it now exists, they will have no future voice in determining its future roles, Kelcourse said.

Positive criticism was also offered to student problems. Dacey proposed that the Fine Arts Council have equal representation of faculty and students, be responsible in financial matters to the President of the University, formulate the entire Fine Arts budget; and collect money by a direct tax on the student's bill.

Kelcourse suggested a professional person in the Fine Arts be hired to work on scheduling details, selling tickets and publicity.

The Student Senate ideas should then be combined with the Faculty Senate's ideas, a and weight are checked. There are no harmful after-effects of donation—resistance to disease is not lowered.

Any student enrolled at the University, who is over 18 years of age, and weighs at least 110 lbs. may pledge.

The Parking Problem Is 'Computed'

WASHINGTON (CPS) — Every school is having its parking problem and American University is no different.

Officials say the new system will allow the business office to compute within 24 hours a list of parking offenders. Disciplinary letters will be prepared automatically by the data processing system and will be mailed to an offender within 24 hours.

According to the parking and traffic regulation office, "any student who receives three or more parking violation tickets during a school year will receive the following disciplinary actions:

"Three violation tickets — a warning letter.

"Four violation tickets — a 30-day suspension of parking privileges on university property.

"Five violation tickets — dismissal from the university."

compromise reached, which then agree with principles found in the Hick's Report, and then the final version presented to both Senates for approval.

Contrary to popular belief, the Faculty Senate is not some type of perfect machine that continuously hounds the students and attempts to restrict student activities. Many faculty members pointed to the Faculty Senate's fallibility.

As Prof. Burke pointed out, the Faculty Senate is just that—Faculty. While the organization of the Faculty Senate was being set up, they accepted certain recommendations of the Hick's Report, without consulting the Student Senate.

It seems that the Faculty Senate placed concern for itself over that of others—not an unusual occurrence in Nature. Undoubtedly some unrest exists within the Faculty Senate with its present organization.

Discussion leader Dacey summarized the various thoughts as follows: The Faculty Senate should realize that it has erred, particularly in regard to the Fine Arts Council; the future of joint committees, such as the Student Affairs Committee has yet to be definitely decided; and finally, communication between the students and faculty must be increased so that problems may be settled.

Let's Get With It!

Bored with the same old routine? If you want to, you can change the situation. UMass offers many different opportunities and at least one of them, the four college co-operation, could add variety to dull days.

Under this program, students may take courses at Amherst, Smith or Mount Holyoke Colleges. Requirements are quite liberal. Students must take a course which is appropriate to their major and is not offered at the University at the time when they would like to take it.

Dr. Venman, Assistant Provost, suggests that students interested in this co-operation attain a 2.5 quality point average, but this is not mandatory.

Dr. Venman would like more students to consider the possibility of taking courses at the other colleges. This is an opportunity to take advantages of some of the excellent teachers at other colleges in the area.

Mary Donovan '68, who takes a Latin V course at Amherst College, is very enthusiastic about the program.

"It's great!"

There are only nine students in her class, so the atmosphere is very informal. Compared to UMass' coliseum classes, this is a refreshing experience.

The Four college co-operation also offers an advantage to the faculty. It enlarges their community. Only a few biochemists teach at any one college in Western Massachusetts. With this program, these professors can get together for conversation and intellectual stimulation.

Since this program offers such advantages, it's a shame that more people aren't involved in it.

Town Meeting of The World

a guest editorial

by Georgios Pan Piperopolus

A new conception in interglobal communications was realized last Tuesday night, when CBS presented a panel by Ex-president Eisenhower, Ambassador to the U.N. Arthur Goldberg and Solicitor General Thurgood Marshall, who were linked with students in London, Paris, Mexico City and Belgrade by the Early Bird satellite.

The "immorality" of the Americans' presence in the South-North Vietnamese struggle was heavily emphasized, and along with it the contradictory nature of U.S. claims for "self-determination" of the people of the World and the intervention of the U.S. in South Asian and South American affairs as well as Middle Eastern affairs.

From the nature of students' questions, one could not help but realize that there were three groups of "radicals" who openly attacked U.S. policies on the International stage.

In my opinion, however, a simple truth seemed to escape the critical minds of the young students; namely the fact that Mr. Goldberg so eloquently and clearly emphasized: "Why should one criticize the U.S. for its intervention in South Vietnamese affairs and leave Hanoi and Peking out of the burden of such criticism; Why should the Americans just go out of Vietnam and leave the South Vietnamese to conduct "free" elections when the Viet Cong are not willing to "move-out" along with U.S. troops; And why does Hanoi insist on "Free" elections in South Vietnam, when she does not hold such in the North?"

A.C.P. Parade Of Opinion

Better Student Image

(ACP) — A group of Yale students is setting out to combat the trouble-maker image of the college student by creating a nationwide opinion magazine, says the Daily Lass-o, Texas Women's University, Denton.

The magazine, Political, was introduced to show what students are really interested in.

According to the Christian Science Monitor, the editors hope to "present the most important national issues each month by the men who make them, the statesmen and political scientists."

"The students hope to show that most students are serious about their studies and are interested in helping solve national and international problems," the Monitor said.

The magazine has received endorsement from the Luce publications, Life, Time, and Sports Illustrated, as well as $10,000 worth of credit from McCall's press.

The editors, two Yale juniors majoring in political science and philosophy, want their magazine to be "a clear, concise forum to bring closer communication between government and the public."

We support the editors' objectives and hope they succeed in creating a better image for college students and increasing impartial political information.

Letters To The Editor

There's More To It

To the Editor:

Recently a certain UMass student, by the name of Howard Scott, has contributed two most stirring and well thought out letters to our campus newspaper. In the first, he seemingly condemned the entire idea of a Homecoming Weekend, college football, and the enjoyment a student can derive from them. He obviously has forgotten that there are other types of satisfaction to be had from a college career besides that of learning from text books.

He has most recently condemned the fraternity system for being 'the counterbalancing force on the inflationary QPA.' Well, Mr. Scott, maybe there is more to life than a book and four walls. Maybe part of living is other people and mingling in society. Maybe part of living is keeping that society going, and on this campus, Mr. Scott, it is the Greek system that keeps our society and its organizations functioning smoothly.

Mr. Scott, not everyone can be happy living a life such as you must lead. Maybe some people are willing to sacrifice two-tenths of a point on their cume so that they may learn how to become true members of their society.

Only in America . . .

To the Editor:

"Colley Leroy Wilkins"—a fine, American name. Good, solid stock, that boy. The stuff presidents are made of. Too bad he can never become president, and all because of a silly li'l ol' trial. For killing—accidentally, of course—a little pest, a civil rights worker. What was her name again? Mrs. . . . Mrs. . . . Oh yes! Mrs. Viola Gregg Liuzzo. That was a shame, wasn't it? But with a name like Liuzzo, what would you expect? Her name sounds Red. Bet she was too.

"But she sure learned her lesson. Comin' down here, doin' wrong, makin' a nuisance of herself. No one would ever have bothered her if she'd stayed in Detroit. Why'd she have to come down here and meddle anyway? She should have known better. When good old Leroy was acquitted, the country got a good sample of justice—the right kind of justice—Alabama justice.

"Maybe, to keep the country from going to the dogs, we should run him for U. S. Senator, and get the right kind of people in there. Make this country a good place for decent folks to live . . ."

To Miami Beach?

To the Editor

I feel that Scottie Inglis should be commended for her editorial on the problem of the recent resumption of large scale Cuban immigration.

As he mentioned, the United States is acting as a "good humor man." Unfortunately it is we taxpayers who must pay for the good humor which is so generously being handed out. We not only distribute this good humor through welfare payments but are also at the same time, upsetting the economy of Dade County, Florida. Dade County, where most of the Cuban exiles enter and remain is being forced into economic upset by having to find employment and housing for their new influx. Also there may be racial tension as resentful negroes (who have the right to be resentful) will be threatened of losing their jobs to new exiles who will do the same job for much cheaper wages. Here, the negro American will be in jeopardy because of a Cuban.

There is always the idealistic cry of "can we close our doors to those wanting freedom?" Are we closing our doors to a want of freedom, or only to wants of selfishness or possibly only wants to be with a relative who had earlier escaped to Miami Beach?

College Religion

To the Editor

"There is no place for organized religion on campus." When Gena Corea made this statement in her editorial recently, it disturbed some students. It is upsetting to be told this after hearing in the same editorial that "there is a constant struggle to maintain the traditional academic freedom." Evidently freedom of speech does not belong to organized religion on this campus, or so she would have it. Miss Corea also stated that "Professors can not always openly espouse their beliefs. Often, teachers are criticized for making remarks against the cherished beliefs of people." I would suggest that religious leaders have the same difficulty and are often criticized for making remarks against the cherished beliefs of atheists.

Since you say, "We still can not define truth, justice or beauty," how can you also say, "Religions are not interested in finding the truth"? Do you know the truth, Miss Corea? You found fault with religions, claiming "they do not examine all sides of the question." How many atheists or agnostics have read the Bible? How many atheists or agnostics have studied scientific (that sacred word) evidence available clearly consistent with Biblical statements? Have you, Miss Corea? If not, then may I level your charge at you? "They do not examine all sides of the question."

When Billy Graham gives a lecture in Psychology 101, I, too, will believe differently.

A Place For Religion On Campus

To the editor re: "College and the Cult"

I agree with Dr. Feldman on several points of view credited to him by Monday's editorial. 1. The greatest improvements in man's condition have come from medical and technological areas of science. 2. The same problems of definition have existed in the humanities for the last 2000 years. 3. The scientist does advise on problems of, "population, feeding the masses, reclamation, crime prevention, and city planning. 4. That there is "a constant struggle to maintain academic freedom." However, these points are for the most part common knowledge, and of little significance.

If the social scientist is interested in explaining how and why people act, in the light of empirical evidence; and if the student of the humanities is interested in defining truth, beauty and justice; then for the social scientist to define truth, beauty, or justice is absurd, as it would be for the humanities student to advise on mass feeding, or other examples cited by Dr. Feldman. In fact his crude attempt to implicate these fields as logically sequential one to another is utterly without merit or sound backing. Validation is also lacking to support his gross statement, "magic and mysticism is more pervasive in our society than science." He attempts to provide backing with the plea, "Who pays any attention to him? . . . The call him an egghead," etc.

Let's look at some facts to see whether anyone pays attention to the scientist. 1. Population: effective contraceptives are available through a doctor. 2. Feeding the masses: agriculture is producing more food now than we are eating. 3. Reclamation: of what? We are reclaiming land from the sea, from forest fire damage, and putting it to sound use. 4. Crime prevention: despite the use of sociological techniques in juvenile delinquency, delinquency still increases at a rate far beyond the population increase. 5. City planning: Springfield, Boston, and New York are fighting slums with redevelopment and low cost housing. Therefore, in the light of the facts, Dr. Feldman's complaint that "magic and mysticism" is more pervasive than science, falls flatter than the proverbial flounder.

Dr. Feldman flounders through a series of unrelated premises followed by less related conclusions and emerges gasping for his academic breath. And gasp he should, as he defeats his own argument by saying in effect that a "fetish" is the only hope.

Dr. Feldman concludes his remarks in his typically unverified manner when he unequivocally states, "There is no place for organized religion on campus." Religion can give the individual a way of life, a standard of behavior, and, HOPE. Hope for new life, for truth, beauty, and justice can be found in religion. These very undefinables cited by Dr. Feldman are there for the taking, along with love and peace. These are defined in the intimate, personal relationship with God, a final testimony to the factual defeat of his editorial point.

Letters To The Editor

More Vietnam

To the Editor:

The controversy over Vietnam is a perplexing problem for people all over the world, especially in the United States where pacifist organizations and sympathizers of this cause have voiced their disapproval of U. S. intervention.

Gentlemen, a few notes of enlightenment:

We must first assume that to argue a position one has to know all, or nearly all, of the facts concerning a situation. Do you know all the information concerning the war in Vietnam? Gentleman, I have had a tour with Uncle Sam for four years and one of the things I've found is that the U. S. public does not receive half of the information that is known about a subject. In fact, it is doubtful that they receive even 20%. The newspaper correspondents know much more than the average laymen, but because of U. S. security purposes, are requested to not print all they know. I believe most Americans would be shocked if all the information were available to them, and the complicated maneuvering involved in reaching a decision. How can anyone take a position without full knowledge of the situation which these pacifists seem to be doing? Gentlemen your position is absurd!

One is led to believe by Marc Greenberg's letter last Friday that we invaded Vietnam because of our own self interest. The stand to protect Vietnam was made by a President long before Kennedy assumed office.

The spread of Communism in the world can be analogous to a raging forest fire that engulfs everything in its path causing widespread destruction and leaving barren the land. How many of us would not take up our weapons to check, alter and put out this fire? If your house was situated between two houses that were threatened by this forest fire, would you not lend a hand to your neighbor to help save his land when your was next in line? For that matter, gentleman, how many of you would not help a cousin, brother or uncle in another section of town whose belongings and land were threatened by this same fire of Communism? According to the saying "fight fire with fire", would you not even burn a path from your doorstep out to meet the raging fire to thwart its attempt to engulf your property (i.e. our offensive move in Vietnam)? Gentlemen, a defensive team does not win ball games.

Again according to Marc Greenberg, to insure a free democracy in Vietnam we should "halt all fighting and have a withdrawal of all foreign troops from Vietnam." Yes this is very wise Mr. Greenberg, but who invaded Vietnam first, the U.S. or the Communists? You purposely darkened the word "all"; will the Communists agree to this? It would be nice for everyone to mind their own business and be happy with what they have, but unfortunately someone has to spoil this idealistic position. The United Nations was formed to protect all nations against aggression, and if you know anything about the United Nations, it is virtually powerless.

Therefore, gentlemen, I say to you, know "ALL" the facts before the fire of destruction consumes you and your property.

Go, Precisionettes!

To the Editor:

I have heard that the Precisionettes, the only women's drill team in eastern Massachusetts, will not march at the Holy Cross game on Nov. 6th. Could this be that the band director is having the band performances take up both pre-game and half-time?

Since the Holy Cross game is to be televised, this would be a fine opportunity to display the abilities of several UMass organizations. The Precisionettes, a hard working group, are also an integral part of UMass and should be allowed to perform.

I speak not only for myself, but for others who have enjoyed Precisionette performances in the past. Cannot something be done to allow the Precisionettes equal opportunity? G.D.

Fire of Destruction

To the Editor:

It is unfortunate that the report on the informal Student Senate, Faculty Senate, Administration meeting (Collegian, Oct. 27) failed to take account of the precise import of that conference and its outcome. More particularly, I wish to correct a statement attributed to me, but totally erroneous, to the effect that "the locus of power [at UMass] should rest in the student body." Let me clarify my views.

A university is an institution, perhaps the only such institution which is permitted, or sanctioned to undertake a critical examination of the political, economic, and social structure of society, its values, mores, and traditions. This function is what defines education. The educative process permits a person to remove himself from the compelling and stifling dictates of authority imposed from above—authoritative forms which are not questioned. This "Oedipal" transition is necessary in order for a person to come into his own as a human being, to commit oneself as a free agent on new terms. This idea of education is indispensable to the idea of a university. This is the long, historical tradition and role of the university in society. By definition, the university consists of two groups and a primary relationship, that between students and faculty. Once the primacy, the dignity and inherent authority of that relationship is undermined, the idea of university itself is endangered. Education loses its meaning, becoming empty form and sterile mechanical process. It is this which has bred dissatisfaction among students, and has made knowledge meaningless. The failure in our time of this primary relationship, the dignity and respect of both student and faculty bodies toward each other—undermined perhaps by the imposition of a third and alien force, the administration into the life of the academic community—has caused many to reflect. Thus, Harold Taylor rightly noted: "The mark of a true university is whether or not it takes its students seriously."

The student movement for a voice in their own affairs and the affairs of the university at large is in the most conservative, historical tradition. For unless the students are taken seriously, there can be no true university. Therefore, there should be no locus of power at any university. However, there, must be clearly delineated loci of authority and competency. The present structure, organization, and governance of the university contradicts this necessary distribution. As far as the student body is concerned, it must be recognized as a competent and capable voice authorized to regulate all affairs relating directly to students—student government in the dormitories, student control of all activities paid for by the student body—and to participate in all affairs of an academic nature—representation on curriculum committees, advisory committees, etc.—Anything less than this basic requirement must undermine the educative process and the idea of university.

Joseph A. DellaGrotte

Ridiculous Regulations

To the Editor:

I should like to make some comments on the current issue of women's regulations here at the University.

First, the rule of signing out is the most ridiculous regulation women students are subjected to and should be abolished immediately. If the reasons Dean Curtis gives us are to be considered important enough to justify such a regulation then signing out should be initiated for men. If they aren't, as they appear, the rule should be dispensed with immediately.

Regulations such as curfews, and overnight signouts should never be required for girls over 21. The following is an illustration of the injustice of these regulations: My roommate is almost 22; she has to sign out when she goes out, come in at a determined hour, and sign out for overnights on weekends. Also if she wants to stay over night somewhere during the week, she must have the signature of the Head of Residence, and if she wishes to go to any place other than in home or the home of another UM girl, she must also have this signature. There is a graduate student in our dorm who is the same age as my roommate. None of these regulations bind her.

It is not that one would want to come in at 5 every morning or stay with her boyfriend every night if she were not restricted. It is just the principle of the injustice. Why should Dean Curtis have the right to restrict my roommate, who is as legally an adult as the grad student and Miss Curtis (for that matter)? One might add also that the University has no responsibility to the parent in this case. The UM, then cannot use this to justify those regulations. Why is this University still in the Victorian Age? ### Hot Scott

To the Editor:

Thank you Mr. Scott for your inspiring letter to the editor about "putty-type people who create children and little else." Incidentally, Mr. Scott, did you enjoy Homecoming? What time did the library close Saturday? Did you find economics as interesting Sunday as it was Friday night? Did you receive any reports from Wall Street? ... and other things which contribute to a complete education and the full development of a socialized being!

Explicit or implicit encouragement of solely purposeful institutions creates "putty-type" people, and in truth it is these AUTOMATONS who are the creators of nothing and little else!

Magic and Truth

To the Editor:

In Monday's Collegian you printed an editorial concerning religious groups on campus. This article seemed to imply that religion, i.e. religiously oriented groups, has no place on campus. Furthermore, the article stated the religions "want to sell their own version of the truth" and that religious groups "do not examine all sides of the question."

"Point of Information" I cry. Perhaps these criticisms are valid on some levels and for some groups, but not for all. There is a denomination which is based on the search for truth on a very personal level, and which has no creeds. Not only does it not fetter the minds of its members but it has no system of missionaries and makes no attempts to convert anyone. This denomination is Unitarian-Universalism. This group accepts the scientist and his findings, and encourages him to study further. This group, within the best of its powers, tries to maintain traditional academic freedom on all levels—within the home, the school, the church, the community and the government. It is far from magic and mysticism.

Not only did this editorial show ignorance of all the possibilities, but it claimed that there is no reason for religious groups to exist on campus, without supporting that statement or proving it in any way. I disagree rather violently, if for no other reason than to limit the campus and say that some organizations should not exist therein is in itself a breach of traditional academic freedom!

One final implication which also annoyed me was the attitude that atheists have the only free, unfettered minds. Within my own experience personally, I know this is not so! And if the author and Dr. Feldman think that there are no unfettered and sophisticated minds among the Roman Catholics, Jews and other denominations, then they are singularly uninformed and uneducated!

No Essays

To the Editor:

Included in the pap that the college student is asked to swallow is the pre-exam line, "this exam will make you think; it will test your understanding," ergo the essay exam. Seldom, however, do exams go beyond the sponge-ability test: absorb it in, squeeze it out—more specifically, replay the stuff you've memorized in a way fitting the style of the instructor. Fortunately, there are some instructors (knowledgeable in testing and learning psychology) who do test thinking and understanding, ergo the multiple-choice exam. Unfortunately, the extensive scientific material that proves the well-constructed multiple-choice test is the most objective and valid form of examination possible, has long been unaccepted by many instructors in many fields.

The causes for this rejection seem to vary from a rare, legitimate practical one, to a bias against the science of psychology that produced the knowledge (especially true among certain social science and humanities fields that are having their roles as explicators of human behavior curtailed), to a rationalization for one's inability to construct a good multiple-choice exam. Some instructors whose tolerance of an inconsistent situation (i.e. their present teaching method vs. the knowledge of the better testing procedure) is relatively low, make a glib compromise. "The exam will be part essay and part objective." This delusion is particularly inane when the familiar "identification" is passed off as the "objective" question. The I.D. is only a recall-essay question with the style of expression more defined.

It would be inaccurate to imply that only the non-psychology instructors have an inadequate exam system. Within psychology itself there are those of certain specialties who do not employ the objective method i.e. multiple-choice exams. To use their lingo, they are intellectually "fixated" at an earlier point in the development of knowledge. Moreover, many instructors in the natural sciences have shown a positive inclination to utilize the discoveries made by their counterparts in social science. D.A.

Fraternities, Sororities Sponsor U. N. Week

By Paul Ponti & Ken Berk

Fraternities and sororities are sponsoring a United Nations fund raising carnival tonight in the area around the campus pond.

The carnival will run from 7 to 11 p.m. In case of rain, the amusements will be moved into the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union. All proceeds from the carnival will be sent to the U.N. fund.

Bob McNeil, administrative vice-president of the Interfraternity Council, commented: "the carnival will feature more than ten game booths."

One of the more interesting booths will be the Lambda Chi Alpha-Sigma Sigma Sigma — and QTV booth. Their booth is an IBM date night booth. Where for 25¢ a person can get three computer matched dates.

The carnival is not limited to just students, but is open to the entire community. There are many members of the faculty that bring their children to the carnival.

Whenever the fraternities get together in a combined effort such as the U.N. Carni, there usually can be found in the background the Fraternity Manager George Rodgers, the head of the fraternity Managers Assn (FMA).

FMA has led a rough life since its inception in 1957. The sole function then of the Fraternity Presidents Assembly (later FMA) was for the cooperative purchase of fuel oil. The success of this operation prompted enlargement of the organization's scope. In 1960, the FMA was formally incorporated by the Interfraternity council, to be owned and operated by the fraternities.

Purpose of the FMA was more comprehensive than the original FPA. Cooperative purchasing was expanded to include food and other necessities. A uniform accounting system was set up to stabilize the financial system. A program to formally train and support the fraternity treasurers was established. As it has always intended to do FMA helps foster, protect and promote the best interests of the fraternity system. In effect, "FMA has become a 'local national'," Rodgers said.

FMA is more than a purchasing agent for the fraternities, the association is working on numerous other projects. Most important of these is the fraternity housing. Interest here lies in finding new land for buildings and in upgrading the older houses by remodeling them.

All in all, Rodgers said, the growth of the UMASS fraternities under the helpful arm of the FMA seems assured.

"Yahoo Rots?"

By F. D. Bodeus

When asked about the chances for publication of a Yahoo this semester, Editor Roger Jones replied, "If the flighty Student Senate ever lets us get off the ground, we could produce a high-flying publication."

Queried about the nature of his humor, Jones replied that it could sometimes be punishing.

Kudos continue to flood the Yahoo office, however, because the Student Union janitors refuse to clean them up.

Tom Krause Concert Exceeds Expectations

by Karen Shelley

The Concert Association's presentation Tuesday night of Tom Krause was considered an overwhelming success. In black tuxedos Tom Krause and his pianist charmed an audience of 250 with more than an hour of good music. He sang in four languages; as an example of the wide variety of material, the Hugo Wolf selections included a shout for victory to the Lord, a light teasing piece, some love poetry, and a prayer for peace beyond happiness and pain.

As a singer, Krause was excellent. Every word carried clearly to the entire audience; he used no microphones whatsoever in the SU ballroom, which is not noted for its good acoustics. What little one might choose to criticize in his voice would be pleyune. His mobile face easily portrayed the mood of the music, whether lyrical poetry, or a vigorous shout of "joie de vivre!"

Krause was accompanied by Pentti Koskimies, who was excellent, although somewhat histrionic. The piano itself was terrible; it is a deplorable situation at the University that the Concert Association is not allowed to use the only decent concert grand piano on campus.

When not touring, Mr. Krause is a regular member of the Hamburg, Germany, Opera. He has performed in the United States before in a rendition of Benjamin Britten's "War Requiem" at Tanglewood in 1963. All in all, Tom Krause's performance here lived up to his reputation for good quality music, and was, indeed, a success.

Students Get European Jobs

By Tom Donovan

Feature Editor

"Who goes to Europe to work for the summer? People very much like you. Some students are anxious to go abroad but can't afford to travel as a tourist. They need a paying job to cover their expenses while in Europe."

This was one of the reasons that Assistant Director of I.S.I.S. (International Student Information Service), Marc Efratas, gave Wednesday night at the Student Union when he explained the benefits of securing a job in Europe through this non-profit organization.

Efratas went on to explain further, "Others who get European jobs are people who can easily afford to travel overseas but don't want to skim the surface. They are interested in something besides filling up a photo album. They wished to know people, not just see places."

I.S.I.S. founded four years ago and joined with a sister organization (International Student Travel Center), has processed between 25500 and 3,000 students and professors for jobs overseas for periods up to 16 months with the option of working at six different jobs during that period. Many of those are people who have used the program for the second time.

There are two programs offered by ISIS, which differ in duration and departure time. The first, Basic Program, is available on a year-round basis and includes job placement, insurance, working permits, housing, and orientation in either Brussels or New York with travel arrangements left to the discretion of the individual.

The second, Summer Program, covers scheduled departure times for those leaving before Dec. 10, round-trip arrangements, job placement, insurance, working permits, housing and group orientation in Brussels with a free lunch included.

Efratas went on to mention that ISIS also has limited opportunities for work in Africa, and the East. Included in "the East" is the South Vietnamese city of Saigon where a Yale student, William Stone, is working teaching English to children; and ports in Japan where someone can be a Japanese fisherman for six months.

I.S.I.S. representatives Marc Efratas and Jean-Charles Calixte consider "student work in Europe".

He concluded saying that the Univ. Placement Office has further information for those who are interested.

UMass' Winter Forces Training

By Fran Boronski, Feature Staff

"Gather ye autumn leaves while ye may..."—so goes advice to all students unaccustomed to winter at UMass. With our changeable New England weather, the first snowstorm could be tomorrow.

Perhaps the most hazardous part of the whole winter is the enticing sidewalks, which, if you didn't know better, you'd mistake for mirrors. To combat this slipperyitis, students are urged to take these few necessary precautions:

- Practice your laughing now — you sure will need it to get through the winter.

- Begin immediately — learn how to bob your head up and down while walking. The down motion is for your own safety; the up motion is to keep all your friends from talking about how snobby you are. You know what they always say: "A shaky hello is better than no hello at all."

- Learn directions to the Soothe Shop (alias, the Infirmary). If you're careful, you won't need them, but accidents do happen. Their motto: "Falling, coughing or chronically ill, if you can moan, we've got a pill."

- Stock up on salt. Be like Hansel and Gretel—put salt in your path for non-skid safety. At least if you fall, the snow will be tasty. There is nothing more disappointing than falling into tasteless snow.

- Start a new fashion trend: be the first in your dorm to have slip-proof shoes. Rush to your nearest hardware store for some sandpaper. Proceed north to the five-and-ten-cent store for some glue. Who knows—maybe sandpaper shoes will be the winter counterpart of sandals. What a fad!

- Start out early for classes. For the overly cautious student, rumor has it that tents may be pitched midway between North Commons and Bartlett Hall. If you pack a lunch, it could be a joyful excursion.

- Carrying a shovel is a good policy. Clear those sidewalks and have a good tool for conversation, simultaneously. For those of you who have little energy but lots of time, tablespoons are the thing.

- Finally, having done everything possible to insure a safe journey across campus, the student is urged to be realistic. Be very selective in shopping off your winter wardrobe. Pastels are ideal, as are shades of grey, ly blend in well with those black clothing of this nature will sure-and blue marks you will inevitable collect as you brave the elements in your winter education expedition at UM. If only Lewis and Clark had heard about this challenge...

History's Heroine Finally Lauded

By Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

Don't flip the History book's pages; you won't find her there. And through the Society pages you'll not meet her. Standing next to a great man you'll seldom see her; for she is not an Aspasia next to Pericles. It's not in her nature to bewilder men in Cleopatra's style; and she would fall in the role of Marilyn Monroe or Brigitte Bardot.

The business world has not much to gain from her: She is not looking forward to a career; and to the world of intellect she never aspires, not for being incapable, but for fear of losing valuable time and not functioning in the role that she perceives prime: her being a mother, a wife, a woman...

Quietly she disapproves of the provocative, the exotic, the exhibiting; "a woman that spends much time in front of the mirror; that tailors herself with low cut dresses, tight pants and projecting blouses could be nothing but dishonest to herself," she thinks. "For such a woman can attract only the passion, appeal to the senses of a man not to the man."

She walks quietly, serenely, behind the shadow of her man. She waters the roots of their existence so that the fragrant flower of their family may come alive.

Pierced Ears Feature Looks, Glamour, Sleepless Nights

by Jean Hammersley
Feature Staff

Airy lobes have drawn the attention of UMass coeds to the ear as a means of feminine allure. The glamour of pierced earrings is fast replacing the old-fashioned earrings that clip or screw to the ear.

In one dormitory on campus, several veterans of pierced ears have taken up an extracurricular activity of supervising the new punctures. Sleepers—tiny wire structures—are fastened to the earlobe in an approved position. Next comes the waiting period. After a week or so of uncomfortable sleeping, the process is over. The sleepers puncture the lobes and earrings may then be worn with comfort.

Often, new initiates of the pierced ear sect get together to discuss the new look. "Are mine off center?" asks one coed of another. "It only hurts for a short while," comments a second. But the total overwhelming reaction is, "They're just wonderful."

Some girls go to physicians who perform the operation for a fee ranging from $5 to $25. Sleepers are not used in these cases. Instead, the ear may be frozen and punctured with a sterilized needle.

Whatever the method, the result is the same. Two airy lobes must be hidden by pierced earrings—studs or dangles.

Girls go wild at the vast selection of styles. Although prices for the better earrings range from $10 up, "The look is worth it," gushes one coed.

"Of course, pierced ears mean that I'll have to change my hair style," comments a new airy-lobed initiate. "I just have to wear my hair up now, or behind my ears, at least."

UMass Coed Wins N.E. Military Crown

On the evening of Oct. 15, the annual New England Military Ball was held at MIT's new Student Union with cadets attending from many of New England's colleges and universities.

The highlight of the evening was the coronation of Miss Mary (Bonnie) Fuller, a junior here at UM, as the New England Military Ball queen. Miss Fuller, a member of the John P. Granville Angel Flight, was selected by a board of Arnold Air Society cadets to represent the University's 370th AFROTC Detachment at the Military Ball.

At the Ball itself, she competed with candidates from 12 other colleges and universities in the New England area and captured the honors for UM and the AFROTC Detachment.

Miss Fuller, whose permanent home is in Springfield, graduated from Springfield Classical High School. A resident of Leach House, Miss Fuller is a psychology major and is also active in campus activities.

While she maintains the position of Information Officer for the John P. Granville Angel Flight, Miss Fuller is also Vice-President for the Women's Inter-Residence Hall Council.

Memoirs: Prisoner's Anguish

A husband and wife arrange a secret rendezvous with a special contact in an attempt to escape Communist Hungary, then are betrayed and taken away by the secret police.

So begins the true store of 3 years as a political prisoner, told for the first time by a woman in Black Nightshade, the Hungarian prison memoirs of Rose Vali as told to Theresa de Kerpely, head of residence at Eugene Field House. The book was published Monday by William Morrow and Co., New York.

Fourteen years after her arrest and imprisonment on charges of attempting to leave the country, Rose Vali, wife of UMass Prof. Ferenc A. Vali, relives her story through the pen of Theresa de Kerpely.

Mrs. de Kerpely spent 11 yrs. in Hungary, and with her background was able to identify closely with Mrs. Vali. As she puts it, "I had to relive her experience as if it were my own; everything and everyone she de- to see with my own inner vision scribed, to enter her mind and heart and take up my quarters there for the relived period."

In this remarkable account of her years in prison, Rose Vali

tells of her anguish over the fate of her husband, imprisoned somewhere in Hungary on a charge of treason. She recalls endless hours of interrogation without a chance to sleep, confinement in the "dark cell" for trying to send a letter to her mother, her "trial," and the surprising kindness of a prison guard she called "Cricket."

Later she is sent to a "work prison", to perform gruelling labor with all types of criminals—murderers, thieves, prostitutes, abortionists and fellow political prisoners from all classes and occupations. Her account of her relationships with these people is sometimes humorous and sometimes tragic. Her analysis of the social structure in a prison, where murderers hold the "top positions," is a revelation to people who have lived their lives in freedom and comfort.

What does a person do to combat the mental tortures and deprivations of a prison environment? Rose Vali gives a vivid account of her solution as she mentally revisits concerts, art exhibits and operas, and secretly makes Christmas presents for her missing husband in an effort to keep her sanity.

Finally, she describes the experience of leaving prison after confinement for 3 years and the resulting exhilarating glow of freedom.

Rose Vali was born in Buda-

When Greeks come down to earth after a Hasapiko, how do they cool off?

In Sparta they usually do it with Retsina, an earthy, resin-flavored wine from two thousand years ago. But in New York City, where there are even more Greeks than in Sparta, the cooling is frequently done with Rheingold Extra Dry. Then, fortified and refreshed, they take off for more leaping and whirling.

In New York City, Rheingold also lowers the heat for Poles after a Mazurka, for Jews after a Hora, and for Jamaicans after a Calypso. The fact is that in this city, where there are more kinds of people doing more kinds of dances than in any other city in the world, more people lower the temperature with Rheingold Extra Dry Beer than with any other beer.

Much Support Shown for Johnson's Foreign Policy

By William Grant
The Collegiate Press Service

Recent demonstrations against the war in Vietnam have touched off a wave of speakings, letter-writing, and other demonstrations to show support for the Johnson administration's foreign policy.

Many of the demonstrations of support for President Johnson are prefaced with similar statements: that those who oppose the war in Vietnam represent only a small proportion of the nation's college students.

At the same time, the Gallup Institute released its most recent poll which indicated that those who favor U.S. policy in Vietnam outnumber those who oppose it by a lopsided five-to-two ratio. "The percentage voicing their approval of U.S. policy has risen steadily since mid-June," the report said.

SOME OBSERVERS believe the increase in public approval of the war effort is related both to an increasing string of U.S. military victories in Vietnam and to the recent protests against the war.

As one college student put it, "These demonstrations are giving all college students a bad name and some of us get a little ticked off about it." The student, a 19-year old sophomore at Northwestern, said "It's too bad that it's no longer 'in' to be patriotic."

The possibility of reprisals against all college students by local draft boards concerns Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey.

HERSHEY SAYS that about one per cent of the nation's two million college students with military deferments are involved in the protests. "My real concern," he says, "is that some local boards may react to all this agitation by cancelling all student deferments."

The new forms of expression range all the way from unqualified support of the administration's policy in Vietnam to the more moderate groups who decry the militant protest demonstrations but want to reevaluate U. S. policy.

About 1,000 Yale students were drawn to a rally coinciding with a visit to the campus by Vice President Humphrey. The students presented the vice president with a petition with 550 signatures that said, in part, "We may disagree about the war but we believe this disagreement should not be expressed in such a way as to endanger the lives of American soldiers or to encourage other countries in the pursuit of war."

YALE WAS ALSO the home base for the founding of the moderate Americans for Reappraisal of Far Eastern Policy ARFEP is against civil disobedience as a protest tactic, emphasizing instead educational forums to promote a reappraisal of American foreign policy.

It is the after effects of a teach-in that has been churning up the New Jersey political scene. At Rutgers University Prof. Eugene Genovese told a teach-in audience last spring that if the U. S. followed its present policy in Asia, he would welcome a Vietcong victory in Vietnam.

State Sen. Wayne Dumont, Republican candidate for governor, promptly demanded Genovese's dismissal and an "investigation" of the Rutgers situation. Gov. Richard Hughes, a Democrat running for reelection, came to the defense of Genovese's right to speak, and the issue has become one of the most controversial of the gubernatorial race.

A DREW UNIVERSITY teacher, James Mellen, who told a Rutgers audience that he supported Genovese's view was told his contract would not be renewed after the current school year by his university. His speech was called "irresponsible" by the Drew University president, but the grounds for his dismissal were given as academic reasons having nothing to do with his Rutgers speech. Meanwhile, all is not roses for those demonstrating against U. S. policy. At the University of New Mexico, 14 students were arrested during a protest march when some of their pamphlets blew across the property of a service station owner.

They were charged with littering and fined $17.50 each before a local justice of the peace. Another charge of "distributing obscene literature" was dropped. The justice of the peace warned the students not to participate in any more demonstrations. The 14 had been picketing in front of the Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque.

IN THE MEANTIME, the state legislature moved into the picture when the legislative finance committee voted to find out if any of the students who demonstrated were on a state scholarship or were employed on campus. The committee also voted to ask the state attorney general if an appropriations bill could name a specific professor who could not be paid by the university, a reference to a professor who participated in the demonstrations.

Students Can't Always Judge For Themselves

By Ginny Sheinhouse
Staff Reporter

"Students should face up to reality. Sometimes they are not their own best judges," Alan R. Miller, assistant secretary of the University, said at a journalism seminar class Wednesday.

The former editor and publisher of the Amherst Journal Record, speaking about the purposes of a student newspaper, stressed that he felt students participating on a college newspaper should be able to seek advice when needed.

"Student newspapers need wider openings to their problems," Miller said. He suggested that there be a full-time expert available to the student press, such as a newspaper reporter or a faculty member experienced in news communication.

Miller said he feels that an executive staff made up of such experts would give continuity to the student newspaper and would make up for the turnover of new students each year.

"A newspaper is only as good as its staff, and a continuity of professional help would provide training programs for the students," he added.

Asked if the executive staff would practice censorship, Miller replied, "Control would be exerted—not censorship."

Miller also advocated paid student editors. "True," he said, "being an editor on a student newspaper is a voluntary job. With the increase in enrollment, the sounding board of students' voices must expand and, therefore, daily newspapers will be needed in the future. With the increase in output, time increases on the part of the editor. For this reason, I believe that student editors should be remunerated."

UMASS HOSTS HIGH SCHOOL GUESTS EACH WEEKEND

by Jean Fulton, Staff Reporter

"The Hatch sure is crowded today", "Wonder why they're all dressed up", "They're letting kids in younger and younger these days!", "Are they using yellow school buses for the free Saturday bus to Amherst?" Comments such as these have been heard at UMass on past Saturdays, but don't worry, there is a simple solution—High School Guest Days.

In late September and October, UMass, under the direction of the Provost's Office and Mr. Kenneth Suid in particular, presents this program designed to "acquaint high school students with the University" and afford them "personal contact with the campus".

In effect for over ten years, this year the program has been expanded to incorporate the guide service, ARCON, and guided tours of the campus are now offered in the afternoon, to both high school students and their parents. In the four tours conducted so far, over 2000 people have toured the campus.

The formal program includes an introduction to the "excitement and growth of the state university" by a member of the Provost's office and talks by representatives of the Admissions Office and various schools and departments of the University.

This Saturday, Oct. 30, for the first time the introductory talk will be given by a member of the campus guide service. Dormitories, fraternities and sororities are open and on weekends of home football games, high school visitors are given complimentary tickets to the game.

This Saturday, Oct. 30, is the last of the five scheduled Guest Days, bringing this year's program to a close.

Speaker To Brief ROTC

The Aerospace Presentations Team from Air University at Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama, will stage a dramatic program at Mahar Auditorium on Nov. 2 at 11:15 a.m.

Lt. Col Roy D. Simmons, Jr., professor of air science, announced today that the nationally-known briefing team has been scheduled to discuss America's future in space. The public is cordially invited to attend the briefing, Col. Simmons said.

The program covers all phases of our space program: propulsion, spacecraft, interplanetary probes and plans for a trip to the moon. The very latest information in colorful slides and action-packed motion pictures are shown throughout the lecture.

Now in its third year as a full-time operation, the Air University team makes hundreds of aerospace lectures annually throughout the nation. Last year, team members made 350 different stage, radio, and TV appearances. In September of last year, the team received the Air Force Association's top award, the Hoyt S. Vandenberg Trophy, for "distinguished service to the nation in the field of aerospace education."

Should The Univ. Establish A Department Of Religion

by Elaine Perriello,
Religion Reporter

Is a department of religion needed at UMass?

Rabbi Ruchames, chaplin for Hillel; Msgr. Power, Catholic Chaplin and Rev. Scott, Chaplin for Protestant groups were asked if they felt the absence of a department of religion represented a void in the "liberal" education is not being filled by the present informal instruction groups and non-credit courses.

RABBI RUCHAMES: "The study of religion and theology as an academic subject is taken for granted on most campuses throughout the country. These include both public and private institutions. I believe that it would be of fundamental value to add a department of religion to the University curriculum and to offer courses in all areas of such study."

"The absence of a department of religion at the University of Massachusetts is probably due to the existence of a number of problems which have apparently, thus far, not been solved. These include the relationship of such courses to the complex question of the separation of church and state and the academic standards that such courses would have to meet and differing opinion about the advisability and feasibility of setting up a separate department of religion to offer such courses."

"As to whether present non-credit courses in theology which are being offered by various religious organizations should be taken for credit in lieu of the formation of such a department," everything would depend upon whether the University administration regards these courses as academically acceptable and as meeting the standards set for all other University credit courses.

YOU ASK WHETHER "offering credit would improve attendance at these classes." The answer is yes, but one must also add that unless they conform to the standards set for credit courses at the University, the granting of credit to such courses would be a disservice both to the University and to the curriculum."

MSGR. POWER: "It seems most vital if education is to be complete that the most important of all sciences, theology - the science of God - should be given its place of primacy."

Education should concern itself with the whole man. When any aspect of it is overlooked then education is naturally going to be incomplete with the result that man must suffer. It is difficult to adequately carry out a religious educational program when it must be tucked in at very difficult hours, such as in the evening when the student is tired or weighed down with hour exams, quizzes, or papers.

Without any question many students are desirous of this important aspect of education, but simply cannot afford the time in a schedule that is already overcrowded.

If there were a department of religion or if courses in theology were offered for credit, this matter could easily be taken care of to benefit thousands of students in the years to come. Informal religion courses now offered simply cannot maintain constant attendance which is necessary if a maximum of benefit it to be derived.

In the twelve or fifteen state universities where such credit courses are offered, the result has been excellent. The courses have been enthusiastically received and the universities have been subsequently enriched."

REV. SCOTT: Formation of a department of religion is really a matter for the faculty to consider. Discussion and action I believe is inevitable. In fact it is going on informally from time to time. As to the desirability or undesirability of such a department, I have some strong feelings.

If a department is created here it should be done on the same academic basis present in any other department. This means that it be completely free from any denominational entanglements. There is a world of difference between the practice and the study of religion. The Supreme Court, incidentally, has made this a clear distinction. There is, for example, no reason why an agnostic or atheist should not teach in a department of religion.

I think the main reason a department has not yet come into being is the rapid growth of this institution, combined, perhaps, with confusion between "practice" of and "teaching of" religion.

The present non-credit courses probably should not become credit courses, although most of them have a high academic level.

Physicist Featured at Hasbrouck Dedication

Dr. Hans A. Bethe, one of the nation's most distinguished theoretical physicists, will be the main speaker Saturday, Oct. 30, at the dedication of the Hasbrouck Laboratory for physics at the University of Massachusetts.

The Cornell University professor, developer of one of the key theories involving the sun's energy production, will speak on "The Atomic Nucleus" in Room H-20 of the Hasbrouck building at 10:15 a.m. An open house from 8:45 to 10 a.m. will include guided tours of the multi-million laboratories and research equipment.

To be dedicated is a 90,000 foot facility, part of it built in 1949 and two-thirds of it completed last year at a cost of $2.2 million. The name honors Philip Bevier Hasbrouck, teacher of mathematics and physics at the University from 1895 to 1924 and registrar for the last 19 years of that time.

Hasbrouck Laboratory houses an expanding UMass physics department that now includes 22 faculty and 47 graduate students. Besides classrooms and three lecture halls, two with 110 seats each and one with 300 seats, and a number of specialized laboratories.

There are two atomic physics laboratories, a paramagnetic resonance laboratory, an electrical measurement laboratory for teaching, and laboratories for research in radiation electronics, high energy, nuclear and solid state physics.

The complex includes a wood-working and machine shop, equipped at a cost of over $5,000 for designing and building research and teaching equipment.

Dr. Robert L. Gluckstern, physics department head, will preside at the formal ceremonies. The dedication message will be by University President John W. Lederle. Dean I. Moyer Hunsberger of the College of Arts and Sciences will give the welcome and Rev. John L. Scott, chaplain to Protestant students, the invocation.

Scroll Plans For '65-'66 In Full Swing

The Scrolls are in full swing again under the leadership of Kathy Smith and officers—Mary Fennessey, Cindy Hunt, and Aurelia Palubeckas.

The group started activities this summer with a Registration Dance and orientation for the summer freshmen. They also served at the President's Reception and ushered for Commencement.

This fall the group worked at Freshmen Orientation by distributing beanies and co-sponsoring of the Freshmen Dance. Each Scroll received a commuter "little sister", and carried out the "big-little sister" program in her dorm.

The Scrolls in each dorm plan one activity for their dorm a month to aid in dormitory unity. They are serving the University by ushering at DVP programs and assisting in elections. The Scrolls are now planning a tea for their commuter "little sisters" and a bake sale.

Higher Education Bill Passed By Congress

THE 88TH CONGRESS may have been dubbed the "Education Congress," but the 89th Congress, which has just (on Oct. 23) concluded its first session has easily matched its record.

HEADING THE 89TH CONGRESS' achievements is the $1.3 billion Elementary and Secondary Act, geared primarily to aiding children in low-income areas. colleges and universities will help implement this act by organizing training and demonstration programs, performing research, and helping develop supplementary education centers for their communities.

Not far behind is the recently passed omnibus Higher Education Act of 1965. This act includes the nation's first program of federal scholarships. It also includes an insured loan program, subsidized interest rates, aid to "struggling" colleges, urban and suburban community service program corps, and expansion of the work-study, NDEA, and Higher Education Facilities programs.

PASSAGE OF THE authorizing act was not tantamount to spending funds on its programs, however. In the closing days of Congress, the House and Senate dropped the funds for the controversial teacher corps, which will delay it for a year.

In addition to those in the higher education bill, student aid programs were passed this year as part of the social security-medicare act and as part of the housing act. The social security program extends benefits to children of deceased or disabled parents. Previously, these benefits ended on the child's 18th birthday; under the new legislation full-time students may receive these benefits until their 22nd birthday.

ROTC Panel On WMUA

This Sunday, a special program will be held on WMUA from 10-11 p.m. It will primarily be a question and answer period concerning ROTC on the campus of the University of Massachusetts.

The questions discussed will be important to many people on campus, especially the male portion of the student body. What are my chances of entering OCS upon graduation? Is there a two year ROTC program? What is the ROTC scholarship program and what commitments go with it? If I am in ROTC can I go to graduate school?

These questions and many others, along with any you phone in during the show will be answered by a panel composed of the Professor of Military Science Colonel Joseph A. Bohnak, the Professor of Air Science Lieut. Colonel Roy Simmons, Cadet Brigade Commander Courtney Turner and the Cadet Wing Commander Colonel Ferris. The questions will be asked by the Collegian Managing Editor Peter Hendrickson.

Fellowship Program For Journalists To Begin Today

The second annual fellowship program for journalists will begin this weekend (Oct. 29-30) with a two-day meeting of 20 Fellows at the Univ. of Mass.

Sponsored by UMass in cooperation with the New England Society of Newspaper Editors, the program is directed by Dr. Arthur Musgrave, professor of English and journalistic studies.

During the weekend's five study sessions, half the students will be starting the last half of a two-year study program leading to a degree of master of arts. The other half will have begun the program of guided readings and seminars. The students are professional New England newspapermen who are sponsored by their editors.

Participating in panel discussions with the Fellows are Robert Lucas, editor of the Hartford (Conn.) Times and Robert Achor, managing editor of the Worcester Evening Gazette, who will talk on "Reporting of Local Government."

"Humor in Journalism" will be described by Dr. Dario Politella, associate professor of English and journalistic studies at the University.

Alvin Oickle, assistant managing editor of the Greenfield

Recorder-Gazette, will lead a panel discussion of "Reporting Public Affairs at the Local Level." Panelists are Dr. Irving Howards, director of the bureau of government research, and Gerald Grady, UMass Business Manager.

Dr. Musgrave will introduce discussion on "Professionalism and the Press."

The Saturday program will close with "Government Officials Look at the Press" by Allen Torrey, town manager of Amherst and Stanley L. Cummings, Greenfield attorney and chairman of the Greenfield board of selectmen.

Anti-Discrimination Act Will Be Put On Greek System

By Paul Luebke
The Collegiate Press Service

Unless fraternities and sororities are totally financed from private sources, their membership practices will be subject to review by the federal government, under a provision of the new Higher Education Act passed by the House on Oct. 20.

Failure by fraternities and sororities to cease discrimination on the basis of race, color or national origin could cost their university all federal funds. But according to the National Interfraternity Council, 90 per cent of the nation's fraternities and sororities are financially independent of their universities, and thus exempt from the new legislation's provision.

THIS anti-discrimination clause represents compromise between those members of Congress, supported by national fraternities, who resented Office of Education concern with fraternity membership policies, and those legislators who favored a blanket ban on Greek discrimination.

The act may be interpreted to coincide with U.S. Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel's earlier position that fraternities are subject to the provisions of Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. It is not clear, however, how the Office of Education will judge whether or not a Greek organization discriminates.

One national fraternity officer predicted more and more fraternities will grant their local chapters "local option" over membership policies as a result of the new provision. In this manner, said William Zerman, executive secretary of Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, local fraternity officers at a university will be able to certify that they do not discriminate.

Fraternity certification will then permit the university to retain its federal funds. But Zerman added that this procedure would not necessarily put an end to racial discrimination by individuals within the fraternity.

THE ISSUE of fraternity discrimination and federal funding was raised last spring over suspension of the Stanford Sigma Chi chapter by the national Sigma Chi offices after the local group had pledged a Negro.

Commissioner Keppel, replying to an inquiry from Sen. Lee warned on June 17 that a university which maintains a fraternity system "as a part of its activities and overall program" must prevent the practice of discrimination by these groups. Although Keppel's statement aroused considerable controversy, no action of any kind was undertaken by his office during the summer.

The Stanford Sigma Chi incident provides an example of the difficulty in proving discrimination, since the Sigma Chi national denied that the race issue was involved in its suspension of the local chapter, charging instead that Stanford Sigma Chi exhibited a "contemptuous attitude" toward the national fraternity.

Growth of UMass Focused By Television

The rapid growth of the University of Massachusetts in the past five years was reviewed Saturday, Oct. 23, in a half-hour television show over WTIC-TV, Channel 3, Hartford, Conn.

The Frank Atwood show "R.F.D. 3," at 12:30 Saturday afternoon was dedicated to UMass. Still pictures and a film segment showing campus growth and new buildings were used along with interviews with University officials, including President John W. Lederle; Dr. Oswald Tippo, provost; Dr. Leo F. Redfern, dean of administration; and Dr. William D. Tunis, dean of admissions and records.

The program focused on recent University history—five years since 1960 that have seen enrollment nearly doubled, the addition of a new University facility in Boston, birth of a UMass Medical School in Worcester.

The program also demonstrated the tremendous increase in faculty, buildings, and programs offered by the University. This period of growth has corresponded with the administration of President Lederle, who assumed his post in 1960.

President Lederle and other officials discussed with the host all aspects of the growing University—all of which have had to undergo major changes to meet the needs of an education-oriented society.

Panelists also discussed projections for the future of the University, including the development of a state system of higher education, centered between the University's Boston and Amherst facilities and the medical school in Worcester.

The film segment and still shots, presented a visual resume of UMass's growth, including scenes of newly-completed 24,000-seat football stadium and present construction of five 22-story residence halls that are scheduled to be completed for the fall of 1966.

For those unable to view the Saturday show, the program was repeated Tuesday, Oct. 26th, at 7:30 a.m. on Frank Atwood's morning show, also on WTIC-TV, Channel 3, Hartford.

Women's Tennis Team Finishes Undefeated

by Judy Chapin

Despite the freezing cold weather last Wednesday, the W.A.A. Women's Tennis Team defeated Mt. Holyoke in the last competition of the fall season. UMass won four matches, tied one (called due to darkness), lost one and gave up one due to the delay of a UMass player.

LYNN HUGHES, a junior from UMass defeated Helen Donovan of Mt. Holyoke 7-5 in the first set. The second set was called at 1-2 because of darkness.

In the other singles matches; Nancy Smolen defeated Marcia Clemens 6-2, 8-6; Gail Brown defeated Betty Bailey 6-2, 6-3; and Shirley Lord tied Trudi Noehren 6-4, 4-6 and 3-3.

In the doubles matches: Tony Hartrich and Sue Tracey for UMass defeated Patsy Wong and Stephanie Wakland 6-2, 6-2; Pat Thomas and Betty Gillingan (UMass) defeated Beth Richardson and Lois Everitt 6-1, 1-6, 6-4; and Candy Kane and Sandy Heinicke (UMass) lost to Joan Matchos and Sara Rosenthal 5-7, 2-6.

UMASS has had a very successful season in which the only blot was a tie with Springfield and won the rest of their matches.

Intramural Report

By Dave James

Defending dorm champs Chadbourne Maroons and the Gorman Oaks advanced to the finals of the dorm championship on the strength of impressive victories Wednesday.

The Plymouth Patriots, playing without their regular quarterback, Lynch, who suffered a separated shoulder in the Pats' last game, were unable to move the ball at all and their only score came on a kickoff return by Mason. For the first half the game was close with the Maroons holding a 6-0 advantage. However, in the second half the Patriots ended up on the short end of a 35-7 score.

THE GORMAN OAKS displayed an awesome offense while romping over the Grayson Flaming A's 45-19. Ferron's passing (14-19 and 5 TD's) and spectacular receiving by Lunt and Manning baffled the Grayson defense, while the hard-charging Oak line kept quarterback Steve Brown on the run most of the night.

Meanwhile in the Fraternity league, AEP earned the right to meet KS with a surprisingly easy 20-6 victory over TKE Tuesday night. Johnny Parnell was again the big star, as has been the case in most of AEP's games this year, with 14 completions in 18 attempts for 3 TD's.

THE FINAL official statistics have been compiled. The Chadbourne Maroons were the offensive leaders with 66 first downs and 184 points while KS took defensive honors with just 22 first downs allowed.

Randy Jenkins of the Middlesex Redmen was the leading scorer with 91 points, breaking TKE's Paul Caisse's record of 86. Bill Thomas of the Greenough Garfields set the pace in receiving with 51 catches. Jim Donahue was the outstanding quarterback, completing 81-120 for a percentage of .675.

MOST of the quarterfinal matches in the tennis championship have been completed. Kahn beat Sandman 7-5, 8-6 and Baron defeated Chapin 7-5, 6-3 to qualify for the semifinals. Oldach plays Cohen for the Fraternity championship.

Flash! Kappa Sig beat ASPI 24-21.

Catamounts, Redmen to Fight For 2nd Place in Conference

by Mike Gould

Vic Fusia's red-hot Redmen will try to make it four straight victories Saturday when they tangle with the Vermont Catamounts at Alumni Stadium.

In Vermont, the Redmen face a team which has a superior record (5-1), but which has played against markedly weaker opponents. The Cats, under Coach Bob Clifford, boast wins over AIC, WPI, URI, UNH and Norwich, while losing only to Maine. Coach Clifford has seen his UVM teams fall to the Redmen by a total score of 104-13 in his first three seasons.

A victory over UMass would make their season a sparkling success, and Vermont has the talent to give the Redmen a battle.

In Scott Fitz, they have a quarterback who holds the all-time UVM career record in total offense. This season Fitz has rolled up 674 yards.

Halfback Dick Hebert possesses a 5.0 rushing average and has caught 12 passes for 133 yards. Ends Jeff Kuhman and Jack Schweberger have caught 21 passes between them.

Defensively, Vermont is led by Rusty Brink, an all conference selection at center-linebacker last season. Brink is a hard-nosed ballplayer who thrives on contact.

UMass will start five sophomores on offense against UMass, with four sophs getting the nod on defense. Versatile Jack Schweberger will play split end on offense and safety on defense.

Vermont has good momentum going into the UMass game, with three straight wins. The Cats will no doubt be sky high Saturday.

***

The Redmen have outscored their last three opponents 84-25 while boosting their season's record to 4-2. Fusia's boys have shown great strength in all facets of the game except pass defense. The Redmen gave BU 260 yards via the airways last week, but fortunately had the offensive power to overcome their obvious defensive weakness.

Especially pleasing to Fusia and his staff must be the play of the sophomores. Quarterback Greg Landry, offensive linemen Dan Harrington, Ernie Smith and Jim Mitchell, halfback Don Durkin and ends Paul Milnar and Alan Becker have gained the confidence of UMass fans with their steadily improving and often spectacular play. The improvement of Harrigan, Smith and Mitchell is a primary reason for the Redmen offensive splurge in recent games.

The fine showing of Don Durkin at BU has given UMass a

Crew Looking For Candidates

The University Crew is moving into winter training quarters.

There will be a meeting Monday, Nov. 1 in the basement of Memorial Hall. The meeting will begin at 4 p.m. All oarsmen who rowed this fall and those who have signed up for crew should attend.

Also, any freshmen, sophomores, or juniors interested in rowing are welcome to attend this meeting.

We are primarily interested in those who are around six feet tall and weigh 170 pounds or better. Anyone weighing between 120 and 130 pounds and interested in becoming a coxswain should also attend this meeting.

Slides of the fall practice session will be shown at the meeting.

Yan-Con Championship To Be Decided Saturday

By Terry Carpenter

Seven varsity harriers will leave for Durham, New Hampshire this afternoon to compete in the Yankee Conference Championship meet. Making the trip are co-captains Terry Carpenter and Steve St. Clair, Mike Sheeley, John Andersen, Greg Tsoucalas, Bill Thoms, and Greg Bowman.

Favored in the meet is the host, U.N.H., on the strength of their victory earlier this year over defending champ U.R.I. UMass also beat the Rams, but not as soundly as the Wildcats. The Redmen have finished 2nd in this meet the last two years and will be hungry for the victory.

Maine and Rhode Island should not be counted out. The Bears eked out a one-point victory over UMass at the beginning of the season. This victory isn't as important as it seems as UMass co-captain Terry Carpenter didn't compete due to a leg injury. The Rams were hurt by graduation and are an inexperienced team. If a few of their runners came through they could be tough.

Defending champ for the individual crown is Terry Carpenter of UMass. He hasn't been running well this year as last, however, and doesn't seem to be in serious contention.

U.N.H. senior George Esterbrook has been running well and should battle it out with U.R.I. sophomore Charles McInnis. In a meeting earlier this year Esterbrook beat McInnis by 21 seconds. UMass co-captain, Steve St. Clair should be right up with the leaders.

The meet will start at 2:00 p.m. behind the Football Stadium and is an excellent spectators' race as the runners cross the same point 5 times.

Terry Carpenter is the defending Cross-Country champion. He has been injured most of this year and is not picked to repeat.

Co-Capt. Steve St. Clair of the Harriers.

Listed below are the results of Friday's recount in the Class of '69 officer election. The large discrepancy between the first and second counts was found to be in the running of the adding machine.

Senator Arnie Kaufman said that the discrepancy was discovered when the tapes of the original ballot and the recount were compared.

Kaufman pointed out, however, that despite over 1500 voters there was only a five vote error in the actual counting of the ballots.

Inter-Dorm Phones Misused By Students

University officials were greatly disturbed last week to discover that the inter-dorm phone system is being used by students to make long distance calls. This fact became apparent when the University was billed for over 100 unauthorized calls made during the Sept. 10-Oct. 10 billing period.

Calls were made to places as near by as Granby, and as far away as Wisconsin and California.

THE MATTER HAS been placed in the hands of Mr. Robert W. Fowler, staff assistant to the Treasurer's Office. Mr. Fowler, who is in charge of University communications strongly urges all who have made these calls to report them to his office.

"Students who come to me voluntarily and provide information for correct billing will not be subject to disciplinary action," stated Mr. Fowler. "This will be handled strictly as an administrative affair. These students will be given bills payable to the Treasurer the same as if they had broken a window."

HIS STAND HAS been confirmed by the Assistant Dean of Men James J. Burke.

However, he did stress the fact that any calls not accounted for will be turned over to the Student Senate for action.

Gary Bombardier, Senate Treasurer, stated definitely that all unpaid calls will be traced and the guilty parties prosecuted.

"The use of these phones is a privilege, not a right," explained Senator Bombardier.

Poll Favors Drill Team; Game Space Questioned

By PAT PETOW, Staff Reporter

The Precisionettes, the UMass women's drill team, were absent from New England's newest and finest stadium, site of Saturday's football game with Vermont. Our football team trounced Vermont Saturday; they are considered, in many respects, a great football team. They enjoy a new stadium.

The Precisionettes are the only New England university women's drill team and one of the few on the East Coast. Capt. (Assistant Professor of Military Science) Bruce R. Nilsson, their advisor, praised them as an unusual and dedicated group. The Precisionettes are sometimes invited to perform at the new stadium.

ACCORDING to general practice, the Precisionettes' advisor explained, the athletic departments or authorities which organize football games place the band director in charge of pre-game and halftime activities. Both spots are limited in minutes, and, in practice, the time is divided between the opposing sides. (Agreements worked out by each school may extend the periods of time as was done for the pre-game time of Homecoming game.)

However, at UMass home games, when the visiting team either does not have a band or does not bring it, the full 15 minutes of the half and the three of pre-game are used by our band and, usually, another group such as the Precisionettes or the Flying Redmen.

THE GIRLS are not scheduled for every available game performance, that is, when the other school is not represented, but are invited at the discretion of Band Director John A. Jenkins.

Jenkins said last Friday, that he himself enjoyed the Precisionettes' performances and that he welcomed their participation at "opportune" times.

Jenkins also endorsed the idea of the girls representing the University at away games to which the band does not go. This season they have traveled to Maine where, Nilsson bragged they more than held their own with the UMe band.

IN ADDITION to the Maine away game, they performed at the AIC and Buffalo games here this year. Three minutes at the half were allowed for the Precisionettes in the AIC game, the first home game.

On Saturday, the team marched in the parade in Pittsfield—their sponsors there paid all the expenses.

THE FLYING REDMEN, who were asked to perform at the Vermont game, if the Vermont band did not, felt unprepared and did not participate. The Redmen suggested Thursday that the Precisionettes take their place; but this was not sufficient notice for the drill team.

To the dissatisfaction of many (see poll), Nilsson admitted that "It's assumed that most of their time has to be spent off-campus." As things stand now, the Precisionettes will not be seen on campus again this semester.

He said that there was no planned request to be allotted part of the band's performing time under present circumstances. But the Precisionettes, he indicated, are desirous of performing as often as possible at home functions as well as away.

A WOMEN'S drill team since 1948, the Precisionettes, until recently, were part of the band. However, after the arrival of Jenkins to the University and the enlarged role of the marching band developed, the women parted company with the band.

Nilsson, who described the history, recounted how the Army ROTC saved the drill team, undertaking their training with cadets. In 1963, they marched at the UMass-Harvard football game and in 1964, beginning their first full year as newly-organized team, they made their debut at the Buffalo game.

The Precisionettes do receive Student Senate funds. Appropriated for 1964 was $5,620 of which $1,063 was unused. This money was returned chiefly because they did not make two trips to Boston, lacking invitations to a Patriots game as well as a UMass game, they economized in selecting uniforms. The Precisionettes also earned money for themselves and bore the expense of their banquet.

For 1965, they have been granted $4,010. Some of this will most likely be returned since they were not invited to the Boston University game for which an appropriation was approved in the budget.

NILSSON pointed out that the Precisionettes do more now than they ever did when they were part of the band.

Nielsen Addresses D.V.P., Lauds Work of United Nations

By PAM METAXAS,
News Reporter

"I am unshakably of the conclusion that too much talk by diplomats is to be particularly preferable to military means," stressed Ambassador Sivert A. Nielsen of Norway, Wednesday evening during a speech sponsored by DVP in the Student Union Ballroom.

The Ambassador added that he was not a "one-sided pacifist" because of this remark, but, simply felt that the past work of the United Nations has averted several catastrophes through mediation.

He referred to the Israel and Arab dispute, South Vietnam and Cambodia, Africa, Bay of Tonkin and the Cyprus crisis.

He cited the Cuban crisis of Oct., 1962 as another good example. The Security Council used appeals to the U.S. and Cuba and other means to "help break a collision course to a nuclear holocaust."

Nielsen went on to say that the veto in the UN is "not entirely negative." It may even be called a positive element since other nations regard it as a safety belt. If the veto did not exist the powers would probably not be willing to bring international disputes to the attention of the UN at all.

During the 1950's, he pointed out, only the Soviet Union used the veto to any great extent. But now "the Security Council has again become more active in the use of the veto," he said.

In a further evaluation of the UN affect on the new African and Asian states, the Ambassador remarked that the "United Nations can say with some pride that the child is today active and in a healthy condition."

He said that, although the UN was not involved in the establishment of the Congo state, it appeared on the scene when the new state was literally falling apart and he believes that the UN "did, in all likelihood play a definite part in avoiding a major conflagration in the Congo."

Nielsen emphasized that these new African and Asian states have become valuable assets to the UN. They have proven their loyalty through their actions and have developed foreign policies which are "based on our concept of democracy." These states find themselves more and more concerned with two areas:

- Political independence which they have nearly achieved.

- Economic development — which they have yet to achieve.

These states, added Nielsen, all belong to "poor countries"—that is, their economic development is progressing at a slow rate in comparison with the industrial nations and they have little to offer their citizens except a hard life.

To clarify this fact he compared the average capita income of the "rich" countries with that of the "poor."

The industrial "rich" countries, including the United States, have a capita income (yearly) ranging from $1000-3900 while the "poor" countries have one of $88-230.

These poor nations have problems largely because their economic growth does not keep pace with their population growth. Nielsen explained. This accounts for the fact that 2 out of 3 of the world's total population are living in "poor" countries.

But a new organization has been formed to deal with this problem pointed out the Ambassador—the United Nations Trade and Development Organization.

Since there is a division between the "have not" countries (Africa, Asia and Latin America) and the "have" countries (U.S., Soviet Union and Western European powers), there is a better chance for the "have nots" to seek help from the "haves." On the other hand, he remarked, "We only help them by making it possible for them to help themselves."

As for the charge that the UN is in a state of disintegration, Nielsen felt that the fact that it celebrated its 20th birthday this year is argument enough for this charge.

He specified that the UN is "not bankrupt" and the present deficit of $85 million is twenty million dollars lower than the amount published in the mass media because several countries, including his native Norway, have made voluntary contributions to alleviate this problem.

The UN will continue to exist within such precarious situations said the Ambassador and to intervene in international disputes as in the past.

Without UN intervention, there could have been numerous unsolvable repercussions in many parts of the world.

This may be said to be the goal of the UN peace-keeping force as stated in the UN charter—"to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war," concluded Nielsen.

SWAP Controversy Session Discusses 4-College Area

By PETER HENDRICKSON,
Managing Editor

The four-college controversy discussion aimed at finding ways to share the activities on four colleges who now co-operate on an academic basis.

A joint student-staff committee had met last year in the spring to discuss cooperation but has achieved little more than the bus service.

The following points were discussed by the SWAP controversy session on Four-College.

- The three college busses running evenings between Amherst, Smith and the University appear to be poorly used and do not even serve Mount Holyoke, the most distant college.

- DVP wishes to extend the lecture series concept to the other colleges to offer a wider variety of speakers.

- A recent four-college success is the Newman Club which worked out a program resulting from a summer planning session.

- Art exhibits, limiting because of the cost, could possibly be shared among the four-colleges. The four schools have published a book with literary articles compiled from the schools.

- Delegates pointed to the problem of bringing an awareness to the students and staffs about the potentials of four college cooperation.

- Dr. Mark Noffsinger said that administrators are enthused about the proposed programs.

- It was also mentioned that

WMUA, WAMF (Amherst) and WMHC (Mt. Holyoke) are rejuvenating a network of these student FM radio stations after a long lapse. Special programming will be simultaneously available on the three campuses when special events take place.

- The Collegian is also attempting to initiate a sharing of news stories to increase coverage and awareness of events on the other campuses.

REVIEW:

Irish Folk Singer Captivates Crowd

By RITA GOTOWALA

Thrilling a near capacity crowd, Grainne Yeats, Irish harpist and folk singer, superbly performed her renditions of harp music and songs Wednesday night in Bartlett.

The program, initiated by early harp music of the 14th century (notably "Lamento di Tristano" and concluded with several Irish folk tunes, featured Elizabethan music and 16th century Spanish court music.

Highlight of the evening was a medley of contemporary songs in honor of William Butler Yeats whose 100th anniversary is being celebrated this year.

Two excellent selections were: "I Am of Ireland" and "Red Hanrahan's Song about Ireland." Father-in-law Yeats, influenced by the "timeless and changeless quality over the Irish landscape," wrote the words to this music composed by Brian Boydell, Ireland's foremost composer.

Skillful fingers gliding over the strings, Ireland's Yeats honored her country's harpists before rounding off the program with Irish folk music. One song, "Slut a Ruin," half English, half Irish, was the precursor of the well-known "Gone with the Wind" by Peter, Paul and Mary.

Her final number, an encore for the eager audience, was a playful, tongue-twisting Irish folk ditty which brought delighted reactions.

Artist Yeats demonstrated that she is not only a gifted harpist and folk singer but also a witty raconteuse by captivating an eager and curious crowd.

In Whose Best Interest?

The Precisionettes were not allowed to perform at either the Homecoming game, or the Vermont game last weekend. Why?

The Student Senate provides funds in the amount of $4,010 each year so that the spectators who attend UMass football games may be treated to the fine performances which this group of University women continually put on. The Student Senate also budgets the funds needed to finance the Marching Band. Why then should one of these organizations even be in a position to hinder the other one?

Yet, it is the Director of Bands who controls the entire pre-game and half-time schedule of performances. He, then, can, and does, stop the Precisionettes from performing. This should not be so. The students have paid to see both fine groups perform, and are entitled to see both. For one to grow at the expense of the other is a gross injustice.

The Marching Band has improved quite considerably in the past few years. Its own performance is of such high caliber that it no longer needs the Precisionettes to improve its position as, it once did. It is for this reason that they have split into two distinctly separate groups. However, they should both get their due, and they should each be allowed time to perform.

It should be acknowledged that these groups are not in competition with one another, although it appears that some people believe that they are. One is a Marching Band; one is a Drill Team. Each has its own type of performance.

Last Saturday, there was plenty of time left over in the half-time period after the band performed. There is no reason why the Precisionettes could not have filled it with their delightful performance.

Saturday the new Alumni Stadium will be filled to near capacity for the big game with Holy Cross. This game, as well as the half-time performance will be televised. The University will be given a great opportunity to "show-off". It is only right that as many facets as can be shown, be presented to this vast audience. This performance should include the Precisionettes as well as the band.

If the Director of Bands feels that it is in the best interest of the band that the Precisionettes do not perform, then perhaps the scheduling of pre-game and half-time activities belongs to another, one who will consider the best interest of the students who are paying for this performance and the fans, both here and at home, who will be watching it.

Education: Part 2

School, Prejudices, and You

Dr. Feldman believes that education reinforces one's biases and prejudices.

Does it?

Ed Grund '66, with many other students, attacks this theory.

Education, by its very nature, must destroy prejudices. Prejudices are based on a lack of knowledge. Knowledge, gained through education, kills prejudices.

If a student entered college believing that Negroes were biologically inferior, he has only to take a zoology course to clear up this misconception.

One UMass student comes from a town composed of 60% Catholics. No Jews. No Negroes. Here he has met Jews, Negroes, people with varied backgrounds. Here, he has widened his world.

If a student reinforces his biases in college, the fault lies with the individual, not the school.

UMass offers many opportunities to be exposed to new ideas. One can meet people from a variety of religious orientations, ethnic backgrounds and political beliefs.

After this interaction with others, the student can examine everyone's beliefs and decide his own.

It is true, some do leave college with the same ideas they had when they entered. Miss Anne Ferguson, Assistant Professor of Philosophy, believes that after college, these same ideas rest on a more logical basis.

The student feels a new obligation to support his beliefs. After an education, a person can no longer offer as reasons for his beliefs, "Ma says so." or "The church says so."

It is also possible for a student to live in a shell at UMass. He can beat a path from his classes to the commons to the dorm. He can avoid contact with super highways and never diverge from his narrow path.

But if he wants to get the most out of his education, he must involve himself. He must become involved with people and in activities. He must enter college with the idea of broadening his scope — not of getting a good cume.

Gena Corea
Editorial Staff

Anticlimactic Victory

Saturday's football game against Vermont was played for almost nothing. UMass went out there and smashed Vermont forty-one to six in an unprecedented show of both offense and defense. But how anticlimactic the whole affair was. The Yankee Conference had already been lost to Maine, and the only thing left was to finish the season and wait for next year. Even the cheerleaders had the hardest time getting people to count push-ups.

The trouble lies within the Conference itself. Since it is so lopsided with UMass and Maine making up the power the outcome of the game between the two usually determines the outcome of the Conference. Who else in the league is capable of knocking off either one of them? Then why do these two means always meet head on in the opening game of the season? They should be scheduled for the conclusion so that more of an interest would be built up as the season progressed. More interest would undoubtedly result in better attendance and more school spirit.

Gradually UMass is meeting tougher opponents. Next year Dartmouth and Boston College become new foes, and within the not to far distant future the Conference may have only five members with UMass dropping out. Therefore, until that time arrives, the Conference should face reality and make definite scheduling adjustments.

We have, (and we are grateful,) in the past several weeks received a deluge of letters on many different subjects. Regretfully, we have only enough space to print a representative sample of these, and as a result your letter may not have appeared. If more than one letter is received on the same topic, and space is short, the letter which best portrays the issue, and is well written will appear in the paper. We hope that this will not discourage your writing to us, as the more letters we receive, the higher the quality of the Forum will be. We should also note that we use many of the letters to provide topics for our staff editorials. It is our sincere wish that the level of your response will never stop, but will continue to grow. We apologize if your letter does not appear in print, and hope you will understand our position.*

From The Senate . . .

To the Editor:

Several students in the past few weeks have been using the inter-dorm phones to make long distance phone calls. It is their belief that since an intricate system is required to "sneak" these calls through that they can not be traced.

Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Several of these calls have been traced to make the point and the offenders are being brought before Judiciary. The charging of unauthorized calls to the University is considered a very serious offense and will be severely dealt with.

We advise any students who are considering this foolish action to think about the consequences as well as the act.

Is a free phone call worth a college education?

Student Senate

To Mr. Jenkins . . .

To the Editor:

Where are our Precisionettes? As a Student Senator I feel this question must be answered. The Student Senate has allocated $4,010 to the Precisionettes this year so that they may perform for the enjoyment of the Student Body. Why haven't they been allowed to perform at the last two (2) home games??

Granted we have an excellent marching band, but the marching band is not the only performing group on campus.

As Director of Bands Mr. Jenkins, you control the pre-game and half-time performances. As Director of Bands don't you think it would be nice to allow us to see our Precisionettes at the Holy Cross game next Saturday??

Year-End Draft of Childless Married Men Seen

"Before the end of the year, Massachusetts will probably be drafting childless married men between the ages of 18 and 26, but only those classified I-A," prophesized Col. Joseph A. Bohnak, recently assigned head of the Army ROTC Detachment at UMass. "As of now, 12 or more states will be drafting married men in November."

COL. BOHNAK, whose military experience includes battle-front operations as well as administrative Pentagon work, added: "In the present circumstances, there is no reason to believe that college students will be called up. However, if ever it becomes necessary to draft full-time University students, I presume they will take those in the lower academic brackets first."

"While all fulltime University students are classified as IIS, students in advanced ROTC are automatically classified ID," the colonel reported.

Col. Bohnak '47, is a graduate of the University of Kentucky, where he was an editor of the yearbook, president of his fraternity and the ROTC cadet colonel. Following service in the Philippines as a first lieutenant in World War II, Bohnak went to Albuquerque, N.Mex., where he worked with the Armed Forces Special Weapons Project on the then new atomic weapons.

AFTER SERVING as commander and operations officer in the 45th Division during the Korean War, he joined the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the Pentagon, where he was executive officer of the U.S. Delegation to the Inter-American Defense Board.

In 1958, Col. Bohnak was given a three-year assignment as advisor to the commandant of the National War College in Bogota, Colombia, where he taught U.S. Military Science and Tactics. Later, as the chief of the tactics department in the School of the Americas in the Panama Canal Zone, he taught U.S. Army tactics administered to inter-American military scholars, including the Jungle Warfare Training Center Special Forces.

IN RECENT YEARS, Col. Bohnak has served as a regimental commander at the Fort Knox armor center, attended the Navy War College in Newport, R.I., as a student, and served a year's duty with the Intelligence Division at the Pentagon.

Sitting in his corner office in Dickinson Hall, where he can watch the outdoor maneuvers in the spring and fall, Col. Bohnak outlined the advantages of the student in advanced ROTC: "Without going into any great detail, the man is deferred from active service until after graduation; he takes a general training course choosing a particular branch in his senior year; he receives some $1,000 in pay during the advanced courses. He may further defer his obligation during graduate school."

"We never lose sight of the fact that these gentlemen enrolled in ROTC are here to be educated in the field of their choice; ROTC is secondary," the colonel reminded.

"IT IS OUR ULTIMATE concern that ROTC training for these men be consistent with the University of Massachusetts,

The Army ROTC program at UMass encompasses national security, military law, drill, history, marksmanship, map reading and leadership. "The college student in ROTC is entirely different from the Army basic-trainee," he said.

"The college student has an inquiring mind — he thinks rationally and logically, and he wonders if ROTC shouldn't be more than acquisition of skills. We here show him that it is much more than a mere acquiring of skills."

THE STUDENT IS provided with an appreciation of the role of his country in world affairs and an understanding of the missions and responsibilities of the national defense team. He is an active participant in panel discussions concerning the elements of national power and policy implementation.

Ford Motor Company is:

challenge

Dale Anderson
B.A., Wittenberg University

At many companies the opportunity to work on challenging projects comes after many years of apprenticeship and a few grey hairs. Not so at Ford Motor Company where your twenties can be a stimulating period. There are opportunities to prove your worth early in your career. Dale Anderson's experience is a case in point.

After receiving his B.A. in Physics in June, 1962, Dale joined our College Graduate Program and was assigned to our Research Laboratories. Recently he was given the responsibility for correcting cab vibration occurring on a particular type of truck. His studies showed that tire eccentricity was the cause of the trouble. Since little change could be effected in tire compliance, his solution lay in redesigning the suspension system.

Tests of this experimental system show the problem to be reduced to an insignificant level.

That's typical of the kind of meaningful assignments given to employees while still in the College Graduate Program—regardless of their career interest. No "make work" superficial jobs. And, besides offering the opportunity to work on important problems demanding fresh solutions, we offer good salaries, a highly professional atmosphere and the proximity to leading universities.

Discover the rewarding opportunity Ford Motor Company may have for you. How? Simply schedule an interview with our representative when he visits your campus. Let your twenties be a challenging and rewarding time.

Precisionettes Absent...

The idea of being prop-carriers or "window-dressing" for the band is not the role of the Precisionettes, he said. At the 1965 Homecoming game the group declined an invitation to just stand, and such future invitations will be treated in the same way, the Army Captain promised.

Programmed off-campus appearances during the rest of the year include the Nov. 11, Veterans Day parade in Northampton, the UMass-UNH game at N. H. and the St. Patrick's Day parade in Holyoke, with their transportation furnished by the sponsors. The Precisionettes may also accept invitations to a Norwich basketball game, the winter ROTC review at Yale and a New England drill meet to be held in Boston and last spring they were guests of the World's Fair Committee in New York, performing near the Unisphere.

TWENTY-NINE girls are presently trained for the team with hopes for a company of thirty-six with six extras by St. Patrick's Day.

The girls practice about 1½ hours each day with additional hours before area shows. This year, special schedules permit the week day drills in the afternoon; last year, the closely-knit group met at 6:30 a.m.

BESIDES the concern of the members of the Precisionettes (which prompted this article), students, who answered questions in a poll taken at Saturday's game, seem to heavily favor more appearances for the group.

The questions put and answers received were:

1. Do you enjoy the Precisionettes — the women's drill team?

Yes: 64; No: 2; Undecided: 6.
2. Are you in favor of their receiving money from the Student Senate?

Yes: 63; No: 3; Undecided: 4.
3. Would you like to see them at all football games (home and away)?

Yes: 57; No: 12; Undecided: 1.

4. Do you think they should be at other functions as well — that is, when they are invited to something like another sports event, military review or parade?

Yes: 57; No: 15.

5. Would you like to see them improved or changed (or their types of marches improved or changed) before wanting to see them at all games?

Yes: 24; No: 42; Undecided: 6.

A MEMBER of the Precisionettes when interviewed said that "we can't understand why we aren't given a space at most of the home games."

Asking for a little more opportunity, she acknowledged that at the Holy Cross game, at UM, Nov. 6, they would "like to march because it is being televised and it's good publicity."

Nilsson pointed out that the Precisionettes are completely student-oriented and that their routines are originated and planned by the students and their (student) drillmaster, Bernie Cabral.

The Collegian regrets that the political advertisement published in the Oct. 25 issue for William King was in error.

The ad should have read "I would sincerely like to thank all those freshmen who did me the great honor of nominating me for the presidency of their class."

University Expansion Highlights

Four bids were received on Oct. 15 for the new Administration Building. The apparent low bid of $2,738,941 was submitted by Daniel O'Connell's Sons of Holyoke. The second low bidder was Fountain Bros. of Springfield with a bid of $2,790,742. It is expected that ground will be broken for the project early in December with a scheduled completion date of Apr. 1, 1967.

The building will be located on the site of the old alumni field southwest of the School of Business Administration, will be rectangular in shape and contain a partial basement with 3 upper floors surrounding an open courtyard.

The installation of underground steam, electric, water and sewer lines in the vicinity of Hicks Cage and Boyden Gym and serving the Southwest Complex is nearing completion, and final tie-ups are being made. Every effort is being made to complete cleanup and paving under this contract before Thanksgiving.

Bids for air conditioning Goodell Library are due Oct. 28, and it is expected that the installation will be in operation by the start of the summer season.

Preliminary plans for both the Fine Arts Building and Bartlett West (formerly called "Second Addition to Bartlett Hall") are being reviewed and will be returned to the Bureau of Building Construction by the middle of November.

Final plans for Bartlett East are expected to be presented for our review by the end of Nov. and should be advertised for bid on or about Feb. 15, 1966.

FOOTBALL...

and Vermont was back in business.

The Redmen broke the scoring ice after a short Vermont punt set them up inside the enemy's 35 yard line. Don Durkin scored from 10 yards out after a post-whistle Morin block had set the Redmen back 15 yards.

UMass had the wind blowing against them in the second quarter, but Landry was just getting warmed up, and a little wind resistance was not going to keep him from throwing. Greg's pinpoint passes set up a one yard touchdown run by Phil Vandorsea and a 20 yard Morin field goal just before the half ended.

LEADING 16-0 at halftime, Coach Fusia played it a bit more conservatively at the outset of the third quarter, and the Cats took advantage.

Punting into the wind from his own endzone, Terry Swanson's best was a boot to the UMass 30. On the next play, Fitz connected with a halfback Dick Hebert for a touchdown, and UVM trailed 16-6.

The Redmen were again forced to kick on their next series, but Bob Meers broke the Vermont momentum with another reception, this time of a Scott Fitz pass.

From the UVM 36, Landry hit Meers again, a picture block by Bob Detore allowing Meers to score his first touchdown of the season.

WITH THE GAME no longer in doubt at 23-6, Fusia let Landry shoot the works in the fourth quarter, and what a crowd-pleasing show it was.

Throwing long, often, and with amazing accuracy, Landry led the Redmen to three fourth quarter touchdowns. The first was set up by a 20 yard pass to big Milt and accomplished on a 16 yard Landry to Meers affair.

Leo Biron set up the fifth Redmen touchdown of the afternoon with an interception at the UVM 34. Landry scored from the one.

Morin finished off the game's scoring with a truly great play. From the Vermont 45, Landry arched a long one into a territory occupied by a crowd of three players, two Vermont defenders and Milt Morin. The latter caught the ball in full stride, gave the defenders the brush and walked into the endzone for a spectacular six-point-er.

THE VICTORY gave the Redmen possession of second place in the conference and an overall record of 5-2.

SOCCER...

In the second stanza nerves began to grow tense, as each team played exceptionally hard. The Cats knotted the score at 6:35 on a goal by John Edbrooke. The Redmen had a couple of chances to get the lead back, but the deadlock continued until 14:00, when UVM came agonizingly close to breaking it.

THE UM GOALIE, Larry Martin, made a beautiful diving stop, and a Vermont player took the rebound with Martin on the ground. But he could not capitalize on the open net as his shot missed altogether. The half-time served as a cooling-off period for both teams after several heated verbal exchanges.

THE THIRD PERIOD started out dominated by the fired-up Cats. They mounted numerous threats, and hardly allowed the Redmen a shot. But UMass held on, and the final regulation period was more or less evenly played. The excellent brand of play under such tense conditions carried over into the overtimes, and the Redmen came out on top.

It was a tremendous team effort on the part of Massachusetts. Although the tight Vermont defense did not allow them many shots, they repeatedly came through in the clutch. Larry Martin was magnificent in goal with 24 saves.

VERMONT finished 4-1 in the conference and is now 7-1 overall. UMass is 3-1 in conference play and 5-3 overall. The game next Saturday at UNH will decide if they are to get a share of the crown with UVM.

Redmen Football, Soccer Teams Beat Catamounts

By MIKE GOULD

A spectacular aerial show by Greg Landry led UMass to an impressive 41-6 victory over Vermont Saturday at Alumni Stadium.

Completing 20 of the 25 passes he threw, Landry rolled up 300 yards via the airways. Greg threw three touchdown passes, two to Bob Meers and one to Milt Morin, and scored once himself on a sneak from one yard out.

ENDS MORIN AND MEERS both had great afternoons, perhaps the most productive of their careers. Milt caught eight passes for the awesome total of 181 yards, while Bob was at the receiving end of seven of Landry's heaves, good for 98 yards. Meers, in doing so, broke the UMass career record of 70 receptions and tied the Yankee Conference mark of 19 in a season. Bob has another conference game to play.

Vermont won the opening toss and elected to receive. Morin, with a strong wind at his back, kicked deep into the UVM endzone for a touchback and the pattern of the game was set.

A DALLAS interception of a Scott Fitz pass set the Redmen up at the UVM 35 early in the first period. Landry quickly went to the air, but an overthrown pass was grabbed by the Cats' Jack Schweberger

By GLENN BRIERE

'Shear guts' said Coach Larry Briggs, describing the effort put forth by the UMass soccer team in defeating Vermont, 2-1, in overtime at Amherst Saturday. This thrilling contest handed the previously unbeaten Catamounts their first loss, and gave the Redmen a chance to tie for the Yankee Conference championship, providing they can beat New Hampshire next Saturday.

IT WAS A ROUGH defensive battle throughout, and occasionally tempers flared. The Redmen had to contend with an excellent Vermont defense, a team wishing to keep its unblemished record intact, and a noisy aggregation of visiting Vermont fans.

Regulation time ran out with the score a tense 1-1 tie. The teams then proceeded to play the first of two overtime periods, in which UMass held the edge but could not score. Then at 1:40 of the second overtime, Bill Burgess took a corner kick by Marty Smith and headed it into the right corner of the net for the deciding tally. It was the climax of a very well-played game by both teams.

The Redmen took first blood at 5:06 of the first quarter when a long kick by Smith beat the Vermont goalie. The rest of the period was evenly matched, with few serious scoring threats.

Redmen Records Set Saturday

Five Redmen set records in Saturday's game.

Bob Meers set the pace with seven receptions for a new UMass career record of 71. He also tied the YanCon season mark of 19.

Milt Morin's eight catches set a new single game record, and his 181 yards is a new Redmen yardage record for an end.

Greg Landry, in addition to moving into second place in yardage gained in a single season, set a new pass completion record of 20.

AFL-CIO Address

"No Educational Lockout" says President Lederle

"We do not want an educational lock-out," warned UMass President John W. Lederle, Sat. night in an address to the Educational Conference of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, AFL-CIO.

Speaking to more than 1,000 labor leaders at the Bradford Hotel in Boston, Pres. Lederle said, "In Massachusetts we ought to realize that what we do not have in natural and economic resources must be made up for by brains and skill. In short, we must choose whether we will levy upon ourselves taxes to pay for the education and opportunity of the boy, or for the ignorance and poverty of the man."

STRESSING the need for maintaining quality while dealing with quantity, the UMass President chided those "who apparently feel that Massachusetts can't afford to have a first-rate university. I say: Our youth are as good and as deserving as any others."

"If we mean business about providing first-class educational opportunity, there will have to be a gigantic increase in state appropriations for higher education. Massachusetts, despite its recent improvement effort, still stands 50th among the states in per capita support of public higher education, contrasted with its position of 9th in per capita income."

"UNLESS the state institutions get the money to hire outstanding teachers and to build classrooms, laboratories and libraries, and unless tuition and fees are kept low, all our good intentions will be for naught. Your state university, with legislative support, has made giant strides in the past few years. We are on the verge of moving to the front line among state universities. Whether we do depends on even greater effort. I know Labor is behind us in seeing that that effort is made."

Pointing to the increases in tuition that have reached as high as $1800 and $200 at some private institutions, Pres. Lederle emphasized the need for maintaining low rates in public institutions. "Low tuition has opened the door of educational opportunity. The low or free tuition principle is the best scholarship system in the world."

THE STATE UNIVERSITY President attributed many of the University's recent accomplishments to fiscal autonomy, or as he put it, "fiscal accountability." He said that it "has provided UMass with the necessary flexibility to compete with other universities for top-flight faculty. It assures expeditious purchasing of critically needed educational and research materials. By allowing the basic management decisions to be made on the firing line at the University campus, it has saved thousands of dollars in goods, services and manpower."

Deploing the amount of time needed to defend fiscal autonomy as an essential to good public higher education, Pres. Lederle said, "Apparently the reasons for it, so widely discussed in 1962, have been forgotten. A great reform idea, like freedom itself, must be perpetually defended."

LOOKING to the future, the UMass President told the labor leaders that in this age of iron and bamboo curtains, we are threatened by a new menace, the Sheepskin Curtain. "Not many college diplomas today are inscribed on sheepskin," he said, "but the mental attitude of many who receive a diploma is that their days of study are over. For them, on graduation, a Sheepskin Curtain drops on matters and cultural."

Pointing to the increase in leisure time and the rapidity with which knowledge becomes obsolete, he called for vigorous support of continuing education programs to tear down the Sheepskin Curtain.

"Massachusetts public education is deficient so far as adult and continuing education is concerned," he said. "We are far behind most states. The time is

Students Sign Petition Supporting Viet Nam Policies

By SANDRA FAIMAN
Staff Reporter

Several UMass students have begun a petition to be signed by anyone who is in general agreement with the Administration policy in Vietnam. The petition read, "To the President of the United States: We, the undersigned, hereby acknowledge our general support of the policies in Vietnam." So far, about 500 persons have signed the petition.

The organizing committee, including Robert Sawyer, Charles Lawrence, Robert LaTremouille, and Jim Vincunas plus five other persons, began as a spontaneous group of persons, unaffiliated with either major political party in the United States. They stated that this is a counter move against the opposing position, and in general the signers are "in opposition to the pacifist movement."

"The facilities have been set up as a service to what we (the committee) consider to be the majority of people, to express their opinion," one member said. The "general support" clause of the petition was intended to convey that "the table was not set up to hit any specific point, but rather to give as many people as possible the chance to sign the petition," a committee member stated.

The table will be in the SU lobby for the remainder of the week.

Minors At The Drake Angers Judge Ryan

By CLIFF SNICKERS
Court Reporter

In hearing a case involving two 19 year old UMass freshmen arrested Tuesday morning on charges Court judge Luke F. Ryan called for action by Amherst officials to "do something about the underage drinking" at the Drake Hotel.

Under questioning by Judge Ryan, one of the defendants stated that they had been drinking at the Drake.

IN A STATEMENT to the Collegian, the Drake's manager, Bradford Parker said "We are doing everything in - out means to keep (minors) out of the Drake."

Mr. Parker explained that there is a detective on duty at the door six nights a week, and that the Amherst Chief of Police has said he believes everything is being done that can be to prevent underage drinking. "But the University does not cooperate,"

Mr. Parker said.

He explained that it is the Drake's policy to return to the University any I.D.'s found in the possession of improper persons.

BUT IN EACH case when an I.D. has been returned, Parker receives a letter from the office of the Dean stating that the Drake has no right to take such action.

"Neither Judge Ryan nor any of the selectmen have ever been to the Drake about the problem" (of underage drinking) Mr. Parker commented. "We can see nothing more that we can do. But we are willing to consider any solutions to the problem when they are offered."

No definite University policy exists which covers cases of off-campus drinking. Whether the Men's Judiciary Board as jurisdiction in such cases and whether or not they will review the case is not known.

Collegian Staff Members Elect Four New Editors

With unusual order and procedure, the Collegian staff elected new editors Monday night to fill the recently vacated positions on the staff.

The election, conducted by former editors Dan Glosband and Scott Freedland and attended by over 50 staff members, voted in the following officers:

- Editor-in-chief, Peter Hendrickson
- Managing Editor, Ellen Levine
- News Editor, James Foudy
- Sports Editor, John Cunningham

Following a procedure set up by the Elections Committee, each candidate was allowed five minutes to speak for himself and two minutes to permit someone to speak on his behalf. The committee then allotted 15 minutes for debate over the candidacies before the secret ballots were passed out.

However, with three of the candidates running unopposed, the full procedure was used only once in the contest for Managing Editor between Ellen Levine and Joel Hartstone.

The new officers will hold their positions until the permanent elections are held in March.

Members of the Philip Hasbrouck family, Dr. Hans A. Bethe, and President Lederle attend the dedication of the Hasbrouck Laboratory.

Senate Plans Debate On Constitutional Bills

By KAREN ROSE,
Senate Reporter

Tonight's senate meeting will see at least six bills brought to the floor in the regular meeting plus others which will come up under the Constitutional Convention. The meeting will begin at 6:30.

The bills include one by Gary Bombardier moving that the Senate Executive Committee be given the power to act on behalf of the senate between the final meeting of the academic year in May and the initial meeting of the next academic year in Sept.

Another bill by Senators Bob Cripps, Jerry Benezra and Ron Kelcourse proposes that the Senate's Exec. Committee be changed. The committee would then include at least four and no more than six senators to be selected after the spring elections.

In relation to the Faculty Senate-Student Senate-Administration meeting held two weeks ago Senator Flynn has proposed that a joint Ad Hoc committee of the Faculty and Student Senates be established. This committee would be composed of three faculty senators and three student senators, to be selected as each body sees fit.

The charge of this committee would be to "investigate areas in which it is desirable to have increased faculty-student communications and recommend ways of achieving these goals."

SUG Hatch Report To Be Given Tonight

By SHARON PALERMO,
Staff Reporter

The Hatch study committee will report its findings tonight at the SUG board meeting at 7:00 p.m. in the SU Dukes room. Officers will be elected at the meeting.

The Hatch committee will report on the following areas of consideration:

- Should the Hatch be enlarged to facilitate the serving of growing number of students?
- Or is the Hatch, as a meeting ground, suited at present to the students' social needs?
- Is tradition to be sacrificed for the purpose of meal facilitation?

Any student may attend this open meeting; he can also submit his opinion to any one of the officers: Robert Johnson, chairman subcommittee; Joseph Champagne, Lauren McCarber, Professor Robert Conoyer.

The SU Program Council is preparing to host the Association of College Unions Conference of Region I Fri., Nov. 12. All member schools of the New England area have been invited.

Walk-way Dream Coming True

By Michael Girouard

The growing UMass expects to add to its 50 miles of roadways and sidewalks at the rate of nearly two miles a year, according to William Lambert, campus landscape architect.

He continued, "We intend to put in at least 10,000 feet of new walks every year." This is in addition to upkeep of the existing walks and roads.

Lambert has already launched his campaign by constructing new walks in front of Goodell Library and from the Orchard Hill Complex to the North Commons.

"THESE NEW WALKS should be completed this week," Lambert said. Also in the planning is a walk extending from the Southwest Complex to Curry Hicks Cage.

Lambert made the point that, although there were many student-worn paths which he would like to pave, he is unable to do so because of the safety hazard which would develop. A case he cited is a path which leads to the campus pond from the south end of Morrill. This was not paved for one reason: "The point where the path crosses North Hadley Road is a safety hazard. This is so because of the sight-distance problem for the pedestrian crossing, especially from east to west."

Any student can verify this statement by standing on the Morrill side of North Hadley Road and facing the pond. If the student looks to his left, he will notice that, about 50 feet down the road, there is a sharp curve to the left and it is not possible to see oncoming traffic. This is in a section of the road where the speed limit is 40 miles an hour.

MR. LAMBERT HAS a dream. He envisions the University as being interconnected with an efficient and functional system of walks and roads

"Eventually, all walks on the campus will have a minimum width of 10 feet," said Lambert. This hope has already begun to materialize with the expansion of the walks in front of Goodell Library.

Concerning landscaping, he predicted that, in a few years, the sundry grassy areas will be as lush and green as the playing field of the new Alumni Stadium.

"In an effort to beautify the campus," said Lambert, "we will be moving some of the larger trees to spots where they may better enhance the University's beauty."

Talk Set on Dorm Rules

by Pat Grasso

Opinions and solutions will be put forth by the women students at an open meeting on Women's regulations in the Senate Chambers Thurs., at 8:00.

Since the beginning of the semester, opposition to the strict nature of women's dormitory regulations has grown in strength. The greatest objections appear to fall on rules regarding sign-outs and curfews.

In preparation for this meeting, a steering committee met Tuesday evening to organize a platform on which a monitor, scribe, and representatives from Women's Affairs and Women's Judiciary will preside.

To set the tone for the meeting, two speakers who represent SWAP will summarize the motions which lead to the four proposed changes.

Once viewpoints have been expressed and explained, the discussion will be opened to the floor.

The aim of this meeting will be to grasp the trend of student opinion on all aspects of the regulations that now govern women students living on campus.

It was 11:05 p.m. and all was quiet on Orchard Hill. Quiet hours along with the books and an occasional sigh had preceded evening socializing.

It was 11:10 p.m. and all hell broke loose on Orchard Hill. Hundreds of students were screaming and streaming onto the balconies to witness the first snowfall of the year.

Trench coats and C.P.O. jackets were donned by students who ran down the corridors to add their boisterous and happy comments to those being echoed from the other dorms on the Hill.

Amherst College Investigates Burning of C.N.V.A. Material

By SANDRA FAIMAN,
Staff Reporter

President Plimpton of Amherst College declared that an inquiry will be made into the recent book and literature burning of C.N.V.A. (Committee for Nonviolent Action) material last Monday at Amherst College. The literature was displayed in Valentine Hall, the College dining hall, and also in the Beta Theta Pi Fraternity House parking lot. The burning occurred in the parking lot.

Several other incidents also occurred, including a student throwing water balloons at Mrs.

Marjorie Swan, a C.N.V.A. representative. Also, the air was let out of the representative's car. At Valentine Hall, the literature table was overturned, and books and literature were stolen from the table.

The students responsible for burning the literature later met with Mrs. Swan and the three other C.N.V.A. members. They agreed to pay $35 for the damaged literature.

Assistant Dean William Swartzbaugh said that in his opinion, the occurrence was "one of the most despicable things that any group of students has done on any campus that I've been on." He said, "at least one faculty committee is making an inquiry of the Student Council regarding their vote." The Student Council censured the burning by a 5-4 vote at its Oct. 25 meeting.

The C.N.V.A. caravan appeared at UMass on the following Wednesday, but no incidents occurred. Mrs. Swan said that that the Amherst reception to that point had been "good." She thought that talking with the guilty students had been very valuable, since several of them had been misinformed about C.N.V.A. and what it actually represented.

UMass. Women's Reception Nov. 10

An all University women reception will be held at the home of President and Mrs. John W. Lederle from 3:00 to 5:00 p.m. Wed., Nov. 10. Mrs. Lederle, Mrs. William J. Mellen, President of The University Women, and Mrs. Charles J.

Pfau, Chairman of Newcomers, will receive guests. Members of the executive board of Newcomers will pour for this occasion.

The committee in charge of this major event of the academic year consists of Mrs. Henry N. Little, chairman; Mrs. Joseph Cebula, Mrs. Robert W. Gage, Mrs. Robert S. Livingston, Mrs. John H. Mitchell and Mrs. Russell E. Smith.

Metropolitan Growth, Politics Topic Of Government Lecture

Prof. Charles R. Adrian, Chairman of the Department of Political Science at Michigan

State University, will deliver a public lecture Nov. 8 at 8 p.m. in the School of Business Administration, room 120. The topic of Prof. Adrian's address is "Metropolitan Growth and the Future of American Politics". The lecture, and Dr. Adrian's three-day visit to the UMass campus, is being sponsored by the university's government department and the Murray Seasongood Good Government Fund.

Prof. Adrian attended Cornell University as an undergraduate and earned the doctorate in political science at the University of Minnesota in 1950. In the last fifteen years, he has taught at Wayne State University and at Michigan State; written five scholarly books, and served as principal administrative assistant to the Governor of Michigan. In addition, he is currently Director of the Michigan State Institute for Community Development.

MASSACHUSETTS COLLEGIAN FORUM

From the Editor...

There is nothing sacred about the Collegian. If it is the same paper next month and two months from now we have neglected to grasp a great opportunity—the opportunity to experiment.

The Collegian is a laboratory of sorts. But there is no instructor peering over our shoulders directing each and every procedure. There is no set formula to produce the Collegian three times a week. We're publishing a newspaper to learn, and explore, not to parrot past experiences. The Collegian is no parochial exercise in memorization. Basic sound principles must be followed to maintain quality but they are only the point of departure.

Many critics of Collegiate journalism base their criticisms on the standards set by commercial newspapers. They point to the college newspaper and ask, "Why can't you do it that way?" Only occasionally will the college newspapers maintain standards set by the dailies. But it is not our goal to follow their pattern. We are not bound by commercial interests. We are not faced with the same broad spectrum of readers.

The Collegian has the freedom and the responsibility to find new directions in journalism to complement the life of the University community. We must not only reflect that life but we must also participate. If we fail to initiate action on certain issues we are ignoring our freedom and making a mockery of our responsibility. Dullness and timidity are the most loathsome beds we could lie in.

As students we attend the University to obtain the best possible education and the Collegian is one of the tools we can employ to bolster that education. The newspaper provides a chance to put the theories of the classroom into print without the specter of the cume to deter approaches that may be offensive and contrary to existing policy. It is not our goal to offend but rather to examine present policies as we find them in the paper and the University community. If they seem inadequate or unjust, we have the responsibility to inform the community and try to effect a change.

It is all too easy to damn and tear down. Students are encouraged to be critical of existing structures, but we must also recognize the successes of the University community and point to them with pride.

We welcome criticisms from all segments of the community and encourage participation in our experiment in journalism. We seek to inform others of your experiences in this exciting University community, but communications is a two way street and we need your active help to give our explorations full-bodied meaning. We provide the vehicle and hope that you will step on for the ride.

To Burn or Be Burned

The 1st Amendment to the Constitution states that "Congress shall make no law abridging . . . the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." "Grievances" include any policy of the Government with which the people disagree, both foreign and domestic.

In the 1960's the public protest has been found to be the best means for the people to bring their grievances to the attention of the Government. The protests themselves, as long as they remain non-violent and orderly, in no way violate the Constitution. Types of protests include marching, picketing, sit-ins, teach-ins, and the burning of draft cards. Therefore, Congress in passing a law which prohibits the burning of draft cards is violating the Constitution.

Not only is the law unconstitutional, but more, it trounces upon the very essence of natural rights. To think that there is a piece of paper which a man must carry with him at all times and which he cannot get rid of is an insult to human dignity. A piece of paper is not worth five years of a man's life.

In the world of Orwell's 1984, every citizen was required to carry special identification papers, which could not be destroyed. There are only 19 more years to go.

Letters To The Editor

Come Forward and Pay

To The Editor of the Collegian:

I would like very briefly to clarify the position of the Student Senate with regard to unauthorized use of inter-dorm phones by students. I would make the following points:

1. Inter-dorm phones are made available by the Student Senate for the convenience of the students. The Senate pays for the installation and monthly service charges. If the Senate finds that a particular dormitory is continually abusing the privilege of using these phones, then the phone lines may be suspended in that dormitory.

2. Inter-dorm phones are not to be used to make collect calls or toll calls outside of the Amherst area. Such calls can be traced to any location and therefore the student making the call can be traced. Students making toll calls are not getting away with anything for they will eventually be required to pay the bill involved.

3. The Student Senate recognizes that this policy was not made clear in the past and therefore will not press charges if the students who have made such calls came forward voluntarily and pay their bills for the period between Sept. 11 and Oct. 10. If you have made a toll call since Oct. 11 please come forward now even though the bills will not come through until Nov. 11.

4. Students will only be brought before the Judiciary Board if they do not come forward voluntarily or if they continue to make such calls in the future.

Once again I urge students who have made such calls to come forward voluntarily. No action will be taken against you. If you do not come forward however, then the Senate has no choice but to prefer charges.

Sen. Gary Bombardier

Letters To The Editor

In Defense

To the Editor:

I would like to make the following reply to the letters that appeared in Friday's Collegian referring to my remarks of the preceding Monday.

1. The statements in Gena Corea's article should be attributed to me and I take the responsibility of them. Miss Corea was acting only as a reporter.

2. Barry C. Kurth argues as though history were running backwards. It was the pervayers of myth, magic and religion who first considered themselves as exclusive authorities, and science had to struggle against them to establish a new basis for truth—empiricism. The old chestnut about the coincidental agreement between scientific evidence and some biblical statements is the refuge of the intellectually dishonest who embrace science only when it agrees with their preconceptions. As for Billy Graham lecturing in Psychology 101, he couldn't contribute anything anymore than Aristotle could to Astronomy 101.

3. Alice Lilly calls attention to a lack of logic and sound backing of some of my statements. She is correct but only because she took me too literally. I really implied that science has for a long time called attention to our squandered resources, the decay of our cities, overpopulation, etc., and while something certainly is being done it is my opinion that it's still too little and too late.

My remark "Education is the white man's fetish" refers to the frequent plea that all that is needed to solve some of our problems is more education. But this plea rarely specifies who is to be educated, who is going to do the educating, and what is going to be taught. Our education will always reflect the habits of mind of our educators, and all too often this leaves something to be desired.

Her promotion of the idea that religion provides a way of life, standards, hope, love and peace is itself only a pious hope. There isn't a shred of evidence that churchgoers are more hopeful, loving, charitable or peaceful, than non-churchgoers, and there is evidence that they are more prejudiced and intolerant.

Finally, she holds that love and peace defined as "the intimate and personal relationship with God" is supposed to provide the factual defeat of my point. While I may be a gasping academician, it is clear that Miss Lilly has a peculiar conception of a fact, and that she missed my editorial point completely.

4. Responding to Karen Shelley, I would be the first to admit that there is a range of tolerance for opposing views among the various denominations, and even among individuals within denominations. I will also admit that there is some fashion, dogma, and prejudice in science. However this does not negate the general thesis that religious bodies approach cosmology, personal and group salvation through a belief in and appeal to the supernatural, and in most problems areas align themselves with the existing power structure and the status quo. Dissidents are unpopular, rarely influential, and eventually silenced.

Robert S. Feldman
Professor of Psychology

Unfair to the Band

To the Editor:

We are objecting to your unfair treatment of the University of Massachusetts Marching Band and its director.

First of all, we object to the inference, made by your "poll" (consisting of less than seven-tenths of one percent of the University's student body), that the students of this school would like to see more of the Precisionettes and less of the University Marching Band. The tremendous response given by the student body at home games to half-time shows is certainly no indication of a growing displeasure with the presence of the band at half-time.

Secondly, we object to the statement by Mr. Hartstone in his editorial "In Whose Best Interest?" which stated:

There is no reason why the Precisionettes could not have filled it (part of the half-time in last Saturday's game) with their delightful performance.

In the very same edition, in the front page story "Poll Favors Drill Team; Game Space Questioned" this statement was contradicted:

The Flying Redmen, who were asked to perform at the Vermont game, if the Vermont band felt unprepared and did not participate. The Redmen suggested Thursday that the Precisionettes take their place; but this was not sufficient notice for the drill team.

Thus, originally, the full period of half-time was filled and the only reason it was left vacant was because of the late refusal of the Flying Redmen to perform.

This brings us to our third objection. Both Senator Allen, in his letter to the editor, and Mr. Hartstone, in his editorial, inferred that Mr. Jenkins, as Director of Bands, should not be given control of half-time activities. Since he has come to UMass, Mr. Jenkins has changed our half-times from a break in the game to an enjoyable addition to the spectacle of a college football game. Mr. Jenkins, a creator and director of half-time shows is the only person who has the technical skill and knowledge of the performances involved to effectively control the half-time activities.

Night view of High-Rise dormitories and Southwest Complex, to be completed in the near future.

High-Rise Dorms Approach Completion

T6, the last high-rise building in the Southwest Complex to reach its full height, was completed on Sat., October 20. Each of the five twenty-two story dormitories now has a roof and is waiting for the penthouse that is to crown it to be completed in November.

When the first dormitory reached its "topping out" point, about September 1, a siren blew as workmen lifted the last bucket of concrete on to the roof.

The men stopped work for a traditional topping out ceremony and were given the rest of the day off with pay. They deserved the reward, because the project was twelve days ahead of schedule.

Daniel O'Connell, president of the D. O'Connell's Sons Construction Company, and UMass President Lederle were on hand for the ceremony. Pres. Lederle gave a short speech honoring the men.

The National Anthem sounded as the U.S. flag flew on the roof of the first completed dormitory, and the University song was played as the flag of Massachusetts came into sight.

FINALLY, A PINE TREE was placed on a corner of the roof. This symbolizes good luck if no one has been hurt during construction, as well as standing for the strength of the building itself.

The next celebration will probably take place when the dormitories are fully completed. It may be a formal dedication.

Hilarious French Comedy Regaled Theater-Goers

A rapping off-stage, house lights off, stage lights on; thus began the production of two French comedies by Le Treteau de Paris, sponsored by the UMass French Corridor.

Feu la Mere de Madame was the second play on the program. It featured slapstick, risqué jokes, and other broad vaudeville stunts.

Lucien, (Jacques Sereys) effortlessly incited his wife to quibble when his return home at four A.M. awakened her.

The wife Yvonne, (Jacqueline Duc), tidied her hair before challenging the reveller in this boudoir comedy.

HAVING INSULTED HER husband as an artist — the only thing he painted well was her bathtub — and having complained of his late return, Yvonne took the defensive over the essential issue of the fullness of her bosom compared to "une femme toute nue." (a completely nude woman), that they had seen at the Bal as Quat-Zarts. She denied that her figure was like a coat-rack with some, but unappealing protrusions.

The second crisis concerned

Father and son exchange amenities in scene from Poil de Carotte.

the mistaken announcement of the death of Yvonne's mother. It was highlighted by the slapstick appearance of Lucien, now wearing his Sun-King wig and suspenders hanging as a tail.

Present during the scene was the bedraggled maid Annette, who appeared stupid and sleepy. She was a stock character, and her humor was not on the same level as the others.

FRANCIS ALBERT, who announced the sad tidings of the mother's death, performed well in the supporting role and won applause as a "straight man."

The other play presented was POIL DE CAROTTE, by Jules ripe for a thorough overhaul of our public continuing education responsibilities and far adequate financial support for meeting this growing challenge."

THE UNIVERSITY of Massachusetts intends to move vigorously. We have on the drawing boards a new building for the world famous architect, Marcel Breuer. It will house conferences, short courses and the headquarters for our state-wide programs in adult education. Labor has a definite part in this, for the new Labor Relations and Research Center will be housed there.

Concluding that these were needed for an enormous drive to improve public higher educational opportunity, and that this drive needed the vigorous support of Labor, Pres. Lederle said, "Massachusetts youth, your sons and daughters, are as fine young citizens as exist anywhere. Let us prove our faith by a social investment to extend low cost, high quality higher education to all who are qualified. Let us end the threat of a closing college door. Let us prevent an educational lock-out."

Intramural Report

By Dave Jarnes

As a result of Monday's playoff games for the dorm and fraternity titles the Chadbourne Maroons and Kappa Sig retained their respective crowns and will meet Wednesday at 7. The winner will meet the independent champ for the campus championship Friday at 8:15. Last year KS and the Maroons met in the championship game with KS prevailing 32-7, so the Maroons will be gunning for sweet revenge.

THE MAROONS had to come from behind twice and then repulse a furious rally by the Gorman Oaks to come out on top with a razor-thin 14-13 decision. The Oaks scored first after an intercepted pass left them at the Maroons two yard line. The Maroons came right back on the first of two Ken Ohlson to Dave Sears TD passes.

The second half saw the Oaks dominating the play with Don Ferron effectively using the short pass for a TD to Mike Manning which put the Oaks in front 13-7. However, the Maroons hit paydirt with the Ohlson to Sears combination clicking again.

In a HARD-HITTING defensive battle KS withstood a late LCA comeback to eke out a 13-7 triumph. KS's burley line pressured Jim Donahue and continually threw him for losses in the first half. KS scored the first time it got its hands on the ball with the Ed Godak to Bill Cleary combination, which was so successful against AEP, clicking for the first of two scores.

After an exchange of punts early in the second half, LCA finally gave Donahue some protection and took a 7-6 lead when Donahue hit ace receiver Jeff Larson for the TD. However KS took the ensuing kickoff and quickly made up for that TD with Bill Cleary catching his second TD pass.

In a CONSOLATION game for third place among the fraternities, AEP, led by Johnny Parnell's 3 TD passes, overcame a 12-7 halftime deficit to down TC 19-12.

The Plymouth Patriots, behind 18-13 at the half dumped the Grayson Flaming A's 37-18 to clinch third place in the dorms.

would handle the sideline markers. At 12:30 he took his record player to the dressing room and put on some marches to get the team "psyched up." He also brought some rock and roll to play if the team won. Then Charlie went out on the field to help win the game.

Charlie got to play his rock and roll that day. Sharing the victory with the players and coaches, the 5 foot 9, 150 pound manager saw his job as the "next best thing to playing."

Managing has become an integral part of Charlie's life, extending back to his home and family and high school. He says, "I'll never forget the experience of seeing UMass' stature grow in others' eyes."

"I came during one of UMass' greatest football years and was the first manager in the new stadium. I'm proud of the change. You meet the nicest people through managing."

Besides spending 25 hours a week on this extracurricular project, Charles finds time to maintain a 3.0 in his major, English, and still be a Senior Class Executive Committeeman, social chairman of Wheeler Dorm; a teacher of Christian Doctrine to high school students for the Newman Club; a tutor for freshmen football and basketball players; and baseball manager!

Last year, Charlie was voted "Manager of the Year" by the coaches and received an engraved wall plaque in recognition. His plaque now occupies a cherished space in Charlie's room, where he sometimes gets to rest.

Yan-Con Cross-Country Championship Goes to UNH

By TERRY CARPENTER

The University of New Hampshire lived up to its advanced billing and swept easily to the Yankee Conference Cross Country Championship. The Wildcats placed 5 men in the top 13, and their 6th man actually finished before any other team's 5th man.

The University of Rhode Island rose to the occasion and beat out the Redmen harriers for second place in the meet. UMass had previously beaten U.R.I. in a dual meet.

Massachusetts placed third, followed by Maine, UConn, and Vermont.

George Estabrook of U.N.H. took the lead from the start and finished with a strong kick to win the individual title by 20 seconds. Charles McGinnis of U.R.I. was second and teammate Don Cook third. Defending champ Terry Carpenter of UMass slipped to fourth place. Paul Petrie of Maine rounded out the top five.

Mike Sheeley ran his best race of the year to place 11th in the meet and second for the Redmen. Bill Thoms shook his chronic ankle trouble to place 14th in the meet and third for the home forces. It was Bill's finest race as a Redman. Greg Bowman was fourth man for UMass and 16th in the meet. Co-capt. Steve St. Clair and John Andersen placed 20th and 21st, and Greg Tsoucalas was 27th.

The Redmen travel to Springfield today to take on the Maroons. The teams have nearly identical records, and the meet should be very closely contested. A victory in this meet would boost the team's morale before the New England Championships, the highlight of the Cross Country season.

Sophomore middle guard, Bruce Gombar was elected to the Yankee Conference defensive squad this week on the basis of his performance against Vermont.

FOOTBALL PROFILE:

Varsity Manager Charles Bradshaw

By CHARLES MITCHELL, Staff Reporter

Charlie Bradshaw glanced nervously at his watch, then up and down the field at Alumni Stadium. It was 1:30 and the event due to start was the Homecoming Football game versus the University of Rhode Island.

Along the sidelines, Charlie saw that all his pre-game work as varsity football manager was done: yard markers were up; the yardage chains and their attendants were there; as well as the men to keep the game supplied with clean footballs.

Turning around, the harried manager asked his assistant, George Albrecht, about the water wagons and the other equipment, such as first aid kits, tape, helmet straps and extra shoelaces.

Snapping back around, Charlie peered through his glasses at the Rhode Island side of the field and double-checked to himself aloud: "I paid the referees their fees and bought the visitors their usual supply of gum, oranges and postgame Coke. I guess that's every . . .

"Charlie," a maintenance man shouted, "did you get someone to watch that wire that runs across the field to the scoreboard?"

"Yes," snapped the excitable manager. "I took care of that last week."

The last week had been a busy one for the active senior, just as the entire football season had been. Every day he had been at practice for at least three hours, bringing out the balls, the coaches' play diagram cards, water, towels and other equipment. After that, he would work around the supply shed and run errands or provide a target for players' and coaches' misguided anger.

After practice he would put the equipment away again, then hustle over to the training table at North Commons to check the players in and make sure they got their vitamins. After four years in high school and four years in college as manager, Charlie handles this difficult task well with hard work and efficiency.

On Thursday, Charlie had given the players their guest tickets, which he later collected, put in labelled envelopes and left at the box office for the players' guests to pick up.

On Friday, he had been at the new stadium checking the equipment with each player and making sure all was in readiness. At night he attended the players' skull session.

Saturday morning Charlie was up and running early. He ran several errands and then checked with his assistants, who

Senate Debates Proposal Requiring Class Budgets

By KAREN ROSE,
Senate Reporter

The highlight of Wednesday's Constitutional Convention was Senator Gary Bombardier's bill concerning class budgets.

This bill was originally brought to the attention of the senators and class officers last week. During the week changes were made to the bill to make it more palatable to the class officers. At Wednesday's meeting sophomore class president Robert Keough proposed two further changes to the bill.

Prior to proposing the amendments, Keough, by way of illustrating the approval of the revised bill, read a notarized statement of the vote of the Sophomore Class Executive Council concerning the original bill. According to this tally 75% of the council opposed passage of the original bill.

President Keough then stated "the class council's stand has been reversed — The bill has come a long way. As it is now (this bill) is a possible first step in reorganizing student government."

A conflict arose over one of the amendments. The change involved giving final say on the budget to the class executive council rather than the senate.

Senate Treasurer Bombardier (Gorman) pointed out that such a move would be illegal because "the trustees have charged the senate with the responsibility of taxation".

At this point Senator Bette Chambers (Van Meter South) proposed an amendment which would give final say on the

Controversy Rages on Campus

THE VIET NAM WAR

By GORDON DAVIDSON, Day Editor

PRO

Debate waxed to the point of shouts and fist-shakings in the Student Union lobby yesterday, as opposing groups of students argued the pros and cons of U. S. involvement in Viet Nam, while a non-affiliated group of UMass students continued to collect a total of 1200 signatures in support of Pres. Johnson's present policies in Viet Nam.

THE DEBATE reached its peak near mid-afternoon when about 50 students crowded around the table which has been set up in the Lobby since Wednesday. There was a sprinkling of Army-surplus jacket-clad students, who seemed to be the minority opposing the students sponsoring signing the petition.

The petition states that the undersigned gives their "general support" to the "present policies" in Viet Nam.

The group wishes to make it clear to all people what is meant by the "present policies" in Viet Nam and what it means when it "generally supports" them.

By "present policies" they mean they support the following actions:

(1) Increasing ground forces to provide protection for the South Vietnamese against organized terror by the Communists.

(2) Cutting off supplies flowing in from North Viet Nam by air attacks on the north.

(3) Attempting to unify the political factions of South Vietnam, thereby creating a more stable political situation through which the war may be more effectively carried out.

(4) Attempting to encourage economic growth in South Viet Nam, although this organization recognizes that such growth can best be promoted after the achievement of a military truce.

(5) Displaying a willingness to go anywhere at any time to seek a negotiated peace, but not under one-sided conditions such as the prior removal of U.S. troops from South Viet Nam.

(6) Warning Communist China that its national confines would provide no privileged sanctuary in the event of her active entry into the war.

(7) Attempting to obtain increased military support from our allies in order to demonstrate that the war in Viet Nam is everyone's affair.

BY "GENERAL SUPPORT" they mean that they agree to all these courses of action, but are not necessarily in total agreement on all specific details of their application such as: how far to go in bombing North Viet Nam, the possibility of another suspension of the bombing of North Viet

CON

Opposing U. S. policies, five UMass faculty members along with members of other colleges and universities signed a full page petition which appeared in the New York Times calling for a halt to the Viet Nam war. The five faculty members were Prof. Leon Baron, Richard Haven, Sidney Kaplan, Edwin Moser, and Alex P. Page, all of the English department.

THE PETITION, entitled "Stop the Bloodshed in Vietnam," stated in part that "The war in Vietnam is continuing with...diminishing hope for a just and speedy solution...The people of Vietnam...have been the unwilling and helpless victims of bombs and fire. The American people themselves are undergoing a brutalizing and degrading experience...coming to view without concern for the inhuman suffering being inflicted in the only victory to which this...military action may lead is a conquest of a decimated South Vietnam by the U. S. ...."

ON ANOTHER front, UMass students are participating in a Veteran's Day demonstration at Fort Devons in Ayer, Mass., to protest U. S. policies in Vietnam.

The march will be co-sponsored by the New England Regional chapter of the Committee for Non-Violent Action (CNVA) and the Young Independents of the University, a member chapter of Students for a Democratic Society, and will be carried out with a deep feeling of gratitude and respect for the many living and dead who are veterans of American wars.

The demonstration will take the form of a quiet vigil, plus extensive leafletting at the vigil and in the community, plus door-to-door calling for those who wish to do so.

Low-Rise Dorms Bear Famous Names

The University of Massachusetts announced today that its four newest student residences will bear four of the most distinguished literary names in the state's history — Henry David Thoreau, Herman Melville, William James and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The University Board of Trustees named the first four buildings in the giant Southwest Residence area for the four famed intellectual leaders, all of whom lived or produced their greatest works in Massachusetts and all of whom are known for the philosophic stature of their writings.

The four low-rise residences opened this fall and now house 820 students. They are part of a new residence complex that on completion will include 15 low-rise buildings and five 22-story towers and will house and feed 5,300 students.

The plan of the new residences and their names continue a concept begun last year at the University's Orchard Hill residence area.

Dr. Clarence Shute, head of the University Philosophy Department, has been named Master of the first unit of the new Southwest Residence area. The unit includes the four residences now open, plus two of the 22-story towers scheduled for completion in September, 1966. The unit will house 1,900 students.

In recognition of Dr. Shute's field of study, the four new residences were named for literary figures who were also philosophers or who were known for the philosophic content of their work.

The four completed buildings were designed in contemporary style in dark red brick and concrete by Hugh Stubbins Associates of Cambridge. They stand on a rise facing west across the Connecticut Valley floor.

Henry David Thoreau House, designated since the beginning of the school year as residence A, houses 203 women; Herman Melville House, formerly residence B, houses 220 women; William James House, formerly residence C, houses 217 men; and Ralph Waldo Emerson House, formerly residence D, houses 180 women.

Henry David Thoreau, essayist and naturalist, lived all of his life in Concord, from his birth there in 1817 to his death in 1862. His stay from 1845 to 1847 in the house he built on Walden Pond was the subject of "Walden, or Life in the Woods," a volume that defined for succeeding generations the philosophy of the simple life close to nature.

Herman Melville, although he was born in New York City in 1819 and died there in 1891, produced his greatest work in Massachusetts. Working from 1847 to 1863 at a farm near Pittsfield, he wrote Moby Dick whose deeply philosophic symbolism was all but ignored in Melville's time. Moby Dick has been hailed since as a landmark among American novels.

William James, philosopher, physician and psychologist, was the brother of novelist Henry James. Born in New York in 1842, he spent most of his life until his death in 1910 as a professor at Harvard University. His Pragmatism, Essays in Radical Empiricism, A Pluralistic Universe, and other books have established him as one of the great American philosophic minds.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, philosopher, teacher, pastor, essayist and poet, was born at Boston Brahmin in 1803 but lived most of his life in Concord, where he died in 1882. He was the inspiration and leader of the transcendentalist group that made Concord an intellectual beacon in the 1850's.

Two Students In Cycle Crash Tues.

At 4 p.m. two UMass students were involved in a motor cycle crash on Route 47, just north of the Hadley line in Sunderland.

Maurice Amaral of Somerville, Mass., was taken to the University's Infirmary with a possible shoulder separation. He was transferred to the Cooley Dickinson Hospital Wednesday morning, was given an examination, and was sent back to the UM Infirmary where he was released Thursday morning. Yesterday he was re-admitted to the Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Christopher R. Hartley, from South Weymouth, Mass., who was a passenger on Amaral's motor cycle, was taken to the University Infirmary and released.

According to a Sunderland Police chief, the cycle flipped over on a straight stretch of roadway.

Amaral is a member of the class of '67; Hartley is in the class of '68.

Students line the Student Union corridor in front of the ticket window as tickets for the Beach Boy's concert went on sale yesterday. It was reported that over 500 tickets were sold within the first 5 minutes with some students buying as many as 20 tickets at a time. Lines were expected again today as ticket sales continued.

Room Rent Rates For High-Rise Dorms Up $25

Amherst, Mass.—University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees has set room rent rates for the 1966-67 academic year for six dormitories in the new Southwest dormitory area.

Next year, students living in the four low-rise dormitories and two of the 22-story dormitories, known as project four, will pay $175 a semester for room rent. Rates for the remaining 22-story dormitories, project six, have not been set, but will probably be the same.

Four dormitories in project four opened this past September and students paid $150 a semester, as they do in other dormitories built by the University of Massachusetts Building Authority—Brett and Gorman dormitories and the four Orchard Hill residences. The policy of reducing the rate by 20 for those in overcrowded rooms continues.

According to Kenneth W. Johnson, University Treasurer, "All of our dormitories and dining commons are built by the UMass Building Authority at no cost to the taxpayer. They are, however, paid for by bond issues, and the cost of the bonds and the amount that must be amortized on each project varies. Rising construction costs and current market prices for bonds have brought about the increases.

"It should be noted," he said, "that the new rates have been established at this time so that the bonds for project four can be sold immediately. We plan to re-examine the rates of all dormitories this fall with the intention of having next year's rents reflect current operational and renovation costs."

UMass Professor To Head Yearbook Comm.

A University of Massachusetts professor has been appointed chairman of a committee to develop specifications and standards for the production of college books.

The appointment of Dr. Dario Politella, associate professor of English and journalistic studies and coordinator of student publications at UMass, was made by the National Council of College Publications Advisers.

"Our goal will be to establish specifications which will assist yearbook people in negotiating for good and services to produce their books," Politella said. He pointed out that guidelines for contracts with printers, cover manufacturers and photography studios are in preparation.

After his appointment to the committee at a national conference of NCCPA in San Francisco, Politella also pointed to the goal of establishing guides for the standard operating procedures of yearbook staffs on the Such standards, he said, might help to solve current problems in evaluating yearbook publication by rating groups.

Politella is a ten-year veteran in advising student publications at Kent State (Ohio), Syracuse and Ball State (Ind.) Universities before joining the UMass faculty this fall. His professional journalism experience has been as a newspaperman, magazine editor, television network writer, advertising agency account executive and public relations representative in New York City.

Three Southern Universities Offer Gov. Fellowships

The Southern Regional Training Program in Public Administration is currently offering senior students interested in a career in the government service an opportunity to apply for fellowships to study at the Universities of Alabama, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

Each fellowship has a total value of $3,300. The stipend is $2,500 and the remainder of the grant consists of fees and tuition at the three cooperating universities.

Beginning this June, fellows will serve a three-months' internship with a government agency in Alabama, Kentucky, or Tennessee such as the TVA, or the Marshall Space Flight Center.

During the 1966-67 academic year, they will take graduate courses in public administration at the participating universities.

Completion of the twelve months' training period entitles fellows to a certificate in public administration. They can be awarded a master's degree at one of the three universities attended upon completing a thesis and passing appropriate examinations.

For information and applications, students should write to Coleman B. Ransone, Educational Director, Southern Regional Training Program in Public Administration, Drawer I, University, Alabama. The deadline for submitting applications is Mar. 1.

The Draft Is Tightening On Students -- Especially Grads

Students, especially graduate students, are finding themselves in the Selective Service hotseat as local draft boards begin to tighten their requirements for student deferments.

The extent to which students will be called in the next few months cannot be accurately determined since local draft boards set their own standards in this regard. What is certain, however, is that some students will be called. In fact, some have already been ordered to appear for physicals—the first step in the induction process.

BEHIND IT ALL is the rising monthly draft quotas because of the build up of forces in Vietnam and the expansion of active-duty forces to three million—an increase of some 300,000. The build up in Vietnam and the expansion of the number of men on active duty were ordered by the President this summer. Since then draft calls have risen each month to levels that are the highest since the end of the Korean War. The December call will be 45,224.

Although the policy of national headquarters is to encourage the deferment of students, some local boards have found themselves unable to meet their quotas without a severe tightening of the requirements for student deferment.

THE REQUEST by the national Selective Service officials that students be deferred covers graduate students as well as undergraduates. The law officially states that a local board may defer a student whose study "is found to be necessary to the maintenance of the national health, safety, and interest."

However, at least five students working toward doctorates at Columbia University have been notified of deferment reviews. One of the students, David Whitcomb, president of the Student Council, has been told to report for a pre-induction physical.

At Columbia it appears that only doctoral candidates are being notified of pending draft calls. Although good grades have been accepted in the past as evidence that a student is progressing satisfactorily, the law prohibits selection among students to be based on scholastic averages.

OF THE STUDENTS at Columbia having trouble with their deferments, at least two are from the Bronx. One, a graduate student in political science, is taking 15 credits, or three more than the minimum suggested by the New York Selective Service office as meeting requirements for a deferment.

The student said his draft board had asked him to explain the relevance of his "studies and future plans" to the national interest, health, and safety.

After the student had told the board he had worked for Rep. Jonathan B. Bingham, a Bronx Democrat, and intended to "go into government work," he was classified I-A, or draftable.

The clerk of the board said that a registrant's course of study and grades were both considered in granting a deferment. A student of the social sciences would be reclassified I-A before a student of engineering or the natural sciences, the clerk said.

Besides those at Columbia, several other colleges reported that full-time students had received notice that their application for deferment had been denied.

AT HARVARD, at least four law students from Tulsa, Okla., and Baltimore were reported to have been denied student classification. The Harvard Crimson said that one of the students had been told that he could not even receive a I-AC classification which would allow him to finish the year.

The law permits a student satisfactorily pursuing a full-time course of study to be deferred until the end of the academic year, should he be called for induction. However, only one such deferment is permitted.

Russell S. Beecher, a Harvard instructor who often counsels students on military matters said that the reclassification of students appeared to be "scattered incidents," but there was some fear that "it might become a trend."

NEW YORK University and Fordham University report that one student at each school has reported the denial of his application for deferment.

College students request deferment in late September, usually as a part of the school's registration process. During their October meetings, local draft boards usually pass on the requests and thus the news of their actions is just becoming known.

A man has 10 days after he receives notice of his application to submit an appeal, and most universities are advising their students to appeal. An appeal board then hears the student's case and decides on a classification. If there is a split vote when the appeal board votes, a registrant still may appeal to the President. If there is no split, there is no further appeal.

Wesley First, director of university relations at Columbia, commented, "This thing sends cold shivers down my back. Education is big with us. If they're going to start drafting graduate students this is meaningful. I just don't understand it at all."

Meanwhile, students protesting U.S. policy in Vietnam have been warned by some draft boards that this could result in the loss of their deferments.

The director of the Michigan Selective Service system intends to report the names of 31 students who sat in at the Ann Arbor office to their local boards. He warned that this could very well result in the loss of their deferments.

While emphasizing that final action is up to the local boards, Michigan Director Arthur Holmes said, "Some of the local boards will no doubt be changing the status of those students involved in protests of this sort."

Pennsylvania Selective Service Director Henry M. Gross issued a similar warning to students.

"Deferment is not for the benefit of the student," Gross said, "but for the benefit of the nation. If at any time a board determines that a deferment does not benefit the nation, it can take it away."

An Inalienable Right

Many Americans have become bitter over the numerous protest marches and teach-ins which advocate ending the war in Vietnam. There is a feeling that those persons who take part in criticizing the policy of the United States are committing an injustice against their nation and the men who serve in their armed forces.

They ask that all those who oppose the war either remain silent or else reevaluate their feelings, until they realize that the only correct thing to do is support the policy regardless of their true opinion.

There is, to be sure, no easy road to peace, and those who hold the attitude of peace-at-any-price should look in their history books to see the disastrous results which occurred when this policy was followed. Furthermore, it does not seem likely that any American would willfully wish to diminish the morale of our fighting men in Vietnam.

However, many of these protesters do not aim at demoralizing the army or at appeasing the enemy. These people have simply made use of an inalienable right given to all Americans. They have expressed their opinions, freely and publicly.

Americans should never forget that this country was born in revolution, and prospered and grew not because all Americans agreed on all matters, but because men and women were willing to express views though they were unpopular or in the minority. This variety of views kept America alert and open to new ideas, and it is good ideas, above all, that will lead a nation to peace or war.

Hillel -- Home Means Religion

Judaism as a religion and as a binding force does not exist at this University. The Jewish students are likely so many iron filings all mixed into a large jar of brass filings—evenly distributed. They have been assimilated into every aspect of the University's life. The identity of the Jew is gradually losing its battle.

Then a real need exists for the Jew to be brought together again. Who is to take this responsibility for giving the Jew an identity—a meaning? The Hillel Foundation supposedly does. But does it actually act as a magnet in drawing all the iron filings from the jar of brass filings into a central organization? Is it really an organization that fulfills the needs of the Jewish student body?

For four dollars anyone can purchase a card that entitles him to certain privileges. They include a number of weekly breakfasts and suppers for discount prices and also included are lectures and courses in Jewish life. But this unfortunately is the extent of it all. Accept for the taste of bagels and lox, these things have little appeal to the typical Jewish student. What is really needed then?

The Hillel Foundation should be a home. There should be a building or at least a room set aside for the opportunity of one Jewish student to meet another. In this way, there would be a place to go and talk, eat or just pass time. In short, and this may bring raised eyebrows, it should be modeled after the Newman Center.

Having Hillel, then, as an active center of Jewish life in some physical structure would undoubtedly bind the Jewish student body. From unification an identity would emerge. Then from an identity the Jew would have a meaning. However, unless these facts are faced in a realistic manner, there may be no Jewish student body to salvage in the future.

Peace Or Violence

To the Editor:

I would like to comment briefly on Mr. Zalkind's editorial of Nov. 3 regarding public protests to Government policies, especially the burning of draft cards.

Mr. Zalkind, you mentioned that as long as public protests are non-violent and orderly, they in no way violate the Constitution. However, in quoting the passage from the Constitution warranting such action, you also said that this action could come in the form of peaceful assembly or petition. Therefore, Mr. Zalkind, marching, picketing, sit-ins, teach-ins, and other such peaceful assemblies are perfectly legal and in no way conflict with the wording of the Constitution.

But how about the burning of draft cards, Mr. Zalkind? In your language does this act fall under the category of peaceful assembly or petition? There is nothing peaceful about it, Mr. Zalkind. It is a deliberate act of destruction and is no way sanctioned under the Constitution.

Burning in the Hatch

To the Editor:

At the risk of appearing an ultra-conservative, super-patriot, (and this, it would appear, has an evil connotation in our intellectual college community), I would like to register at least a small amount of disgust concerning the "Federal Barbecue" which took place in the Hatch Wednesday morning.

One of our "ethnic malignancies" set fire to either a valid or expired draft and classification card. This minority plague of ethnic uniformed, "Lunch-buckets" has long been a focal point of Hatch life. This war surplus clad horde seems to have achieved the dubious status of a permanent fixture—a pity they are not as functional as the porcelain ones they so closely resemble.

John Danis '66

To the Editor:

Back of the Hatch bearded wonders: Is the Hatch the place to burn your draft card? Are you willing to accept the recrimination of this act or do you want to hide behind your beards? Wouldn't a match in the close proximity of your face do a lot more to the betterment of society?

Witnessing the "ceremonial rite" I couldn't help but wonder what good hiding in the Hatch burning an expired draft card could accomplish. Can you now say, "Tell your Ma, tell your Pa, I'm a rebel, oo-ah, oo-ah"? Is running around the Hatch with a palm full of ashes the "in" status symbol? Humphrey Bogart is proud of you guys... or girls... or whatever, it being so difficult to discern these days.

Tom Ganby '67

To the Editor:

Upon reading Mr. Joseph Zalkind's "To Burn or Be Burned" editorial in the November 3rd issue of the Collegian, we failed to find his logic reasonable on the subject of burning draft cards. Mr. Zalkind said, "Not only is the law unconstitutional, but more, it trounces the very essence of natural rights. To think that there is a piece of paper which a man must carry with him at all times and which he cannot get rid of is an insult to human dignity."

First of all the law has not been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the United States and we would like to know where Mr. Zalkind gets his authority in declaring it such?

Secondly, we wish to know if Mr. Zalkind feels it is an insult to his dignity to carry his driver's license, social security card, student I.D. card, and other pieces of paper, all of which serve to identify him in our crowded and complex society.

Thirdly, we would like to point out to the Editorial Chairman that the Constitution gives the federal government the right, "To declare War", "To raise and support Armies", "To make Rules for the Government and Regulation of land and naval Forces" and "To provide for organizing armies and disciplining, the Militia, . . . ." How is the government to keep track of all men available for the above military services, if not by the draft card method?

We are of the opinion that the issuance of a draft card and the law requiring man to have it in his possession at all times is justified by the federal Constitution.

Finally, we should like to inform Mr. Zalkind that the word freedom has and must have certain restrictions on it for the benefit of the common good. It is obvious that the burning of draft cards and attempts to evade the protection of our country and its beliefs are not for the benefit of the common good.

We would also like to know if Mr. Zalkind has a IIS student deferment from the draft system which he so loudly decries?

YI To Sponsor Drive With Relig. Groups

The Young Independents will sponsor a blood drive on Wed., Nov. 17 in conjunction with the Campus Religious Council drive.

At a meeting on Wed. night the group voted to donate blood to the CRC drive and have it sent to the Red Cross in South Vietnam.

Since the group does not approve of American involvement in the war, they are donating the blood as a humanitarian measure and not as an indication of approval of policy.

The group will ask the Red Cross to make sure that the blood will be supplied to all those fighting and not exclusively to Americans.

The second program to be sponsored by YI will be an appeal to the church groups on campus and in the Amherst area to help in donating clothing, money and canned goods to the members of the Mississippi Freedom Labor Union.

This union has almost a thousand members on strike in five cities in Mississippi.

The strikers are demanding $1.25 minimum wage per hour, an 8 hour day with time and a half overtime, sick pay, health and accident insurance and equal employment practices in hiring, wages and working conditions.

Work in the cotton fields during the summer and fall is the chief source of income for Negroes in these sections of Mississippi. The strikers, therefore, are in desperate need of assistance and YI has agreed to head a relief program from this area.

They will be contacting local church groups in an effort to organize the drive for the week before Thanksgiving. A collection post will also be set up in the Student Union for those who find it more convenient to donate here.

U. of Mass Professor Gets Award

A UMass professor of mechanical engineering has received the Western Electric Company's Award for Excellence in Instruction of Engineering Students.

Professor John H. Dittfach received the award at the annual meeting of the New England Section of the American Society for Engineering Education held recently at Norwich University.

The award is the second honor this year for the veteran professor. Earlier, he was named the University of Massachusetts Distinguished Teacher of the Year.

The Western Electric Award cites Prof. Dittfach's excellence in the classroom, his interest in students, and his contribution to the engineering profession.

PROF. DITTFACH has been a student adviser; adviser to Tau Beta Pi, an engineering honor society; and regional chairman of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

A Minnesota native and World War II Army Corps of Engineers lieutenant, Prof. Dittfach was graduated from the University of Minnesota in 1947 with a bachelor of arts degree in mechanical engineering.

Water Shortage To Be Discussed

Recent New England water shortages and the urgent need to increase water supplies for public consumption will be the subjects of a municipal watershed management symposium next week at the University of Massachusetts.

The symposium will feature instruction by municipal officials and other authorities on watershed management, and will be held in the Student Union Nov. 9 and 10.

The meeting is jointly sponsored by the UMass Cooperative Extension Service, department of forestry and wildlife management, College of Agriculture, and Water Resources Research Center, in cooperation with the Massachusetts Department of Natural Resources and the New England Water Works Association.

The discussion, classroom and field trip instruction are designed to point out to municipal watershed administrators ways in which forestry may enhance the quality and quantity of water yields, and the role of forestry in a total land management program.

Commuter Assoc. To Convene

The Non-Resident Student Association of UMass will be hosting the Fall Convention of the Intercollegiate Commuter's Association this Saturday.

Some fifteen guest schools from the New England area will be sending representatives to register tonight. Guest schools will include M.I.T., Brown Univ., Pembroke College and U.R.I.

The Intercollegiate Association was organized to deal with the various problems that commuters face on all campuses. As a UMass commuter put it, "The exchange of ideas will do a great deal toward helping promote a better understanding of our problems."

The business meetings for members will be held tonight and tomorrow morning.

The convention will close with a smorgasbord at the Hatfield Barn and a social get-together later in the evening.

professional foresters with responsibilities in watershed management are encouraged to attend the two-day session, which will include one and a half days in the classroom and a half-day field trip.

Professor Volbach would very much like to meet with all students interested in playing a part in this production. He will be in his office (378 Bartlett Hall) for this purpose at the following times: 2:15 - 3:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday, Friday, and 10:00 - 11:30 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday.

Tryouts for The Merchant of Venice will be in early December.

UM Receives Grants

The University of Massachusetts has received a $370,000 matching-fund grant from the National Science Foundation to purchase equipment for its Research Computer Center. It was announced today by Dr. Edward C. Moore, dean of the Graduate School and coordinator of research.

The University bought the main frame of its Control Data Corporation 3600 computer last December with its own funds. Input and output units, an integral part of the CDC 3600 system, were acquired at the same time on a lease basis.

The NSF grant, matched by an equal amount in University funds, now permits purchase of these leased units, according to Dean Moore.

The CDC 3600 system is a high speed computer of the type used by several large universities in this country. It is one of the world's fastest and can run some simple operations at a speed of a half-million per second.

How do the Chinese quench a dragon's thirst?

Soo Dhu, the ceremonial New Year's dragon, has every reason to be thirsty. He's been dancing up and down Mott and Pell and Doyer Streets and all through Chinatown, bringing in good fortune and prosperity, scaring away evil, and collecting red envelopes of good-luck money for charity.

Not only is Soo Dhu thirsty—he's double-thirsty. Sam Lee is his front half, and Jimmy Sun is bringing up the rear. They've been perfectly coordinated all the way, and when Nancy Fong asks them if they'd like a Rheingold, they answer as one dragon, "Yes!"

Which isn't at all surprising. Any smart dragon knows there must be some reason why more people in New York City buy more Rheingold Extra Dry than any other beer.

What's the reason?

We don't know. But we must be doing something right. Bottoms up, Soo Dhu! Rheingold

Letters To The Editor

Pacifists, Warmongers and Invaders

To the Editor:

In reply to Mr. Donald Rilla's letter on Fri., Oct. 29, I would like to correct several of his assertions, if possible. Primarily those about pacifists.

Mr. Rilla, if one refuses to support a criminal war, even if it is that of the U.S., does that constitute pacifism? Pacifism is, according to me, a refusal to pick up arms for any cause; refusing to engage in physical combat with any person or persons. If we did not consider the U.S. position in Vietnam criminal, some of us would undoubtedly be supporters of the war policy. But you seem to conceive all those who do protest what they consider criminal to be pacifists, and indeed those who do protest are convinced of the criminal action of the U.S. in Vietnam. Pacifism is sometimes considered a "humanitarian" position, yet I feel it can be an absurd and cowardly position when one refuses to actively support our American Revolution, or the Cuban Revolution for example, when one knows what is "right".

What I am saying then is that one obviously fights for what one believes in, and likewise protests that fighting which he believes is wrong, or criminal, as in this case. I do not deny that these are pacifists protesting the war. Likewise, I do deny the existence of "warmongers" supporting American policy. Yet this does not give one any right to correctly believe that all those protesting the war are certainly not pacifists.

I would like to consider one more point in Mr. Rilla's letter. He has stated that the Communists invaded Vietnam first. Putting aside the U.S. for the moment, I feel logical to say that no one "invaded" Vietnam. First of all the only foreign troops in Vietnam are American (or Australian, etc.). The "invading Communists" are Vietnamese who do not consider themselves separated from South Vietnam by some parallel drawn up in Geneva in 1954. Vietnam is one country to the Vietnamese people, and therefore the "invasion" is to be considered, by me at least, a revolution, against a tyrannical government which has in one form or another, supported by France or the U.S., suppressed the freedom of the Vietnamese people and a consequential popular government, for 20 years. Do I need cite Eisenhower's statement in Mandate for Change to the effect that if allowed to vote, 80% of the population would have chosen Communism and Ho Chi Minh? Again I state that we are illegally in Vietnam, unless you consider Diem's government a legitimate one. And Mr. Rilla, you yourself made note of the "withholding" of the facts in many situations by the press. Certainly the papers will not say we are the aggressors, yet we are illegally in Vietnam and attacking a North Vietnam recognized by us as separate from South Vietnam. Perhaps the subtlety in revealing our aggressions have finally been discarded as of Sept. 15 when Sen. Fulbright of Arkansas gave a slashing expose of the Johnson Administration's lying reactionary role in the Dominican crisis (unless you claim that Fulbright, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, does not know the facts). Here is a relevant quote from Fulbright's Senate speech on September 15.

"...the reaction of the U. S. at the time of acute crisis was to intervene forcibly and illegally against a revolution which... might have produced a strong popular government without foreign intervention."

And remember that this speech is particularly significant in that it was delivered not by a maverick but by one of the most powerful figures in the Senate. I realize this is not in direct reference to Vietnam, but nevertheless our policies are undeniably exposed here.

Therefore I say again that it is mandatory for

Petition

Don't Endorse War

To the Editor:

About the Vietnam petition which appears in the Student Union Building, I feel that I should be able to sign it; since I, too, agree "in general" with Administration policies in Vietnam. The Administration policy generally states that, 1. This is an undeclared war in Vietnam. 2. The United States must increase technological and economic assistance to Vietnam. 3. Negotiations must be sought immediately. 4. Democratic elections must be permitted in Vietnam.

Yet, I cannot sign this petition because I believe that Communists (whomever they may be) are not going to annihilate us. I believe that self-determination is more important than what I view to be a type of "colonial conquest" under the assumed democratic liberation by the United States. Most important, I believe that war is not the means of dealing with one's enemies. War is incompatible with democracy and for the United States to undertake this war of expedience is inhumane, an atrocity, and a gross misuse of power and influence by the wealthiest nation of the world.

Any intelligent member of this college community can see that as a leader of the free world, the United States is advocating murder, napalm bombing, and atrocious warfare. A nation of such magnitude as the U.S. should be able to deal more maturely and intelligently with international problems than it has done in the Vietnam situation. People must understand that man cannot co-exist with warfare. When Americans see that democracy can and must co-exist with Communism; just as it has co-existed with and even supported dictatorial governments, then perhaps the U. S. will cease to be a monolithic hypocrisy.

To the people who have chosen to sign the petition, you are advocating war and defending atrocities of war by supporting the American foreign policy in Vietnam. It is very unfortunate that "majority rule" can mean democratic legalizing of warfare. This results when people fail to thoroughly contemplate their signature on a petition.

Sandra Faiman

The U. S. to withdraw from Vietnam. And to say that the Chinese Communists would take over is not true, for the Ho Chi Minh government was in existence some four years before the victory of the Chinese Revolution and had been fighting the French nearly as long.

— No Place At All — Outing Club Squeezed Out?

To the Editor:

So Howard Scott is not perfect. However, he has one thing going for him that a majority of the students do not—real ambition. His goal is material success, and he believes that hard study and rigorous self-discipline are the means to achieve this end.

While the majority of students think it a little peculiar to devote all their working time to academic matters and to take six or seven courses a semester; most merely want to conform to society, get their diplomas, make a respectable living, and in general, be an "average Joe."

Even though I myself personally do not subscribe to material success as the criterion for judging a person, I do believe that everyone should have some worthwhile goal in life and pursue it. It is not to the credit of an institution such as this that only 10-15% make the Dean's List. Since when does conformity breed creativity? It seems to me that conformity ultimately leads to apathy and dull individuals.

How many students have really pursued their goals (if they have any)? Howard Scott pursued his, and has made about $4,000 each of the last four summers by running his own ice cream business. It's this same desire to excel that has lead Mr. Scott to take a greater than average course load, and still achieve a high 3, average.

While one might not agree with the apparent one-sidedness of his approach, he can't say that is has not worked well for Scott in terms of his goals. Yes, perhaps Mr. Scott misses something by not joining a fraternity, not smoking, swearing, drinking, dating, etc., but at least he has meaningful goals, and is willing to pursue them.

To the Editor:

No intelligent person can fail to acknowledge that extra-curricular activities are an essential part of the educational experience to be obtained at a college or university. It would, in fact, be a poor institution indeed that did not offer a substantial variety of non-academic activities in addition to its academic curriculum.

Many student groups and clubs on this campus, however, have been considerably inconvenienced by the lack of adequate storage space for equipment and supplies.

The Outing Club has been an integral part of campus life since 1927 yet recently was forced to move its entire inventory of canoes, rope, snowshoes and other equipment to an inadequate and totally inconvenient location off campus. Even at that we were fortunate in obtaining any place at all, the only other alternative being to rent suitable storage place somewhere in Amherst.

It does not seem unreasonable to me to expect that storage space, suitable to the needs of various student activities, should be provided by the University, otherwise it would seem that the penalty for expanding and thereby becoming a more valuable asset to the students and to the University as a whole is to be forced to move off campus into grossly inadequate quarters.

I honestly feel that the value of student clubs and activities to the University, no less than to the student, is far greater than is generally believed. If the University of Massachusetts cannot house all of its student groups under suitable conditions it will find in the near future, I think, that it has shortchanged itself, irreparably.

Crim. Prof Discusses Drinking and Crime

It appears that people are committing more crimes at a younger age, that teenagers are drinking more now, and that more atrocious crimes are being committed.

However, Dr. Curt Tausky, professor of criminology at UMass, does not agree with any of these notions.

College of Agriculture Gets Award

The University of Massachusetts College of Agriculture has been awarded a $400 scholarship by the National Food Brokers Association Foundation, it was announced today by Dr. Arless A. Spielman, dean of the college.

The grant will go to a student majoring in food distribution in the department of agricultural and food economics. Selection will be made in March on recommendation of Prof. Fred P. Jeffrey, associate dean of the college, and Prof. Theodore W. Leed of the agriculture and food economics department.

Dr. Tausky in a Collegian interview said he doubts that more crimes are being committed by younger people. He believes the crime rate remains about the same, although it looks as if it has increased because there is a greater number of young people. Further, he said, the appearance of a higher rate could be due to a change in the reporting and tabulating of delinquent crimes.

He said he is not sure that teenagers are drinking more now; for example in cities today, as at other times, the teen drinking rate remains high. He noted many teenagers are living in cities and this could cause the belief that the drinking rate

UM Debating Team Has Winning Record

By NEIL WHITMAN
Staff Reporter

UMass debaters survived an 8-hour bus ride to Philadelphia, Pa., to score a winning record on their first tournament of the year.

This past weekend, the UM Forensic Society participated in the La Salle Invitational Tournament.

"George" Feiker and Alan Davis of the negative, Neal Whitman and Mike Farrell of the affirmative, and Dr. Scheff, coach and judge, represented the University.

UMass debaters finished with a 6-4 record. Noteworthy was the affirmative team of Whitman and Farrell, who rated a third best affirmative team with a 4-1 record in a field of 35 teams.

St. Joseph's College from Philadelphia won the tournament with a 9-1 record. In second place, with an identical 9-1 record, but less speaker points, was Temple University. Following in third place was Lehigh University, with a 7-3 record.

This was the second year that the LaSalle Invitational Tournament has run, although the first year that UM has participated. The team plans to return next year.

This year's collegiate topic is, "Resolved: that law enforcement agencies should be given greater freedom in the investigation and prosecution of crime." The tournament proved that this topic was flexible and controversial enough to provide a basis for exciting debate.

CRIM. PROF...

Dr. Tausky believes that not liquor leads to many drinking problems. Teenagers may get into trouble because of drinking but, he believes this may be due at times to their own conception of how a drunk is supposed to act; they act like they think a drunk should act.

The rate of atrocious crimes is not rising although some may believe it is because a few newspapers play up the more sordid crimes, according to Dr. Tausky.

To show this type of crime hasn't increased he cited the old gangs of London which once beat up people for the sheer fun of it.

University's First Grad. Senate Meets In Unique Experiment

by Paula McCarthy

A unique experiment in Student Government at UMass began Wednesday with the introductory meeting of the University's Graduate Senate.

One of the few in the country, the purpose of the Graduate Senate as stated by Grad Senator Mona Morningstar is "... to define the graduate student body as a separate entity."

"Our goal is to act as a liaison between faculty and students," she explained.

As moderator of the first session, Joe Champagne outlined the agenda for the first official meeting, Nov. 15.

The election of officers and the formation of various committees will be the chief business.

Motions were made to form committees to cope with the problems of housing and the status of teaching assistants which appear to be serious problems confronting the U. Mass grad student. It was decided that a Student Services Committee be formed to deal with these and other related problems.

There was a general consensus among the senators concerning the rather obscure status of the grad student. They seem to be "caught between two worlds and getting the worst of both," one of the senators pointed out.

There are approximately 60 senators chosen from the various departments on campus, but the powers of the new Senate are purely advisory; it is not a legislative body.

According to Joe Champagne, the body is in effect "the organized voice of the graduate students." In this capacity they hope to influence the solution of the many problems of their group.

The constitution has not yet been fully approved, it will probably be another month before the final approval is given by the Board of Trustees. At present the Senate has no funds, which will soon be necessary to cover the expenses of postage, paper, speakers and the like.

Since the meeting was unofficial, no move for adjournment was made. Mr. Champagne suggested that everyone stay after the meeting for coffee. This was so that the senators could get acquainted and talk over ideas to be brought up at the next meeting.

"Critique" Still Puzzles Some People

Two years ago a new magazine appeared on Campus called Critique. Second semester will see the third annual edition of this publication, but some students and faculty still ask, "What is Critique?"

Critique is a magazine composed of a listing of courses offered at the University. The magazine exists for two reasons: First, to inform the individual student what to expect from his classes and from his professors and to guide him in course selection. And secondly, to assist professors and their department in evaluating the course content and the effectiveness of their delivery.

Many of you remember last semester's questionnaires—they are now being processed through the IBM computers at the Research Computer Center. Factual data obtained from this processing will be incorporated into summaries by the staff in the next two weeks.

Staff positions are still open, according to editor Gall Greenough.

SUG Board Elected Officers Tues. Night

The Student Union Board of Governors met in the Dukes Room last night to elect officers, report on the Association of College Unions Conference, and discuss bulletin board space and Hatch problems.

The overcrowded, messy bulletin boards in the Union are a large problem. Ten organizations on campus already have permanent board space, but other organizations are requesting space. A re-evaluation is needed and imaginative ideas are welcome.

The overcrowding of the Hatch presents a most pressing problem. A look at the statistics will bring the situation into focus:

- in 1957 the customer count (through the registers) was 825,844
- in 1964, over a million
- 1965, a prediction of two million.

Last Saturday's total alone was 7,978! On any one day the count averages 8-10 thousand. But there are only 516 seats.

At present there are 12,000 students—in 1969 there will be 20,000.

The possible expansion plans presented by Mr. Conoyer, SUG board member include:

- pushing back of the East side window. This would increase the Hatch by ¼.
- the breaking down of the muraled wall with a snack bar of some sort put in.
- investigations to have the bowling alley suspend its operations since the contract for the bowling machines will be up next year.

The intended increase hoped for is 50%. Suggestions for speedier service will be considered. Arrangements of some sort are to be made for the Hatch before the 1969 opening of the new SU building.

To facilitate the action so sorely needed it was decided that the vote on coming proposals would remain with the SUG board members. At the next meeting written proposals will be submitted.

Nominations for election were Marianne Brady for chairman and Joseph Champagne for vice-chairman, with a postponement of elections of the other two officers until the next meeting. These elections only constitute an interim of officership; elections will be held again in February.

The ACU Conference will be held on this campus November 12, 13, 14, to discuss current problems and ideas which any member might have. UMass is a member of Region I; there are five such regions throughout the world.

The three day stay of students and staff will end Saturday night with entertainment by Josh White Jr. and the Carl Boxer Trio.

Final business of the meeting was the consideration of Amherst High's request to use the Ballroom for its Senior Prom May 28, 1966. Nothing has been scheduled for that date since it is during finals and permission was granted.

The next SUG board meeting is Thursday, November 18 at 7:00 p.m.

1969 Exec. Council Applications Available

The newly elected freshman class officers, President Gary Le Beau, Vice-President Doug Green, Secretary Margie Frey, and Treasurer Judy Leach, held their first executive meeting Tuesday night.

Because of the Freshman Class Christmas Sing, it was decided that the executive council should be selected as soon as possible.

Applications will be available Friday, November 5, in the R.S.O. office of the Student Union. These applications must be returned to Miss McReavey by the following Friday, November 12, in the R.S.O. office.

This past Saturday the University of Massachusetts' Precisionettes, Grenadiers, and Army ROTC Color Guard marched in the Twenty-First Annual Halloween Parade at Pittsfield.

Each year the Precisionettes and the Grenadiers have delighted the people of Pittsfield with their precision movements and trick drill along the parade route. Each team executed its intricate and original movements to the commands of the commanders, Miss Susan Waneyk and Cadet Major John Hardy. Preceding the two teams was the Army ROTC Brigade Color Guard under the command of Cadet Sgt. Philip O'Brien.

In addition to the normal festivities surrounding the parade the members of the group attended a catered dinner at the Allen Hotel sponsored by the General Electric Company.

UMass Grad. Receives $2,000 Harvard Fellowship

The Department of City and Regional Planning at the Harvard Graduate School of Design has awarded a $2,000 fellowship of the Richard King Mellon Charitable Trusts to John Stewart Reed, a graduate of UMass.

Mr. Reed, who received his A.B. and A.M. from UMass, is currently a Teaching Assistant in the introductory course in city and regional planning and a consultant to various professional organizations.

Mr. Reed's fellowship will aid him in the completion of his doctoral dissertation in city and regional planning. The department chairman, Assoc. Prof. William W. Nash Jr., said the Mellon fellowship goes to a doctoral candidate of high academic standing whose research will improve practices within the profession. Professor Nash said that the fellowship would be granted from time to time during the next four years.

Prize Russian Film To Lead Off New Series

The Student Union Movie Committee will present its first in a series of foreign films Sun., Nov. 7, at 7:00 p.m. in the S.U. Ballroom. This week, a Russian film with English subtitles, Ballad of a Soldier, will be shown.

Ballad of a Soldier stars Vladimir Ivashov and Shana Prokhorenko. A winner of awards at both the San Francisco and Cannes Film Festivals, Ballad of a Soldier has been termed by critics as the best Russian movie made since World War II and one of the finest European films of recent years.

The New York Times has said that Director Grigori Chukhrai has made his picture flow in such a swift, poetic way that the tragedy of it is concealed by a gentle lyric quality.

He has done lovely things, the Times said, including the use of his camera to pace the tempo of his story with the train, or to catch the poetry of a girl's hair blowing wildly in the wind. It is with such lyric touches that the deathless beauty in the tragedy is traced.

Other foreign films coming in the future are Confessions of Felix Krull, a German movie starring Horst Buchholz, and La Dolce Vita.

This famous Italian film is directed by Federico Fellini, and stars Marcello Mastroianni and Anita Ekberg. After the showing of La Dolce Vita, there will be a coffee hour and discussion in the Colonial Lounge. Father Charles Thoman, S. J. will lead the discussion.

Students To Select Dormitory Names

Professor Curry Hicks, who came to Mass. Agricultural College in 1911, did much to further the athletic program as well as establishing plans for Alumni Field.

Editor's Note:

Due to a time conflict, we were not aware of the specific names being assigned to the now completed buildings in the Southwest Dormitory Complex. Thus far, only the completed units have received names. There are still quite a number of units in the complex which need names — and people to name them.

by Angela Caruso

The majority of the buildings on the university campus are concrete tributes to the men who have helped UMass become what it is today. Traditionally, former university presidents were so honored, but today, because of the enormous progress in development, anyone connected with literary and scholarly advances is considered for the tribute.

Upon completion of the Orchard Hill Complex last fall, four such figures connected with the immediate Amherst area (i.e., Emily Dickinson, Eugene Field) were chosen; but once again, because of the giant gains in campus growth, The Board of Trustees is open to the consideration of anyone who has contributed to the advancement of higher education.

Although there never has been any strict rule governing these choices, the completion of the Southwest Complex (consisting of 27 separate units) will afford any student interested an opportunity to recommend any person he deems qualified and deserving of such a tribute.

Once a recommendation has been turned in, a biography of that person is prepared and passed on to the Committee of Buildings at UMass which can recommend it, in turn, to the Board of Trustees for final consideration.

Anyone who has aided the growth of education and scholastic achievements deserves to be honored for his efforts and should be. For instance, Mr. Mahar, a former state senator, and advocate of higher learning, and Mr. Gorman, a legislative supporter of UMass, have been singled out for recognition on our campus, as well as several outstanding individuals in education who have already been chosen for the completed buildings in the Southwest Complex.

The list is endless: Dr. Frank Boyden, former chairman of the Board of Trustees at UMass; William Bowker, an illustrious member of the first graduating class; Miss Crabtree, a financial contributor to our campus, and many others. There are many more still enriching education who should and will be honored. Student recommendations will be considered, and any students interested should contact Prof. Clarence Shute.

UM Co-ed Thumbers Dress For The Road

Thumbs have become the latest fashion for two out of three travelling UMass coeds.

Just as Oleg Cassini would never allow his models to appear "ungloved" in an empire chignon, neither do hitch-hiking UM coeds hit the road improperly dressed.

THE REASON is not only one of vanity. The practical aspect is to create an image which the fast - approaching driver can catch in the fleeting moment he has to decide about stopping.

"To give the impression he's going to help a sweet college maiden in distress," says Rita Rigby '66, "I dress accordingly. No levis and sweatshirts for me!"

Collegians
May Be Picked Up
At The
SU Lobby Counter

Image - full dress which has become standard for local coeds includes Weejuns and London Fogs. Clinching the image of feminine youth in distress may be a sign such as "Home to Mama".

"I've used this sign with great success," Jennifer Jones '67 told the Collegian. "But I always add 'Boston', just to make sure of limiting the trip offers to New York City and beyond."

To make the image complete that the thumber is really the well-scrubbed, fun-loving, naive and trusting traveller that she is, UM coeds have made it a rule to travel at least in pairs.

"Not only does this show that we girls are chaperoned," according to Wilma Winslow '67, "but it also comforts the driver that we can be trusted." There is always safety in numbers.

USING THESE fashion rules has resulted in successful attention along the highways and byways of the Amherst area, the coeds report.

As one cooperative male driver reports, "Coed hitchers are thumbs-up with me."

ROTC Ball -- "Autumn Twilight"

"Autumn Twilight", the thirty-eighth annual Army and Air Force ROTC Military Ball, will be held tomorrow evening in the ballroom of the Student Union.

Music for the evening will be furnished by the famous NORAD Commander's Orchestra from Colorado Springs. The Ball will begin at 8:30 p.m. with a Receiving Line in the Colonial Lounge.

The program for the intermission includes the crowning of the Military Ball Queen by President Lederle and presentations to her court by Colonel Bohnak and Lt. Colonel Simmons. Music during the intermission will be provided by a well known jazz combo, the Nova Quartet.

THE MILITARY BALL is a traditional function on the University of Massachusetts campus, going back to 1928. It provides an opportunity for the combined corps to join in a unique social activity and also serves as an initiation into the social side of military life.

The Ball is planned and run by a combined staff of cadets from both corps, assisted by several groups such as the Angel Flight, the Precisionettes, and several other organizations.

Guests at the Ball will include Dr. and Mrs. Frank Boyden, President and Mrs. John Lederle, Provost and Mrs. Oswald Tippe, Dean and Mrs. William Field, Dean and Mrs. Robert Hopkins, Dean and Mrs. William Tunis. Also attending will be Colonel and Mrs. George Young, Colonel and Mrs. John Stefanik, Colonel and Mrs. Thomas Carhart, and Lt. Colonel and Mrs. Thomas Carhart, and Lt. Colonel and Mrs. Thomas Mitchell, Sr.

The honorary Colonel for 1965, Miss Diane Dube, will welcome the new queen.

Slow Curve

Judges had picked the winner at a Nottingham (England) University beauty contest and were just about to settle on a buxom blonde entered as "Nancy Harwood" when "Nancy" turned and fled. He was found to be Nigel Harwood, male, who had entered on a dare.

"Could this be HER?"

Who is Rose La Bella? This question has been appearing on walls and windows throughout the University. Because this projected identity of Rose may not be correct, the Collegian welcomes any information leading to the true identity of the mysterious Miss LaBella.

Uniforms; Music--That's the Army Band!

The U.S. Army Band will present a concert in the Curry Hicks Cage on Wednesday night, Nov. 17, at 8:15. Sponsored by the UMass Army ROTC Detachment, the concert will be open to the public without charge.

Organized in 1922 by Gen. John (Black Jack) Pershing, the Army Band boasts 110 of the finest musicians and is conducted by Lt. Col. Samuel Laboda.

The unit has served as the official band for most of the diplomatic functions in Washington, D.C. Having led every inaugural parade since President Coolidge, the band has played for the funeral processions of Presidents Harding, Taft, Roosevelt and Kennedy.

Each year the band performs throughout the United States, including Carnegie Hall, the Ed Sullivan Show and for many local civic functions.

Renowned the world over for its sparkling renditions of marches and German folk music, the band's repertoire ranges from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, to Chuck Berry's "Roll Over Beethoven"!

Of special interest is the "Herold Trumpets" section which contributes a certain zest to the concert. Whatever the individual's tastes in music, the band's well-rounded program of music at UMass promises to offer an enjoyable evening of entertainment.

Nam, how long to suspend it, the use of gas, etc.

The general support clause was not added to make the statement ambiguous, hence able to be signed by all, but merely to give people a chance to express their approval and demonstrate a general support for the government's policies in Viet Nam. Editor's note: The following is a section of a letter received by the sister of Lt. William Y. Doran, a 1962 graduate of the University of New Hampshire, who is now serving as a helicopter pilot with the U.S. Army in Vietnam, and expresses feeling similar to the spirit of the UMass petition.

I am very, very disappointed. All I have read about lately is the demonstrating against the job we are trying to do for the good of mankind in general and the U.S.A. in particular. At night when I am lying in my bunk listening to the radio, I tune to radio Peiping and listen to "Hanoi Hanna" make hay over these demonstrations.

These people have to be acting out of ignorance for if they realized the way in which they are disgracing their country and everything it stands for and has stood for they could not so act. If they do realize and continue they are nothing more than seditionists and should be dealt with accordingly.

I can see only one reason for why they are acting in such a way—fear. They are scared of war, they don't want to see it or be asked to fight it. I don't blame them—not at all. I don't enjoy this job at all and I doubt if there are many who do.

I doubt if many of the American soldiers who fought and died in World War I, World War II, Korea and Vietnam, not to mention the Revolutionary, 1812, Civil, etc. enjoyed war either. The point is when their country called on them, needed them, they were there and they were scared too, but they did the job and if they hadn't, if they were made of the same stuff as these demonstrators of 1965 are, I have serious doubts that our country would be where it is today—the number one spot in every department.

These demonstrators are rubber-spined cowards—nothing more—gutless. I'd like nothing better than to see their young butts rounded up and brought over here where they could get their eyes opened rather than be allowed to parade around in the safety of their academic shells, trying to punch holes in a Constitution that men are dying to keep strong and safe. Who are these people? They are not Americans—they aren't even good Communists.

ON THE NATIONAL scene, Dr. Corliss Lamont, educator and Humanist philosopher, today asked his old friend and college classmate, Henry Cabot Lodge, to resign as U.S. Ambassador to South Vietnam as a gesture of protest against Americans in that country.

Despite their strongly differing political views, the friendship of the two men has persisted through more than four decades. Both were members of the Class of 1924 at Harvard College, where as undergraduates they helped to found the debating union.

budget to the class executive council rather than the Senate. Senator Chambers felt that the class officers are a responsible branch of student govern.

Here Senior Class Vice-President John Parnell pointed out that "slowly but surely (the senators) are realizing that the class officers have responsibility and that such responsibility should be placed in the hands of the officers".

The arguments over the amendments and general procedure became so heated at this point that Senate President Dacey ('66-at large) succinctly expressed the situation "as rapidly deteriorating into a farcical presentation".

Recess was called here to straighten out the conflicts in parliamentary procedure.

The meeting was recalled. Senator Chambers decided to strike her amendments and yield to President Keough. Keough was to make similar amendments.

Here Senator Jim Allen (Commuter) successfully moved to table the bill to a Constitution-

Art Dept. To Sponsor Exhibit

One of the many art drawings to be presented by the Drawing Society this Sunday in the S.U. The Society, a national foundation comprised of artists, curators and collectors, was established to "bring to the attention of students and the public the significance of the art of drawings". The art department and the S.U. Art and Music Committee, sponsoring groups for the exhibition, have invited the community to the opening reception from 3-5 p.m. this Sunday.

al BiLaws & Revisions Committee. One officer of each class would be invited to sit in with the senate members of the committee.

A bill requiring class officers elected in the spring to take office at the end of the academic year was defeated.

Senator Moriarity is ('68-at large) argument for this bill was the conceivably an officer with no previous experience could be elected and—, as Moriarity said, "if sworn in within eight days (as is now done) this officer would really be on the spot."

Class officers Keough and Cassoli immediately spoke against the bill.

Junior class secretary Cassoli stated that she felt that officers must be sworn in immediately because "they have to start planning for the following year... there are a lot of little things that must be done right away."

In this same vein President Keough pointed out that the out going officer "no longer holds his position in the eyes of the class". He went on to say that "the incoming person would—as a first step in acclimating himself to the office-work with the out going officer."

Thus, amid loud undercurrent due to the many discussions on the floor, the bill was defeated.

Two convention bills were passed. One dealt with the order of succession in the event that the senate vice-president should assume the office of president.

The other changed the Elections Committee to the Student Government Affairs Committee, thus giving the committee continuous power and not just at election times.

The Constitutional Convention was then adjourned with the promise of another one in the foreseeable future to decide the budgets bill proposed by Gary Bombardier.

A senate meeting was then called. Technically this was the second senate meeting of the evening because one had been called prior to the convention to swear in the freshman class officers, with the exception of the vice-president who was not there. Dacey opened the Senate meeting with the statement that "the Fine Arts Council is in a mess again. It is still not settled whose FAC is the real one."

Due to these statements the Senate moved into special business to consider and unanimously pass Senator Bob Flynn's (Commuter) bill to establish a joint AdHoc committee of the Faculty and Student Senates, with a three to three ratio.

This committee is charged "to investigate areas in which it is desirable to have increased faculty-student participation and policy formation."

The senators decided that their representatives will be appointed by President Dacey.

Due to his statements the rest of the agenda was tabled to the next senate meeting.

The meeting was adjourned after an announcement by Senator Cunningham (Gorman) that a public hearing of the Yahoo Investigatory Committee will be held on Mon., Nov. 8 at 7 p.m. in Hasbrouck 20.

Courtesy Beats Untouchables

By DAVE JARNES

The Courtesy Taxis, Cinderella team of this year's playoffs, did it again. This time the mighty Untouchables were the victims in Wednesday's 19-18 squeaker.

On paper it appeared the Taxis had no chance at all against the much bigger Untouchables but they immediately shocked the Untouchables by taking a 12-6 halftime lead. The favorites stormed back early in the second half to take a 18-12 lead on two quick TD's.

With about a minute left quarterback Bill Klaes of the Taxis hit Costello with a 40 yard bomb to tie up the game. The conversion pass to Don Tudryn provided the clincher.

But the Untouchables didn't give up. Jim Police drove his team to the Taxis ten yard line but a fourth down pass into the endzone was batted away and the Taxis held on.

The Taxis had previously defeated the Chem Club 19-18 and upset the Hardnoses 13-7 to win their league. With their amazing upset of the Untouchables the Taxis find themselves in the championship game with KS where once again they are big underdogs.

In a defensive contest KS blanked the Chadbourne Maroons 6-0 to reach the finals. KS had a decided edge in offense with Ed Godak's accurate short passes (20-28) keeping KS in control of the ball most of the time. Nonetheless the Maroons drove to the KS 4 yard line late in the game but the burley KS defense stiffened up and took over the ball on downs. The only score came early in the game on a Godak to Stiffani pass.

Little Redmen Look for First Victory Today At Storrs

The Massachusetts freshman football team has had a three week layoff to lick its wounds after defeats in its first two games, but Frank Shields' yearlings get back in action this afternoon against the Connecticut Huskies at Storrs.

The Little Redmen go up against a team with a 2-1 record which includes a 26-13 loss to Rhode Island, a team that beat UMass 18-6 in their opener. The team that will be making the Storrs trip will be minus six men from the early season's squad.

Halfback Tim Driscoll and 6'4", 240 pound tackle Ed Sherman, both from Bridgewater, will miss the last two games, as will Tom Wales, a defensive back who scored the only touchdown in the Rhode Island game, and George Crane, a starting linebacker. Both Driscoll and Sherman suffered knee injuries in the 35-8 rout by Boston University. Al Gasuk has been lost at the right guard position with a neck injury, and Pete Foote, one of three highly regarded quarterbacks on this year's frosh, has withdrawn from school.

The offensive picture is not as black as it seems, however. Steve Chew will move into the starting lineup to replace Driscoll. Chew was the state's top high school scorer the last two seasons while at Masconomet Regional, and he has been impressive in recent practices.

Fullback Bruce Cochran could play little in the first game due to a neck injury. Expectations are that the backfield will be stronger against the Pups Friday with Cochran back in action.

The quarterbacks will be Frank Tavolacci and Ron Coltin. with Al Yesue at the right halfback position. The targets of their passes will be Steve Free-land at left end and either Bill Manning or Paul Vaccaro on the right flank. Vaccaro began the season at right halfback but was shifted to end for the BU contest. The first two games gave no indication that the class of '69 had any ends like Bob Meers and Milt Morin, but hopes are that the final two games plus spring practice will develop

Vaccaro and Schablick both play linebacker on defense, but the rest of the squad platoons. Brian Silveira and Nick War-nock are the ends, Bob Crotty and Joe Amico, a 230 pounder, are the tackles with Jim Passanini and Sumner Hersey at guard. The secondary is led by Mike McArdle who picked off four passes in the first two games. Tim Schmitt of Amherst and Joel Formby are the other deep men.

The Connecticut freshmen defeated a good Holy Cross team 17-15 and gave New Hampshire its first loss by a 3-0 count. UNH, the Little Redmen's opposition next week, had beaten Rhode Island, Exeter Academy, and tied Northeastern.

Bob Ellis, who has been unable to compete this season in his usual halfback slot for the varsity due to an injury sustained in the Maine game, has been serving as assistant coach for the Frosh football team.

Freshmen X-Country

Which sport has the most successful freshman team on campus?

If you said the cross country team you were right. To date the 11'1 Redmen are undefeated in five meets.

They have beaten such perennial power houses as Springfield, Coast Guard, Central Connecticut, and Boston College.

Leading runner on the team is Steve Oblitz. The Beth Page, New York, native has set a course record in every meet this season. Second man on the team is Paul Hoss of Rockland.

Tomorrow the frosh participate in the New England championships and are favored to win. Other teams given a shot at UMass are Brown, Northeastern and Holy Cross.

SOCCER...

the rebound was kicked over the goal. Coach Larry Briggs stood later at halftime:

"If they can't score on the open net, then they're not going to score at all." His philosophy turned out to be true.

The third quarter was all UM. They had no less than four good opportunities before Burgess tallied, and excellent defensive work did not allow the Jeffs a shot on the goal. It wasn't until the last two minutes of the period that Amherst could apply some pressure.

Action in the last quarter was fast and furious. Peter Makhambra of the Redmen missed a couple of chances, and the Jeffs mounted some threats. Amherst went all out in the last three minutes to tie the game. A shot with 2 1/2 minutes left hit the UM right goal post, and with 2:00 left Larry Martin made a beautiful diving save to preserve the lead. The Redmen held on for the remainder of the game.

THIS victory came on the heels of last week's cliffhanger against Vermont, and it was the fourth shutout this season for the defensively outstanding Redmen. They are now 6-3. UM will travel to UNS a week from tomorrow to try to capture a share of the Yankee Conference title.

Red Hot Redmen Host HC

By MIKE GOULD

Vic Fusia's rampaging Redmen will be gunning for their fifth straight victory Saturday when they host the vastly improved Holy Cross Crusaders at Alumni Stadium.

The Redmen have shown an explosive offense and a staunch defense while rolling over their previous four opponents by a combined score of 125-31. Coach Fusia, always an eloquent and forceful speaker, is really outdoing himself with his halftime pep talks. Vic's boys have scored 96 of their 125 points in the second half of their ball games.

Holy Cross, under new Coach Mel Massucco, will provide the Redmen with some stiff competition. The Crusaders started slowly this season chiefly because they lost their first and second string quarterbacks at the outset. After three opening losses, HS has played very good football. The Purple tied BU, lost to powerful Syracuse, and defeated the same Buffalo team which defeated UMass earlier this season.

The improvement of the Holy Cross team can be attributed chiefly to the rapid progression of their two sophomore quarterbacks Tom Tyler and Bob Lawson. Tyler has shown himself to be a potent passer while Lawson has been a tough man to stop on the roll-out, option play.

Starting in the HC backfield with Tyler will be halfbacks Brian Flatley and Ray Blake and fullback Earl Kirmser.

Tackles Joe Lilly (6'2, 230 lbs.) and Mike Addesa (6'4, 245 lbs.) anchor a strong offensive line which averages 225 lbs. a man. The Crusaders will outweigh the Redmen in the line by ten lbs. per man.

Holy Cross' real strength lies in their aggressive defensive team, which features the brother act of soph linebacker Frank Lilly and big brother tackle Joe. End Dick Terry and the previously cited Addesa are tough boys to put down.

The Crusaders are ready and able to spring the upset this week. The victory last week over Buffalo has given Holy Cross the necessary momentum, and they have not forgotten the 25-6 defeat absorbed at the hands of the Redmen last year.

The Redmen are in top physical shape for this week's big game, only defensive back Dave Giarla's broken nose being a questionmark. Terry Swanson will probably start at the all-important cornerback position, but Giarla might see action.

Greg Landry, sporting a .630 passing percentage, will be running the Redmen attack with only inexperienced Al Caruso around to back him up.

Landry will be throwing to Bob Meers and Milt Morin, both of whom break records each time they catch a pass. Morin has the awesome average of 22.1 yards a catch this season while Meers has caught 28 passes for 363 yards.

Working behind Landry will be the trio of Detore, Durkin and Vandersea. All three have had fine seasons, supplementing Landry's passing with hard running and strong blocking.

Up front, offensively, the Redmen boast the likes of Sophs Jim Mitchell, Ernie Smith and Dan Harrigan along with Juniors Bill Connor and Bob Santucci and Senior ends Morin and Meers.

The Redmen defensive unit features the work of tackle Ed Toner, middle guard Santucci, and linebackers Bernie Dallas, Rod Brooks and roving Dave Kelley.

See you at the stadium for what should be a game to remember.

BURGESS STARS

Booters Eke Out 1-0 Win Over Lord Jeffs

By GLENN BRIERE

In another thriller, the Redmen soccer team edged Amherst, 1-0, at UM Wednesday. It was a sweet victory for the Redmen, who are always more than anxious to beat their more established crosstown rivals. The Lord Jeffs hold a big lead in a series that goes back for quite some time.

ONCE again, the hero was Bill Burgess, who broke a scoreless tie at 18:57 of the third period. A corner kick by Marty Smith bounced around in front of the Amherst goal, and finally Burgess headed it into the left side. That made the score 1-0, and it turned out to be the only score despite some strong pressure by the Jeffs in the final quarter.

The first quarter was evenly played, with each team missing several chances. The second period, however, was dominated by Amherst. Their best scoring chance came at 18:30 when the UM goalie, Larry Martin, made a save but wound up on the ground. A shot at the open net was blocked by the defense, and

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

NOW GET OUT THERE AND JUSTIFY THE FAITH IN YOU YOUR FATHER'S FINANCIAL SUPPORT HAS GIVEN ME.

Saturday will not only be the day of the Holy Cross game but also Varsity "M" Club Day. This new organization of UMass graduates will sponsor a tailgate picnic at the north end of the stadium at 10-30 A.M. and a social affair for members and their guests at Memorial Hall after the game.

The Club, which now numbers 150 members, was formed only last spring by three former Redmen grid standouts, Pete Pletz '65, Bob Burke '65, and Joe Doyle '65. The organizational process included obtaining information from similar clubs in other schools.

The original idea for the club was to act as a unit to promote unity and school spirit among graduates. The objectives were later expanded to include 1) the maintenance of the highest ideal of intercollegiate athletics at the University, 2) the encouragement of student participation in athletics, and 3) the accumulation of a fund to provide scholarships, grants, and awards.

One function of the club is the poll of writers and broadcasters after every game to determine the top UMass offensive and defensive players of the game. The results are published weekly in the Collegian, and the winners receive certificates.

At the conclusion of the season, the player with the most certificates will be presented an award. Greg Landry currently leads in the offensive category with four certificates, while Bernie Dallas, with three, and Ed Toner, with two are in the forefront defensively.

Another of the "M" Club's activities is the spring football game, pitting the alumni squad against the varsity. Last year's curtain-raiser of the series featured such gridiron stars of yesterday as Noel Reebenacker '53, John La Fontana '61, Billy Maxwell '60, and John Burgess '61.

Another '61 alumnus, John McCormick of the Denver Broncos, was injured and served in a coaching capacity.

The tilt drew a crowd of 5,000, a figure that Club officials hope will be surpassed in this year's game at Alumni Stadium. Seniors Dave Kelley and Bernie Dallas have been selected as Co-Chairmen for the 1966 Varsity-Alumni Spring Game.

The "M" Club provides its members with reduced rates for football tickets, but, as President Joe Doyle notes, the organization "is interested in all sports, not just football."

The Varsity-Alumni basketball game, on Nov. 19, will be sponsored by the Club. Still on the drawing board are plans for a Hall of Fame to honor UMass graduates who have made outstanding contributions in any aspect of life.

Besides Doyle, the officers of the Club include Vice-President Peter Pletz, Treasurer John Schroeder, and Advisor Evan Johnston. Doyle emphasizes the fact that "Membership is not limited to letter-winners. It is open to all graduates." Prospective members are urged to notify Mr. Doyle at the Alumni Office at the Boyden Athletic Building. The membership fee is $2.50.

Greenfield Victor

Placing five men in the top 12 Greenfield walked away with Western Mass Schoolboy cross country championship held on the Fields below Boyden. The top five schools were: Greenfield with 32 points; Tantasqua 94; Minnechaug 137; Amherst 140; and Springfield Cathedral 152.

Sandole of Tantasqua was the individual winner. He led from the start and had a clocking of 13:10.5 over the 2.6 mile course to break the record by 20 seconds.

The meet was officiated by the coaches and runners of the UMass-cross country team.

Brooklyn Editors Leave After Audit

By CPS

The editors-in-chief and faculty advisers of three of Brooklyn College's campus journals have resigned their positions following an administrative order preventing the publication of one of the journals.

The move is the latest in a long series of student protests against administrative policies, and specifically against Brooklyn College Pres. Harry D. Gidense.

The resignations followed notification by the college administration that no money would be made available for the publication of November Review, a general interest journal. The announcement forced the magazine's printers to cancel publication after the journal was on the press.

Dean of Students Herbert Stroup said the magazine was suspended for "fiscal" reasons. "It's not a matter of freedom," he commented, "it's a matter of business."

Stroup charged that the editor of November Review, Jeffrey Hoffeld, and its faculty adviser, Dr. Maurice Kramer, had failed to provide the school's committee on publications with an adequate budget in advance of publication.

Hoffeld charged in his letter of resignation that "the administration of the college is unwilling to invest its faith in the faculty adviser and the editorial staff to publish a journal worthy of the college." The journal's faculty adviser, in his resignation protested that "the college took action without prior notice or consultation with the faculty adviser, the editor-in-chief, or the committee on publications, as set forth in the rules and regulations."

Following the incident, the editors and faculty advisers of The Amersfort Review and Spectrum, two other campus publications, resigned.

Accompanying the resignations was a decision by the college's ruling Faculty Council, to reject a proposal which would have given the committee of publications censorship power.

The faculty council vote leaves the college, in effect, without a policy concerning publications.

"Gloomy Future" for S. Amer.

U.S. Role In Chile Discussed By Former Amherst President

By PAT PETOW
4-College Reporter

"Chile is a country which is growing forward very fast," said Dr. Charles Cole to the United Church Women of Amherst, observing World Community Day in the Social Hall of the Newman Center, Friday evening, Nov. 4.

"It is my conviction . . . that Latin America is more important for us in the next 50 years than any other area in the world," stated Cole, a former President of Amherst College and a former ambassador to Chile, in prefacing his description of the role of the U. S. there.

IN CHILE A MASSIVE Agency for International Development grant, between 80 to 100 million dollars each year, has been applied to reconstruction after earthquake, agricultural extension services, building of roads, and other projects.

Earthquakes, which caused great damage in 1960 and 1965, are complemented by frequent minor ones as the two dozen Cole counted in his first three months there.

A second area of U.S. aid is focused on the military services, particularly in their civil enterprises in building roads and airfields and training conscripts.

The former ambassador noted that an enormous food surplus program going to Chile feeds two out of the eight million people and that it is particularly effective in providing hot lunches for schoolchildren.

THE PEACE CORPS, a fourth type of the North American role, earned, Cole said, "tremendous success and was a success because it got such wonderful young people in it."

Other examples of assistance include programs by religious organizations — the Amherst women are sending to Chile sewing kits which they made and also the needles, threads, etc. which go in them.

CARE, the hospital and training ship the Hope, as well as the investment and the enlightened and humanitarian efforts of U. S. businessmen also aid Chile and other Latin American Countries.

"There just isn't enough land and resources to support the population in Latin America," Cole said, foreseeing a "gloomy future" flowing to a rapid population increase. The need for capital to invest and reinvest poses a second major problem, so difficult it scarcely seems soluble he said.

COLE INVITED THE United Church Women to back government-sponsored programs and to contribute to private organizations.

Noting the percentage of all American assistance, he asked, "Does the Christian tradition demand more than 1%?"

Answering a question, Cole said, "I'm betting on the Christian-Democrats." This party, which has recently elected President Frey in Chile, he believed encompasses reformers, the honest, the able and energetic.

At the outset of his talk, Cole pointed out that although Latin American countries have had a similar settlement, language, and religion and so have historically been considered unified, one cannot properly generalize about them as if they were united. "Paraguay is more different from Chile than Italy is from Sweden" said Cole, adding "it's unfortunate."

LACK OF COMMUNICATIONS prevented their becoming unified, and today each, he declared, has its own individuality, patriotism, and problems.

Generalization about unstable governments is a result of this supposed unity. Citing the absence of military services in Costa Rica and their subordination to the political structure in Chile, Cole gave an example of two countries, neither dominated by the armed forces nor unstable, without conditions sometimes attributed to all of Latin America.

"They don't mind instability as much as we would," said our former man-in-Santiago. From another point of view, Cole predicted that land and like reform would bring about greater social and political stability, rather than an equal economic stability.

Kennedy Aide Here On Tuesday

On Tues. Nov. 9, The Young Democrats of UMass will present an address by Kenneth P. O'Connell on "Kennedy and After."

Mr. O'Connell was one of the late Pres. John F. Kennedy's closest friends and advisors during his years in the Senate and the White House.

Along with Lawrence O'Brien and others, he was a prominent member of the politically skillful team dubbed the "Irish Mafia," which came into national prominence during the eventually triumphant campaign for the 1960 Democratic Presidential nomination.

O'Connell has thus been active in both state and national politics and is considered a liberal on major issues.

Since his return to Mass., O'Connell has been prominently mentioned as a contender for next year's Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

For this reason his speech should be interesting to political observers here, as this is his first appearance in Western Mass.

The Young Democrats will have an informal coffee hour for him in the Colonial Lounge, beginning at 7 p.m. This will be followed by his address in the Commonwealth Room at 8 p.m.

World Premier of "The Martyred" Set For UT's Second Production

On Nov. 18, 19, 20, 21, the University will see the world premiere of a new play by a new and serious playwright—The Martyred by Richard Greenbaum. It is based on the best selling novel of the same name by Richard Kim, and is being produced by The University of Massachusetts Theatre as its second production of the season.

Since Broadway has become so restrictive and dollar-conscious, University Theatres are becoming the proving grounds for new talent. However, producing new plays is by no means a one-way street in favor of the author. On the contrary, new plays provide valuable experience for actors and technicians, become an invaluable teaching device, and provide audiences with fresh, entertaining, and stimulating drama.

Director of Theatre, Cosmo A. Catalano, feels that The Martyred more than adequately fulfills these needs.

In producing this work, the University Theatre is affording Mr.

Greenbaum an opportunity to see his play on the stage. Only in this way can there be a true "synthesis" of author, actor, director, technician, and audience. At the same time, both actors and technicians are able to perform without being influenced by previous productions.

The play itself becomes an invaluable teaching device in that students are able to study the production in minute detail and relate the aesthetic theories of composition in it.

When Mr. Greenbaum arrives on campus he will spend a great deal of time with Professor Catalano's class in Introduction to the Theatre, discussing his play with them.

Finally, The Martyred will provide audiences with entertaining and stimulating drama.

As the 18th of November draws near, production has moved into high gear. Mr. Kim has been on hand to provide invaluable technical assistance, and Mr. Greenbaum is expected to arrive soon in order to supervise the production personally. Tickets will be on sale in the Student Union lobby starting today.

Grants Aid Journalists

A newspaper with a circulation of over 4,000,000 would be regarded as exerting a substantial amount of influence—and this is just about the number of people the more than 1,000 college newspapers reach.

The editors of these papers play an important role in formulating, stabilizing, and reflecting campus opinion. The United States Student Press Association will help college newsmen and women in their jobs with a grant of $55,700 from Carnegie Corporation of New York, the educational foundation has announced.

The Corporation is also announcing six other grants totaling $548,000.

Press Association will hold three weekend seminars in February, March, and April and a five-week seminar during the summer of 1966 for student editors and some junior staff members, students representing different groups.

Alan Pifer, acting president of Carnegie Corporation, in announcing this grant said, "One underlying premise is implicit in this entire program. Improved campus communication is a critical need. Students and faculty need to know more about higher education in general and their own institutions in particular so that they can play a more creative and constructive role in determining policy."

"Such a role," he continued, "can only lead to greater understanding of and identification with their institutions."

The purpose of the weekend seminar is to raise and analyze

Bay State Special Forces Aid In Woronoco Fire

The UMass Army ROTC BAY STATE SPECIAL FORCES responded to another local emergency. After being called out recently to search for a child near Granby, the Special Forces were again alerted last week on a fire fighting mission.

Dean Hopkins sounded the alert through Colonel Joseph A. Bohnake, Thursday about midnight. The Special Forces were to assemble at 5:30 a.m. Friday, Nov. 1965 to be transported to Woronoco, near Westfield, to relieve another fire fighting crew that had worked throughout the night.

Cadet Major John F. Soares led his thirty field trained cadets to the fire covered area just as dawn was breaking on Friday morning. The cadets worked throughout the day with pick, racks, and shovels to cut a fire break in time to stop the fire. After this was completed a back fire was started on the near side of the break to steal the oxygen from the main uncontrolled blaze.

One of the forest rangers called the University to commend the cadets on their diligent work. He stated that without them the fire would never have been contained. The Special Forces cadets continued to work on a clean up detail until 6:00 p.m. Friday evening when they were relieved after twelve long hours of hard work.

Food Researcher Granted $15,000

The United States Surgeon General's Office has awarded the University a $15,000 grant for a food research project.

Dr. Edward F. Reber, chairman of food and nutrition in the UMass School of Home Economics, will use the grant to compile "An Annotated Bibliography of the Wholesomeness of Irradiated Foods."

Dr. Reber began his research for the Surgeon General's Office while a faculty member of the University of Illinois. The present contract for the bibliography was awarded under the Quartermaster Corps Research and Development program.

His annotated bibliography is an effort to bring together the results of several recent research studies into the wholesomeness of foods treated with atomic radiation. The bibliography will incorporate research findings from both foreign and domestic sources.

Prof. Cantor To Speak

Professor Milton Cantor, author and scholar, will be the speaker at the Hillel lecture Tues., Nov. 9, at 8:00 P.M. in Middlesex Room, Student Union. The "inflated character of student radicalism" will be discussed by Prof. Cantor in his lecture, "The New Student Left".

Prof. Cantor came to the University in 1963. Before this, he taught at Michigan State and Williams College.

A scholar, Prof. Cantor received his B.A. at Brooklyn College, his M.A. University of Pennsylvania, and his Ph.D. at Columbia. In 1960, as a Fulbright scholar, he travelled widely throughout Europe, teaching in Germany and lecturing for the State Department at United States Information Centers in Italy, England, and Germany.

However, Prof. Cantor is not content with past accomplishments, for he is continuing to advance in the educator's world.

While teaching at the University, he is also Managing Editor of a national scholarly journal, Labor History. Prof. Cantor has written a book, currently in press, entitled Joel Barlow: Minister of Enlightenment, dealing with the American mind during the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. He is now in the process of writing a study of Max Eastman, which should be completed within three months.

In today's era of student riots marches over Viet Nam policy and issues in civil rights, Prof. Cantor's lecture should be especially timely and informative.

Seminar To Be Held On Teaching Careers

A study conducted by the Graduate Committee on Scholarship and Standards last year showed that several departments of the University are anticipating that many of the University's Graduate Teaching and Research Fellows will ultimately become college teachers and are already conducting seminars for these young people to aid them in preparing for this profession.

The Committee felt however that there was a place for a supplementary operation in the form of an orientation seminar in which the students would have an opportunity to hear various officials discuss University-wide philosophy, functions and problems. This seminar has been approved by the Graduate Council.

The Seminar will be non-credit, no tuition will be charged and attendance will be voluntary but if the Graduate Fellows so desire attendance will be taken and any Fellow attending six of the seven meetings will have the seminar noted on his transcript.

New faculty members are also invited to attend. Wives are invited to accompany their husbands.

All meetings will be in Mahar Auditorium beginning at 8:00 p.m.

"Silver Skis" To Be Shown In Amherst

In this age of do-it-yourself, a fellow named John Jay has really topped them all in the movie business. Almost singlehandedly with an assist from his lovely wife Lois, and his associate Don Rathbun—he annually turns out a feature production on adventure in the ski world that would tax the facilities and ingenuity of two dozen Hollywood technicians.

Are his pictures good? Well, Warner Brothers bought two of them; one was nominated for the Academy Award. Both CBS and ABC have shown his Winter Olympic films on their television networks, and he has been the Official U.S. Olympic Photographer three times.

Author of the best-selling ski book "Skiing the Americas", Jay has just written a new illustrated volume, with John O'Rear, entitled "Ski Down the Years"—a nostalgic yet lively and humorous account of the ski explosion in North America. SKI magazine is the publisher.

Now celebrating his silver anniversary in the ski film business, Jay and his wife have made 23 feature length documentaries of the sport in every continent on earth—except Antarctica.

Their shows always have universal appeal because of the humane interest they inject, along with the exciting action sequences filmed from their fast-moving skis and their annual audience of 130,000 is growing constantly.

Anyone who has ever seen a Jay production, and heard the accompanying flow of Yankee wit supplied by the producer in person, will never willingly miss another.

Jay will appear with his latest production, "Silver Skis" on Nov. 11, 8 p.m. at the Amherst Regional High School Auditorium.

Celebrating twenty-five years in the ski film business, it contains the choicest highlights of vintage Jay films.

Nostalgic faces, races, and clothes of yesterday will come to life once more, from baggy pants to Bogners.

The final part of the show is modern, featuring the 1965 Olympic racers of Austria, France, and the USA; ski acrobat Art Furrer; incomparable Stein Eriksen in superslow style analysis at Arapahoe Basin, Colorado; the National Gelandesprung Contest at Alta, Utah; and the thrilling, dangerous High Route—100 miles on skis across the roof of Europe, from the Matterhorn to Mont Blanc, with ropes, sealskins, and skiplanes.

Rhodesia--The Black Eclipse

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson recently paid a visit to the Prime Minister of Rhodesia, White Supremacist Ian Smith. The visit was an attempt to soften the demands for Independence made by the Rhodesian Government. A clash resulted, in which neither party would compromise their respective stands.

The Prime Minister of Rhodesia desires an independent state that would be dominated by the White Rhodesians. It is Ian Smith's view that the White people should not hand over to the Black population, the state that White men have worked so industriously for 75 years to build.

The product of those 75 years of labor is a state in which 200,000 White men control both the present and future of 4,000,000 Black men. By the Land Apportionment Act of 1928 the Blacks are prohibited from owning or leasing land in White areas. This act is preventing the Black Rhodesians from leasing stores and offices in Urban sites. Thus the White men are eliminating a potential source of business competition.

Mr. Smith brags that 85% of all Black children attend school. This accomplishment of Mr. Smith's seems to offer the Black people a method of advancing. It is however, noteworthy that in Rhodesia, out of 4,000,000 Blacks there are only 3 lawyers, 12 doctors, and no individuals situated in key civil service posts.

In 75 years of great diligence and industry the White man has managed to crush the Black man's opportunity for economie prosperity. Under Rhodesian law, the Whiteman is given an unquestionable job preference over the Black man. The extent to which this law is applied is reflected in the comparative incomes of the two racial groups. The White Rhodesian worker makes an average of 2,000 dollars per year, while the Black Rhodesians have an income of only 200 dollars per year.

The 1961 Constitution of Rhodesia provides for a legislature in which 15 of the 65 seats are to be filled by Black Rhodesians. In Mr. Ian Smith's government the Black population has a theoretical opportunity to express their views. It is not difficult to imagine how little Black opinion there is in the legislature, when other laws are examined. The Rhodesian government enforces laws that allow for the imprisonment of any suspected trouble makers for an indefinite period of time without any explanation. The government's policy, dictated by a White Supremacist doctrine, could not help but make the 15 Black legislators anything but trouble makers.

The major accomplishment of 75 years of hardwork has not been the production of prosperous urban centers, rich tobacco fields, and cattle ranches. On the contrary, the major product is 4,000,000 people denied of the rights to enter business, live where they desire, and determine their own future. The nation as a whole has been denied, by the White man, the right to develop as a nation.

Education: Part 3

More Than Classes

"Don't let classes get in the way of your education."

Many students would approve of this father's advice to his daughter. Studying forms only a part of education, not the whole.

Of course, studying is important. You can't exchange ideas until you have ideas, formed from some knowledge. You can't support your arguments if you have no knowledge from which to draw.

But studies should be used only as a diving board to education. Where is the pool?

Where people are.

You can learn from meeting other people, talking and interacting with them. This can't be done at a desk. The student must get out of the academic vacuum.

He can gain so much from working on one or possibly two extracurricular activities. Through these activities, he can enlarge his interests and his circle of friends.

After meeting many people, the student should develop an open-mindedness.

Through education, he should gain, not a store of knowledge, but an attitude. A way of thinking. The obligation to think first instead of reacting emotionally to net ideas. He gains a more universal outlook.

John Dewey believed that the purpose of education is "to set free and to develop the capacities of human individuals." The student can best develop his capacities by learning from other people.

The pool is wide, deep and refreshing. Jump.

Blood For Whom?

To the Editor:

In last Friday's edition of the Collegian there appeared a statement by the Young Independents to the effect that they would "sponsor a blood drive on Wed., Nov. 17 in conjunction with the Campus Religious Council drive."

It was further stated that, "The group will ask the Red Cross to make sure that the blood will be supplied to all those fighting and not exclusively to Americans."

The Campus Religious Council would like to take this opportunity to clarify its position on the matter.

The statement in last Friday's Collegian was the first notice the Council received of the Young Independents' intention of sponsoring a blood drive in conjunction with the CRC drive. Therefore, although the Young Independents may be sponsoring a blood recruiting drive among their own members, they are in no sense sponsoring the Campus-wide drive.

Although the Red Cross in Viet Nam was designated as the requested destination of their donation the statement was rather vague as to the identity of the actually intended recipients.

The CRC agrees in principle that blood should be made available to all those who need it. In line with this philosophy the Campus Religious Council will make every effort to see that blood so designated will be sent to the Red Cross in South Viet Nam for administration to any wounded American or American allied troops or to any wounded members of the Viet Cong or North Vietnamese Armed Forces who have been captured and interned in Allied held installations.

The Campus Religious Council will not permit any attempt to use its good offices to make direct donations of blood to units still under the command or direction of the Viet Cong, North Vietnamese Army or any other belligerent power, as such rendering of direct aid might tend to prolong the fighting and therefore cancel out any humanitarian effect such a direct donation might have.

Need For Insight

To the Editor:

Many are concerned with the problems of today's world. Our campus is a microcosm of this world. Many educational institutions including the University of Massachusetts lack student bodies which have insight into their growing needs. Why do students accept unquestionably propaganda from the press, pulpit, professors, present officials, and the President of the University? Are activities such as those of the students at Berkeley commonly referred to as "subversive" really subversive? We invite your comments.

Parking Lot Strategy

To the Editor:

It was well to wait the season out to see what progress was made; as far as one can see, there was none.

The team played reasonably well, and yes, the new Alumni Stadium is the most beautiful for miles. Each Saturday afternoon presented a good time for all, to a point. A spectator at a University of Massachusetts home football game is in for a treat until about 3:35 p.m.; A. J. Foyt would have a hard time getting out of those parking lots, even with a police escort.

Those in charge of our fine athletic program are obviously not well equipped to handle any confusion other than that which occurs on the football field. Perhaps some of the care and attention that goes into planning football plays should also be used in planning easy means of exit from the parking facilities.

On the football field, plays are changed when they prove ineffectual; the same rule does not seem to apply in the parking lot. If a football coach used the same unsuccessful strategy five games in a row (as have the strategists who plan parking) he'd be out looking for a new job.

As a future alumnus of the University, I will not be drawn to see our football team until I am sure that all has been done to insure the ease and comfort to which a paying spectator is entitled. Perhaps, gentlemen, some arrangements should be made to rectify this problem before the next season.

"Where The Girls Are" Uncovers Co-eds

That cause celebre, Where The Girls Are: A Social Guide To Women's Colleges In The East, is now being published.

The book, an "insider's" guide, which was front page news in The New York Times, was written and originally published by the staff members of the Daily Princetonian, the University's daily campus paper.

Orders for the book are pouring in, television networks have approached the Princetonian, movies have expressed interest, and the magazines are planning to run news stories on the book.

Where The Girls Are is a handbook for college men, giving "inside" information and brotherly advice about the typical Smith girl, Radcliffe girl, Vassar girl—in all, 25 women's schools are discussed. Even central telephone numbers and campus maps are included to aid the questing college man.

There is one further development. The Princetonian is now planning to publish an expanded, all-inclusive edition of Where The Girls Are.

The new book, slated for fall publication to coincide with the beginning of the academic year.

Pictured here are some of the advantages to be gained by the readers of a book, published by students at Princeton, entitled Where The Girls Are. The book gives the low-down on co-eds throughout the East. So, for some low down facts . . .

Protests Still On Across The Nation

By F. D. BODEUS
Reporter-at-Large

Various colleges are beginning to realize that the college student should be given more responsibility.

The Board of Regents of the State Colleges in Iowa discussed the proposal that beer should be served at campus social centers to students over 21. The Yale Ad Hoc Committee on Tenure Appointments has suggested that non- or students and grad students evaluate their education after graduation. Their written evaluations of faculty teaching ability would be considered when granting tenure. (The Amherst Student)

THE SOUTH KOREAN GOVERNMENT has closed several universities in order to discipline students for demonstrating against the recent treaty between Japan and So. Korea. Those colleges affected are Seoul National University, Korea U., and Yonsei U. Students feel the treaty is a cold war maneuver that only increases war tensions with North Korea. It is encouraging to see, however, that students are also demonstrating in favor of their government's policy.

(The Dailhousie Gazette)
A PRO-VIET NAM demonstration at Central Connecticut State College drew a great deal of praise from students and faculty alike. The faculty, in particular, found it an encouraging sign of growing seriousness and patriotism among college youth. (Central Recorder)

Meanwhile, in the Four-College Area:

President Gettell has announced that Mt. Holyoke will not participate in the Four-College evening bus service. He declared that it was "not appropriate" to spend tuition money on a service for a "particular minority. We can't give Suzi a ride at the expense of Debra." (Amherst Student)

AIC Student Government has asked the administration to consider the possibility of making the Jewish holy days college holidays. (The Mt. Holyoke News.)

Amherst President Favors Rights; Freedom of Expression Upheld

President Calvin H. Plimpton of Amherst College told students here last week that the college campus must remain a place where persons of all persuasions are allowed to speak without physical molestation or intimidation. The college, he said, "is still the holy place for searching for truth."

President Plimpton spoke in response to a recent incident in which a small group of Amherst undergraduates heckled a visiting group of "peace walkers," took away their literature and burned it.

The peace walkers, who had been invited to the campus by another group of undergraduates, were pleading the case for conscientious objection and resistance to the war in Vietnam. The students involved later apologized and made restitution for the damage.

"We register and allow representatives from all the armed forces, foreign service, C.I.A., schools, and businesses to plead their cases before us," President Plimpton said. "We cannot draw up a Maginot Line to protect us from dangerous thoughts. Education is inherently a dangerous business, and faced with bonafide choices, of courses, we will make the wrong choice occasionally."

President Plimpton pointed out that, "Errors and losses can be profoundly educational, but I would hope that persons holding opinions different from our own should be allowed to speak without physical molestation. One does not have to stay if one's gorge rises from within."

It is not the act of book-burning, that is, the disposal of unwanted objects that leads to disapproval, the President said. "It comes in the symbolism. A book is an expression of an idea, and any suggestion of a general suppression brings us all to our feet lighting."

"We expect, especially in an academic community, to have around us some ideas and, for that matter, some professors and students, with whom we do not agree, and with whom we do not feel entirely confidential," Plimpton continued, and he feels that, "The acceptance of them and their ideas is the essence of a college."

"We need to be aware of this symbolism," he said. "In our Western civilization burning other people's books evokes a violent protest akin to that of painting a swastika on a synagogue."

President Plimpton's statement, made at a regular morning assembly of the College, emphasized the special functions of a college.

"On the campus," he said, "the need is to discover direction, and to continually examine."

"On the campus," he continued, "any time we suppress a free discussion, or when we do not allow someone of a contrary view to express his thoughts, then something vital, something living goes out of the college, and we become guilty of indoctrinating propaganda instead of education."

"In any society, but especially in a democracy, the silent ones are almost as guilty as those who interfere physically with the freedom of speech. One of the major differences between a democracy and a totalitarian state is the equal rights afforded minorities," he concluded.

UConn Freshmen Defeat Little Redmen at Storrs

By AL RICE

The injury riddled Massachusetts freshman football team went down to its third straight defeat Friday as the UConn yearlings moved easily through the air and on the ground in a 29-6 win at Storrs.

Connecticut scored first and led all the way except for a brief period in the second quarter when the Redmen tied the game on fullback Bruce Cochran's 34 yard breakaway run. The Huskies controlled the ball for all but six plays in the opening period.

The Huskies picked up four first downs in a 51 yard drive following a UMass punt and Peter Fischette scored from one yard out. The drive consumed all the yardage with 17 running plays, almost all either dives through the line by Fischette or fullback Pat Ford or bootlegs by quarterback Pete Petrillo.

A lucky break set the stage for the only Redmen touchdown. Randy Robinson recovered a fumble by UConn's Frank Lombard on the play following a punt reception.

The recovery put the ball on the UMass 45 and a pass from Ronn Coltin to Bill Manning ate up 14 yards. Two gains by safetymen turned quarterback Mike McArdle provided another first down and set the stage for Cochran's blast through tackle, that gave Mass only its third TD in three games.

UConn fumbled again on the following series of downs and it would have given Mass another touchdown but for a perfect 38 yard pass from Coltin that Paul Vaccaro dropped in the end zone. John Jerszyk followed with a weak 17 yard punt that Bill DeYeso returned 58 yards to the Mass 25 yard stripe. Ten seconds later Lombard took a pitchout around his right side and went the rest of the way. Reserve quarterback Don Fredericks scored a two point conversion on a fake kick attempt for a 14-6 halftime Huskie lead.

Twice UMass had drives killed on fumbles in the second half. A short pass to Al Yesue and a 13 yard completion to Steve Chew, both from Coltin, had the Redmen moving toward midfield with two first downs, where he fumbled with Connecticut taking possession.

Fischette then crashed through the line and kept going for the score. Gregg Tachino's kick made the score 21-6. Petrillo capped a 23 yard drive following DiYeso's 57 yard punt return by plunging over from the one for the final TD of the day. Fredericks added another two point conversion.

UMass Judo Team Shows Potential

The UMass judo team demonstrated its tremendous potential in an informal meet with MIT Saturday. Score was not kept in the matches as the meet was primarily to give competitive experience to both teams. However, UMass showed that it definitely will be a strong contender for the New England Intercollegiate Championship.

The meet was held at the Northeast Judo Club in Somerville under the supervision of Mr. Harry Yanagi, the highest ranking black belt in New England. Mr. Yanagi also conducted a judo clinic which provided to the UMass team the best instruction available in New England.

The judo team will next meet Northeastern and Williams.

The third period touchdown scored by Phil Vandersea (No. 33, seen here crossing the goal line) came on a three yard slant off tackle. Phil netted 38 yards in Saturday's game to boost his season's rushing yardage total to 371 yards.

A hand-off to Dick Lewis (No. 23) on the 6 yard line resulted in the final touchdown of the game. The touchdown provided a fitting end to what was one of the finest games of the graduating Senior's UMass varsity career.

REDMEN RIP CRUSADERS

By MIKE GOULD

Keeping to their reputation as a second-half football team, the UMass Redmen scored thrice in the final thirty minutes to defeat Holy Cross 27-0 before 17,400 at Alumni Stadium.

Unable to exploit several scoring opportunities early in the game, the Redmen relied on an impenetrable defense and a well-balanced offense to break up a tight game in the second half.

The first half was a case of two rock-ribbed defensive units getting much the better of the opposition's offense. As is evidenced by the total of nine punts in the first half, neither team could move the ball to any substantial degree, and it was up to the UMass defensive team to score the game's first touchdown.

Saturday was Co-Captain Bernie Dallas' last home game, and the aggressive middle-linebacker made it one to remember. With the game still scoreless midway through the second period, Dick Qualey got in the way of a HC punt at the visitors' 26. The alert Dallas picked off the pigskin in mid-air and rambled to the end zone for a 6-0 UMass lead, the score at halftime.

Previously, Dave Kelley had made what was perhaps the most picturesque play of the season when he leaped over the shoulder of a potential blocker to block another HC punt at the Purple 10 yard line. Bob Detore fumbled Greg Landry's pitch-back on the very next play to ruin Kelley's great effort.

All season long the Redmen have responded to Coach Fusia's halftime speeches with exceptional second half play, and Saturday was no different.

With Ed Toner, Dallas, Kelley and Dave Giarla leading the charge, the Redmen repulsed the HC offensive at all points throughout the contest, and it was up to the offensive team to make their move in the second half.

After returning a third quarter HC punt to their own 39, the Redmen offensive finally began to move. With Landry throwing to Milt Morin three times for 36 yards and Dick Lewis running the counter play to near perfection, the Redmen marched the remaining 61 yards. Phil Vandersea scoring from the three. Morin's conversion made it 13-0, and the Redmen ball was beginning to roll.

The Crusaders made a strong bid to get back in the game at the outset of the fourth period. The Crusaders moved all the way to the UMass nine yard line before Rod Brooks and the middle of the Redmen line said no, stopping HC on a fourth and one situation.

Landry followed this exciting stand by his defensive cohorts with a beautiful 60 yard run around right end, and despite a clipping penalty, the Redmen were in business at the HC 48. It took UMass eight running plays to cover the remaining yards to the endzone, Landry sneaking in from the one to make it 20-0.

The Redmen got the ball back shortly thereafter when

Who turned off the lights?

Power failure causes confusion and many unusual incidents on campus

By JIM FOU DY, News Editor

To the glow of candles, flashlights, and matches the UMass campus attempted to conduct normal activity last night despite a power failure which covered New England, New York and parts of New Jersey and Pennsylvania. But normality was not the order of the evening.

Pouring down from the Orchard and Baker Hill, men students ran into the Quad and circled Crabtree and Knowlton Dorms. Moving in a long line through the Quad the raiders chanted for panties and were occasionally encouraged by some of the girls in the dorms. Doors were locked and the riot was unable to move inside.

While some girls poured water on the raiders, one student climbed up to the second floor window to get his souvenir of the blackout, kicking out a window in the process. Obscenities and the explosion of firecrackers filled the clear night air.

In the Student Union, people wandered through the lobby with matches while in the Hatch students kept the vigil with burning napkins.

Mr. Lilly, director of the Student Union, explained that auxiliary power was not on due to weak batteries in the system. Three weeks ago power was turned off in the Union for a short time and it was found that all the auxiliary power went into effect. As a result it was decided to turn the auxiliaries off so that the batteries would not wear down completely.

Last night when the failure occurred and the auxiliary system was engaged, the batteries were weak from disuse.

The Hatch area rang with shouts of "Call the Governor." to "Western Mass. has gone on strike" while guards were doubled on the art exhibit on the first floor.

Behind the main counter the cashiers were besieged with requests for matches and phone calls, but one young lady answered the phone with a cool: "Hello, Darkness".

Outside the Union a few students marched with signs proclaiming the end of the world while others shouted, "Let's get Emily Dickinson" when they heard that the Orchard was also in Darkness.

In the Orchard doors were locked in both men's and women's dorms but two students leaped off the second floor balcony of Webster to report the panty raid on Van Meter.

"They breeched the defenses at Van Meter" our leaping correspondent reported. "Some girl opened the door and it was all over... girls threw pants out all over the place."

Both North and South Dining Commons were the scene of panic and minor incidents.

In both cases some food was thrown, a few dishes broken and trays piled high, but besides this and some burning paper both Commons reported little damage or trouble. The dining commons crew were complimented on their work during the emergency.

At the Infirmary the power went off for about a minute before the emergency system took over. The emergency system adequately supplied the Infirmary but no injuries were reported during the blackout.

At Smith College power was returned shortly after UMass re-

The only question being asked at the Student Union Lobby Counter last night was "Who turned off the lights?" Students and Union personnel were forced to carry on by candlelight as a major power strike left the entire Northeast in total darkness.

North Eastern Power Failure Creates A 'Twilight Zone'

By ELLEN LEVINE,
Managing Editor

Who turned out the lights? was the question that echoed through Bartlett and the Student Union.

But the humor behind the inquiry disappeared as students realized that the blackout which occurred at 5:22 pm last night was not confined merely to the Student Union and lower part of the campus but covered Amherst, Northampton, the rest of Massachusetts and in fact the entire Northeastern section of the country.

While in Amherst students put in their Hatch time by candle light, New York and Boston commuters found themselves stuck in the subways and escaping through the trapdoors of elevators in the Empire State and Prudential buildings.

THE FIRST FEW MINUTES of the blackout caused no real panic on campus but at 5:55 the decision was made to close the Union to students.

Mr. Lilly, the supervisor on duty instructed students to leave the area, assuring them that, to his knowledge, there was no reason to be alarmed and that the power failure did encompass the entire northeastern area of the United States.

The confusion caused by the sudden blackout delayed communications and as a result the definite cause of the failure was not readily available.

However, it had been determined by local and national power companies that the cause was related to a break in a main control grid in the Niagara area.

The line between Niagara and Rochester is connected by a "trip" system to other power lines. When power gets low in the Niagara-Rochester area this "trip" arrangement shuts off the power in major lines throughout the northeastern area. The reason why power was low in the Niagara-Rochester area was not known.

THIS BREAK IN the border area accounted for loss of power to parts of Canada as well as the northeastern part of the United States.

Communications in the local area were switched to Conelrad alert.

New York stations, however, were able to transfer transmitting to Washington D.C. and continued coverage of the blackout.

In New York all civil defense personnel were asked to report and citizens were urged not to panic.

BY 6:10 P.M. reports from that area stated that certain areas of Brooklyn were receiving power. But, as late as 7:30 p.m. New York City and New Jersey were without power.

At about this time in the local area power was also restored. The Western Mass Electrical Co. explained that this was due to the ability of local power plants to use auxiliary power and split up the power load among them.

Local power companies stated that once power was returned it would in all probability remain on. Citizens were urged, however, to reduce the amount of power they were using and to stay off the roads as many street lights and traffic signals were not functioning.

NEW YORK MADE SIMILAR requests of the residents but added that water and sanitation facilities could not function and as a result citizens should refrain from using water.

Candles created a romantic atmosphere last night in the Hatch as students put in their Hatch hours by the light of the flickering flame due to the power failure which stopped all electricity for over an hour.

Trustees Meet

OK for Arts &amp; New S.U.

By PETER HENDRICKSON,
Editor-in-Chief

UMass trustees approved more than $40 million for new building at Amherst but tabled discussion of the $100 million Worcester Med School yesterday afternoon at the Statler Hilton Hotel in Boston.

The Massachusetts Taxpayer's Association filed suit yesterday to block the Med School in Worcester. The petition will ask that an injunction be issued to prevent trustees from taking further steps to implement the school.

Distinguished architects showed slides of their designs to trustees for approval of a Continuing Education Center (addition to the S.U.), Graduate Research Center, Fine Arts Center and additions of an East and West wing to Bartlett Hall.

Trustee Hugh Thompson reported to the board of a recent meeting with R.S.O. leaders and said he was "highly impressed with the quality of student leadership and general student achievement" at the University.

Trustee John Haigis conducted the presentations by the architects and said the unparalleled growth of the University demands top-flight buildings to serve the high-caliber student body as well as the state and the world.

THE CONTINUING EDUCATION Center to be located on the site of the Student Union parking lot was designed by architect Marcel Broyer and is slated for completion in 1968. It will serve students, faculty and guests with hotel-like dining and rooming facilities, meeting rooms, a ballroom and student offices.

The structure will be a narrow UN-type hotel atop a terraced plaza facing the pond. Underground facilities will primarily be for students and service entrances will be through a tunnel. The facing will be of precast stone and steps leading up to the hotel will be granite. The building will cost $7,780,000.

THE FINE ARTS CENTER will face the Continuing Education Center from the South end of the pond and will consist of two main elements a 700-seat theater and a 2300-seat concert hall. Kevin Roche of Saarinen Assoc. described the center as the "crossroads for traffic on campus to bring on awareness of its existence and the programs offered".

The $8,700,000 center will house music and art facilities with a walk-through art gallery at the intersection of major campus walk-ways.

THE GRADUATE RESEARCH Center designed by Nelson Aldrich will house a 16-story chemistry building, a library and computer center. It will cost $20,780,000. The building on the site of the Abbey will be completed three years after funds are appropriated.

Additions to Bartlett Hall on the east and west sides will house classrooms, offices, an outpatient clinic, psychology labs and supporting facilities. The $6,163,000 project designed by Paul Coletti is slated for completion in 1968. Construction will start next spring.

Also approved were funds for the construction of a pedestrian tunnel under Rt. 116 for students in the Southwest Complex.

MEDICAL DEAN Lamar Soutter told trustees of his plans for an integrated Veterinary, Dental and Medical centers at the Worcester site for a savings in construction and enhancement of a stronger faculty.

Trustees wanted more time to study Soutter's proposal and will hold a special meeting in the near future. Decisions are needed shortly so preliminary architect's plans can be drawn.

The Dean projected an opening date of Fall 1970 for a small class to enter the school. Faculty recruitment is underway but funds are needed.

Trustees Thompson, Haigis and Roland met with RSO leaders to discuss student problems two weeks ago and Thompson recommended an Ad Hoc Publications Committee be established for trustees to meet with students. Other board members thought the request should come from the students as not to seem to impose their will. Thompson said that he will meet again with students to maintain contact and keep abreast of student affairs.

"Let there be light!" This was the cry in the Hatch last night as this Hatch worker carried candles to the table to provide light during the power failure. Although the grills were cold and there were no hamburgers or french fries to be had, the Hatch was as crowded as usual. The photographers flashbulbs make the Hatch appear much lighter than it really was.

ter or sanitation facilities in their homes.

Reports from all the large cities struck by the failure emphasized that everything was under control and the populace was not panicked by the circumstances of the failure.

PROBLEMS DID OCCUR at airfields throughout the area as pilots found it impossible to land on the dark runways.

As a result, planes were being re-routed to Chicago, Philadelphia and places as far away from the stricken area as Bermuda. As of 7:15 the major airports were not functioning.

President Johnson issued a statement from the Texas White House that all federal government facilities would be made available to the involved areas to speed up work necessary to return full power to the entire 150,000 square miles north of Philadelphia to Ottawa that were stricken by the massive power failure.

THROUGHOUT THE FAILURE, rumors as to the cause spread. Federal officials were checking carefully reports that espionage was behind the blackout. However, it was asserted that the cause was entirely mechanical.

Late reports from areas still in darkness assured residents that power would be returned as soon as possible.

It has been estimated that some 30 million people were affected by the massive power failure.

Faculty Senate Committee

Open Sessions Proposals Debated

By RICHARD DANCA,
Day Editor

The Faculty Senate Rules Committee met in open session yesterday afternoon in the SBA building to discuss two proposals which would allow students to attend a n d speak at Faculty Senate meetings.

Following the hour a n d 20 minute open meeting the committee met in executive session to decide upon a proposal to be presented to the Faculty Senate at its next meeting Nov. 18.

At this meeting Faculty Senators will decide whether or not to allow students to attend future Faculty Senate meetings.

THE TWO PROPOSALS discussed at the open hearing differ only in the number of students which would be allowed to attend. Both would also allow a Collegian reporter to cover the meeting.

The original proposal, made by Dean of Students William Field would allow all 24 students now members of Faculty Senate Student Affairs sub-committees to attend the meetings.

THE SECOND PROPOSAL, made by Student Senate Pres. Richard Dacey, would cut the number of students to four, the students now on the Student Affairs Committee, and eliminate the members of the sub-committees. There are also five faculty members on this committee.

Dacey said that if a reciprocal agreement with the Faculty Senate allowed an equal number of faculty to attend Student Senate meetings, a similar expediency would exist if only four were allowed to attend a n d speak.

There were two basic arguments offered by representatives of the Student Senate and the Dean of Students. One was that there needed to be communication between students and the Faculty Senate because many of the Faculty Senate's decisions affect the entire University.

THE OTHER ARGUMENT held that, for the same reasons, there should be more inter-Senate cooperation and liaison and that students at the Faculty Senate meetings would be implemented this.

Dacey used the controversy over the Fine Arts Committee to illustrate his argument. He said that if there had been faculty-student cooperation on this issue, the Student Senate would not have had to spend nine months on a report which was almost identical to the Faculty Senate report.

ONE SOLUTION offered to counter this was a more publicized "segregated" agenda which would only allow students at meetings which directly concerned the entire University.

Supporters suggested that this so-called segregation would most likely be voluntary.

There was some discussion over Collegian coverage of the meetings, but both proposals in favor of student attendance allowed for the presence of what Dean Field called a "responsible member of the press", most likely the editor-in-chief.

THE COMMITTEE also discussed whether editorializing as well as news could be allowed by having a Collegian reporter at the meeting.

ANOTHER DISADVANTAGE offered by solutions to the "segregation" problem, according to the Rules Committee, was that students at the meetings might force the Faculty Senate into using executive sessions more than it does now or would want to.

Armand DeGrenier, RSO business manager, called for less emphasis on communication as an argument and a stress on the need for "interaction" between students and faculty "before, during and after" potentially controversial topics which concern the entire University.

Faculty Sen. Severt J. Save-reid, speech professor, argued against the communications argument by saying that even though the Faculty senate is sometimes slow to report its decisions, the information is "wide-spread."

The bill which will be brought before the Faculty Senate will be mainly concerned with whether or not students will be admitted, not originally with how many students will be admitted.

UMass Religious Leaders Consider Ecumenical Council

By PAM METAXAS,
Staff Reporter

In a discussion ranging from ancient Church history to the modern problem of birth control, Rev. John L. Scott, the University's Protestant chaplain, and Rev. Charles Thoman S. J. of the Newman Center considered aspects of the Ecumenical Council and its place in the modern world.

Speaking at Eugene Field, Rev. Scott said that the 2nd Vatican Council was due to the Pontifical call for "reopening" of the Vatican. The Pope's aim was and is "to bring together the bishops of the Roman Catholic Church at one time and place," he said.

This would serve the dual purpose of binding the Catholic Church more strongly together and working toward the unity of the Church with non-Catholic sects. Rev. Scott added that Pope John's original idea when he set up the Ecumenical Council was to explore into the "image" problem that the church had developed.

The Pope felt that the Church was still living under antiquated 400 year old rules and wanted "to modernize things," Rev. Scott commented and he feels that if the Church was successful in modernizing itself, it would live up to the ideal of "Christian Church."

The Rev. listed several Doctrines that the Council has examined and acted upon:

- Doctrine of Liturgy
- Doctrine of Nature of Church
- Doctrine on the Constitution of Mass Communication
- Doctrine on Humanism
- Doctrine on Collegiality

He emphasized that the last one has developed into two further decrees that will have relevance in the future:

- 1) A synod of Bishops will be set up to meet in Rome periodically to advise the Pope and to take care of modern Church problems. This will mean that the Church will not have to wait another 200 years for a Council meeting.

2) The setting up with legislation of National Conference of Bishops. The implications of this are that future rules won't only come from Rome but will be a combination of rules set up by bishops all over the world.

The other problems that are still to be acted on are: missionary work, Christian education, religious liberty and the Church and the modern world.

The Rev. Father Thoman pointed out that the old order of the Church has been taken for granted and there is a definite need for a new order.

He explained the "theological basis for this is that the conservatives of the church were brought up in the old tradition." Now, however, the idea of "religious liberty" is gaining ground.

He added that years ago the "idea of a person selecting his religion was outlandish."

He also said that the continuing question of birth control methods is still considered unsolved by the church. He believes that it is a "matter of your personal conscience in relation to the community."

In conclusion both agreed that although the Council still has much work to be done, it has accomplished a good deal in the passing of vital church and world questions and the subsequent action upon them.

U.S. Army Band will perform Wednesday night, Nov. 17.

Poems New and Selected

UM Press Begins Year's Publishing

The UM Press begins its second year with the publication this week of "Come Out Into The Sun: Poems New and Selected" by Amherst poet Robert Francis.

The collection of poems from 29 years of Francis' writing career is his sixth volume of poetry.

"Come Out Into The Sun" begins with 41 new poems, including several with strong political content. These are followed by selections from "The Orb Weaver" (Wesleyan, 1960). The final section contains poems from his early, out-of-print books: "The Sound I Listened For" (1944), "Valhalla and Other Poems" (1938), and "Stand With Me Here" (1936).

Francis, who has lived in Amherst since 1926, has taught English and creative writing and lectured widely. He was educated at Harvard University, and among other honors, was Phi Beta Kappa poet at Tufts University in 1935 and at Harvard in 1960. During 1957-58 he

ROTC to Sponsor U.S. Army Band

The U.S. Army Band will present a concert in the Curry Hicks Cage on Wednesday night, Nov. 17, at 8:15. Sponsored by the UMass Army ROTC Detachment, the concert will be open to the public without charge.

Organized in 1922 by Gen. John (Black Jack) Pershing, the Army Band boasts 110 of the finest musicians and is conducted by Lt. Col. Samuel Laboda.

The unit has served as the official band for most of the diplomatic functions in Washington, D.C. Having led every inaugural parade since President Coolidge, the band has played for the funeral processions of Presidents

Harding, Taft, Roosevelt and Kennedy.

Each year the band performs throughout the United States, including Carnegie Hall, the Ed Sullivan Show and for many local civic functions.

Renowned the world over for its sparkling renditions of marches and German folk music, the band's repertoire ranges from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, to Chuck Berry's "Roll Over Beethoven".

Of special interest is the "Her-ald Trumpets" section which contributes a certain zest to the concert. Whatever the individual's tastes in music, the band's well-rounded program of music at UMass promises to offer an enjoyable evening of entertainment.

AF Commissions

There is an opportunity to attain an Air Force commission after four semesters and attendance at a six-week field training camp. This program is designed for students who have two years remaining at the University, at the graduate or undergraduate level.

The student must first be interviewed by the Professor of Air Science, Lt. Colonel Roy D. Simmons, Jr., Dickinson Hall, telephone ext. 2437.

Students who have 2-years remaining as of Feb 66 should be interviewed immediately; those who have 2-years remaining as of Sep 66 should be interviewed prior to March 66.

Index Speaks

All organizations must return, to the Index mail box, no. 103, all activity questionnaires by Friday, November 12, 1965. If, for any reason you did not receive a form they are now available in the Index office in the Student Union.

All organizations submitting these forms will be considered for coverage in the 1966 Index; return of the forms does not, however, guarantee that that organization will receive space in the publication. Any organization which does not return a questionnaire by the specified date will be given absolutely no consideration for this year's yearbook.

A Taste of 1865

Well, the power went out last night. For several hours the Northeastern United States had a taste of the old-fashioned. Millions of people were temporarily indoctrinated into a life devoid of electricity. Housewives could not cook dinner on their electric stoves and children had to miss their favorite evening cartoon shows.

Yet, less than a century ago, conveniences which we enjoy today due to the miracles of electrical powers were unheard of. Gaslight was the way of the times and vast communications systems were dependent upon slower and less effective means. Thus, the extent to which modern electrical power has become a binding force of this world is more than evident. By means of comparison we have seen that our society is virtually paralyzed without it.

But, then, how much does it take to put us in such a state of helplessness? In contrast to the widespread effect caused by it, one break in a communications line does not seem crucial. Yet a single break such as this is enough to cause grief for a major section of the country.

All of us wish that last night was only a bad dream. But, the nightmare did take place and we must face reality. We discovered the importance of what we have all our lives taken for granted. We must have confidence that sensibility and responsibility will keep these systems firm and intact.

Better Relations

Faculty-student relations have not always been congenial. The recent controversy over the Fine Arts Council was proof of that.

But a great step forward may soon be taken. There is a bill about to be brought before the Faculty Senate which would allow students to attend Faculty Senate meetings.

Much of the trouble between faculty and students is due to the lack of communication between the two. Because the Faculty Senate does not allow students to attend its sessions, it is impossible for the Student Senate to know exactly what the faculty is planning. Hence, much valuable time has been wasted. For example, the Student Senate took nine months to compile a Fine Arts Council report that was almost identical to one compiled by the Faculty Senate.

Another problem seems to be in deciding how many students should be allowed at the Faculty Senate meetings. But this is yet another controversy to be ironed out in the near future. The important thing is that the Faculty is at last beginning to realize that the power and influence it has in the University is too great to be exerted without consulting the students.

To the Editor:

Look! Out on the football field, in the blue suit! It's the opponent! It's our mascot! No, it's only a campus policeman. Yes, a campus policeman who came to the stadium on another assignment with powers far beyond that of mortal students, and who, hidden behind the badge of our University, fights an endless battle for suspensions, violations, and parking tickets — in the American way.

It is very American for an officer to bolt onto the football field when a small quarrel breaks out? Perhaps he wanted to arrest the offenders, or suspend them for inciting a riot. It is his duty though to keep order in the stands. Let the referees keep order on the field.

Boys In The Dark

Emergency radio stations filled the air while the regular ones were unable to continue transmission . . .

From Toronto to New York City, almost 150,000 sq. m. went into darkness, while an unprecedented power failure menaced the North-Eastern States.

The White House, The Pentagon, The S.A.C. and D.E.W. Headquarters went into the state of Alert: The cause of the power failure UNKNOWN.

Approximately 6:30 p.m. and in Rochester, N.Y. and other places looting was reported.

At UMASS, around the girls dorms hell was raised: Panty-Raid!!

Honestly now fellows (Whoever you were), if you don't want to pray from the fear of the unknown; if you don't care to listen to further news from the transistor radios; why didn't you just avoid to confirm once more the derogatory slogan: "In cases where responsibility is demanded, two groups of people act identically in being irresponsible: delinquents and College students."

LETTERS

Our Error

To the Editor:

Last Friday you printed a letter of mine catchingly entitled "Pacifists, Warmongers and Invaders." I am to understand that it is a policy with the Collegian to edit letters only for wordiness, grammar, etc., and in no way whatsoever alter the intended meaning. Yet several important points I intended to put across were grossly misunderstood by you and consequently were omitted and misinterpreted. Therefore I would like to have those errors corrected to what was either originally stated or meant, and what should correctly read as follows:

I do not deny that there are pacifists protesting the war. Likewise, I do not deny the existence of "warmongers" supporting American policy. Yet this does not give one any right to correctly believe that all those supporting the war are "warmongers," or that those or even most protesting the war are pacifists.

If these omissions and misinterpretations were a mistake, as I obviously hope and assume they were, I then acknowledge them as such, and thank you for printing the corrections.

Our Generation

By Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

Turbulent and uncertain are the times and anxious and disturbed the souls and minds of this generation, which is desperately striving to realize itself amidst the ugly ruins that our fathers have thrown in front of us.

And this era, of cybernetics and technological miracles, has done at least one thing: it hung overhead a deadly "nuclear" mushroom, while you and I fight once more in keeping up with the History of "homo sapiens," the endless battle that, in my opinion, the first "pethecanthropus erectus" put aptly in saying: "who am I?"

* * * * *

The rigid boundaries of the Biblical "Babylonia" have been shattered. Twentieth century has seen the World's people come together again, both in friendly terms and in wartime.

And much that we know of the other's existence, once we faced him, "the stranger," we were puzzled. Anthropologists knew it all along, and so did the politicians and the diplomats. But the great lay public, only recently acquired first hand experience, thanks to the rapid progress in interglobal communications.

* * * * *

Sensitively the soul of the worshipper embraces fondly the quiet remnants of civilizations and peoples past, in Rome and Athens. Overwhelmed, fascinated the wonderer runs an eager eye, with a pricked curiosity over the miracles of computers and machinery that proudly the new world offers to its visitors.

And yet, though the Grecian chariot has been replaced by the swift Mustangs, and the time-old abacus gave in to the sophisticated electronic computer, the people remain the same that they always were: same concerns, loves, jealousies, aspirations; problems that always were the sine qua non quality of the human predicament.

Unfortunately, Man seems to proceed even on the same assumptions: the preconceived notions, the stereotypes. One comes to the U.S. expecting to see the "Ugly American" pacing up and down the wide avenues of this country; or roams through Athens and Rome, with scrutiny measuring the natives trying in vain to find the Senecas and the Caesars, the Platos and the Homers.

I was born and raised in the old continent, and I spent five years in this country. I know one thing, rather well: whether in the streets of America, or the alleys of Europe, you are apt to meet only people: bad and good, sophisticated and simple, compassionate and unconcerned. Just people, who are what they are because they individually and deliberately choose to be so, and not because they are Americans, or Europeans.

The availability of means is disproportionately distributed. But I am only referring to material means. The humanity that lays interwoven with each individual is more or less the same, despite color, and nationality. The problems that face us all, the problems imbedded in the human predicament, are the same.

Our generation is faced with problems; they may not be harder, or much different than those of previous ones. And yet since we face them for the first time, to us they are unique. History ironically never made itself felt as an effective teacher. But today we possess the means to come in close contact, to exchange ideas and opinions on a world wide basis.

At UMass, in Sorbonne, at Nairobi, in Tokyo, young minds are striving to come in grips with their own existence, to build a better tomorrow. Why don't we join hands and work side by side?

Letters To The Editor

A Posy for Rosie

To the Editor:

In answer to your inquiry of last Friday, I believe that I have the solution to the identity of Rose La Bella. If I am not mistaken, she is the heroine of a Broadway musical produced about ten to twelve years ago entitled The Most Happy Fella. I cannot remember very much about the play other than the name of the hero—Tony Esposito, a grape farmer from California.

Many Collegian readers may recognize the musicale by two of the songs—"Joey", and "Standing on the Corner Watching all the Girls Go By."

(By the author of "Rally Round the Flag, Boys!" "Dobie Gillis," etc.)

YOU, TOO, CAN BE INFERIOR

The second gravest problem confronting college students today is inferiority feelings. (The first gravest problem is, of course, the recent outbreak of moulting among sorority house canaries.) Let us today look into the causes of inferiority feelings and their possible cures.

Psychologists divide inferiority feelings into three principal categories:

1. Physical inferiority.
2. Mental inferiority.
3. Financial inferiority.

(A few say there is also a fourth category: ichthyological inferiority—a feeling that other people have prettier fish—but I believe this is common only along the coasts and in the Great Lakes area.)

Let us start with the feeling of physical inferiority, perhaps the easiest to understand. Naturally we are inclined to feel inferior to the brawny football captain or the beautiful homecoming queen. But we should not. Look at all the people, neither brawny nor beautiful, who have made their marks in the world. Look at Napoleon. Look at Socrates. Look at Caesar. Look at Lassie.

What I mean is you can't always tell what's inside a package by looking at the outside. (Sometimes, of course, you can. Take Personna Stainless Steel Blades, for example. Just one glance at that jolly blue and white package—so bright and pert, so neat but not gaudy—and you know it has to contain blades of absolute perfection. And you are right! Personna gives you so many shaves per blade it takes a math major to count them. And they are luxury shaves—smoother, comfortabler, kinder to the kisser. Moreover, Personna comes both in Double Edge and Injector style. And as if this weren't enough, Personna is now offering you a chance to grab a fistful of $100 bills from a $100,000 bowl! The Personna Stainless Steel Sweepstakes is off and running, and you're all eligible to enter. Visit your friendly Personna dealer today to get details and an entry blank.)

"...when it came to tying granny knots."

But I digress. Let us turn now to the second category—mental inferiority. A lot of people think they are dumber than other people. This is not so. It must be remembered that there are different kinds of intelligence. Take, for instance, the classic case of the Sigafos brothers, Claude and Sturbridge, students at a prominent Western university (Dartmouth). It was always assumed that Claude was the more intelligent just because he knew more than Sturbridge about the arts, the sciences, the social sciences, the humanities, and like that. Sturbridge, on the other hand, was ten times smarter than Claude when it came to tying granny knots. But no matter; everybody looked down on "Stupid Sturbridge," as they called him, and looked up to "Clever Claude," as they called him. But who do you think turned out to be the smart one when their granny almost got loose and ran away? You guessed it—good old Stupid Sturbridge.

We arrive now at the final category, financial inferiority. One way to deal with this condition is to increase your income. You can, for example, become a fence. Or you can pose for a life class, if your college is well heated.

But a better way to handle financial inferiority is to accept it philosophically. Look on the bright side of poverty. True, others may have more money than you have, but look at all the things you have that they don't—debts, for instance, and hunger cramps.

Always remember, dear friends, that poverty is no disgrace. It is an error, but it is no disgrace.

Rich or poor, you can all afford luxury shaving—with Personna's Stainless Steel Blades and Personna's partner in shaving comfort, Burma Share! It soaks rings around any other lather and it's available in regular or menthol.

FROSH HARRIERS WIN NEW ENGLANDS; VARSITY 11th

The Freshmen Cross Country Team ripped past 22 other Frosh squads at Franklin Park, Boston, Monday to win the New England title.

Paul Hoss of Rockland was the individual winner of the meet leading teammate Steve Oblatz to the wire by 5 seconds. It was the first meet Hoss had won all year; he had finished second to Oblatz in all the team's dual meets. Steve, who appeared tight toward the end of the race, said that he'd never mind finishing second as long as it was Paul ahead of him.

Other finishers for UMass, who won with a record low score of 32, were Charlie Lang in 8th place, Ron Kay in 9th, Marc Gellinas in 12th, Bob Corrier in 16th, and Jeff McCormick in 18th. The next closest team to the Redmen was Brown with 94 points.

Coach Justin Cobb was very pleased with the team's overwhelming victory and is looking forward to the IC4A's when the frosh will meet some of the track powerhouses of the nation. The meet will be held next Monday at Van Courtland Park in New York City, and includes such teams as Villanova, Georgetown, Notre Dame, and Western Michigan.

The varsity cross country team placed a dismal 11th in the New England Championships at Boston Monday. It was the first time the team had finished worse than 5th since 1955, when Coach Footrick took over the coaching reins.

Finishing well for the Redmen were Mike Sheeley in 32nd place, and John Andersen in 41st place. These 2 juniors have been running consistently well all season. Other finishers for the Redmen were Sophs Pete Saunders and Jeff Lunn, and junior Bill Thomas. They finished in the 70's. Co-capt. Terry Carpenter pulled up with a lame foot and hobbled to 124th place.

Injuries took the toll on this year's team. Senior Carl Lopes was the first victim, struck with a knee injury early in the season. Co-capt. Steve St. Clair ran the last few meets with a strept throat that was discovered only last week. He was unable to compete in the New Englands. Carpenter's injury was the second of the season for him. These were three of the team's top five men.

The team will finish out the season with a dual meet at New Hampshire this Saturday.

CO-CAPTAIN BERNIE DALLAS

Women's Swim Team Second in First Test

After the first four hours of practice this season, the unprepared but determined UMass Women's Swimming Team placed second in a five-college invitational meet held at Green Mountain College, Poultny, Vt. on Sunday, Nov. 7.

The eight participating members, Sandra Whitehead, Annette Robishaud, Cathy Sacuto, Ellen Megill, Kathy Grant, Mary Grant, "Hank" Coupee, and Frances Clines, coached by Miss Barbara Reid, took 49 points to 79 for Green Mountain, 36 for Middlebury, 33 for Plattsburg State, and 11 for the University of Vermont.

First places were taken by Whitehead in 50-yd. free & Robishaud in 100-yd. breaststroke. Both relay teams placed second; Megill, Whitehead, Clines and Robishaud swimming 200 medley; M. Grant, Megill, Coupee, and Robishaud in 200 free. Coupee hit second in 25 butterfly and third in 50 fly. Megill and Whitehead scored seconds in the 100 medley and 100 free respectively.

The team is still accepting new members, particularly divers. Practices and tryouts are held on Wednesdays and Fridays, 5:15-6:15 in WoPe pool.

YI's to Protest

On Veterans Day, Nov. 11, Young Independents of UM, a chapter member of S.D.S. will co-sponsor with New England C.N.V.A. (Committee for Non-violent Action) a demonstration protesting against the U.S. role in the war in Vietnam.

According to C.N.V.A. and Young Independents, "the vigil will be a quiet one, in keeping with a sense of mourning for those who have been killed in the war, in a spirit of dignity and in appeal to the hearts and conscience of all those who are engaged in waging or supporting the war in Vietnam."

Signs will be carried calling for a halt to the bombings and an end to conflict in Vietnam.

"Any signs will be aimed at genuine communication with men at the base and their families, and with community residents. Signs which advocate or support violence and warfare (on either side), or which degrade any of the human beings involved—be they Vietnamese, Americans, or demonstrators, are unsuitable," the sponsors stated.

Pres. Sidney Finehrsh of Young Independents stated that anyone who is interested in participating in this vigil on Veterans Day should attend the Young Independents meeting on Wed., Nov. 10, at 6:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union. Arrangements will be made for transportation, and instructions will be given for the participants at this meeting.

Tangerine Bowl Anyone?

The following teams are being considered for participation in this year's Tangerine Bowl: Springfield (8-0), UMass (6-2), East Carolina (6-1), Maine (8-0), Central Connecticut (7-0), Ithaca (6-0), Morgan State (6-0), East Stroudsburg (8-0).

All teams said at the beginning of the season that they were interested in post season games.

East Carolina was the team that beat UMass 14-13 last year. Maine will just about be a shoo in if they beat Tampa this week. However the selection committee has stated that it is not necessary to pick one team from the North and one team from the South.

How about a rematch of the season's opener: UMass-Maine?

COURTESY BEATS KAPPA SIG FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

by Dave Jarnes
Amazing! Astounding! Astonishing. Unbelievable! These are the adjectives which can only partially describe the magnitude of the Courtesy Taxi's incredible 9-6 upset of defending champion Kappa Sig.

Not enough can be said in behalf of the Taxi's opportunistic defense which provided the Taxi's with its 2-0 halftime lead when Brennan tagged KS' Ed Godak in the end zone for a safety.

Two first half interceptions in the end zone saved two potential KS touchdowns and enabled the Taxi's to stay in the game. Another interception at the end of the game by Dick Costello protected the Taxi's final margin of victory. Heavily outweighed per man, the champions had surprising success at breaking through the vaunted KS blocking duo of Caisse and Steffani to hit Godak for losses or block his passes.

The Taxi's used an unprecedented offensive maneuver which virtually negated the fierce KS pass rush. Quarterback Bill Klaes put all five of his men on the line with no blockers. As the KS men came charging in Klaes would simply lob a pass into the vacated middle area to one of his receivers while four blockers were downfield ready to clear the path. Klaes continually used this unusual formation in completing 14 of 23 passes.

Courtesy held its 2-0 lead until Godak hit Bill Cleary with a long bomb to give KS a 6-2 lead with six minutes left. But the Taxi's, who have specialized in Merriwell finishes in all three shocking upsets of the Hardnoses, the Untouchables, and KS, came right back on a thirty yard scoring strike from Klaes to Costello. The conversion to Don Tuder gave the Taxi's their final point. With about a minute left and KS driving Costello foiled Kappa Sig's bid for a second straight championship by intercepting a pass.

The Taxi's will play the UNH champs Friday night at Durham.

The annual all-star game will be played this Thursday, Veteran's Day, at 2:00 at Alumni Stadium. With the top dormitory and fraternity stars performing, the game should be an interesting offensive show.

JOHN CUNNINGHAM, EDITOR

Qualey, Landry "M" Club Winners

Greg Landry, the 6'3" sophomore quarterback who everyone is talking about has won his fifth Varsity "M" Club award of the season.

Each week an offensive and defensive star is chosen by the members of the press. The winner is given a certificate and at the end of the season the person with the most certificates receives a trophy.

Landry completed nine of 13 passes for 115 yards and ran 62 yards to set up a UMass touchdown.

The winner of the defensive award is tackle Dick Qualey. Aside from blocking the punt that set Bernie Dallas up for the first Redman TD, Qualey was instrumental in anchoring the defensive line which held Holy Cross to 73 yards on the ground.

Landry will automatically win the trophy now that he has the five weekly awards. On defense a battle still looms between Dallas and tackle Ed Toner. Dallas has won three awards and Toner two.

Landry was selected as ECAC sophomore-of-the-week.

Defensive tackle, Dick Qualey, was cited by the Varsity "M" Club as outstanding defensive player against Holy Cross.

Fusia Lauds Redmen; Prep For Wildcats

By Howie Davis

The University of Massachusetts was cited as one of eight teams under consideration for a trip to the Tangerine Bowl. The source said that all the teams stated earlier in the season that they would be interested in post-season competition.

Head Coach Vic Fusia said that the word was never released from his offices and he feels that any statement he has issued from his department would be the most valid.

At the present moment a trip to Florida is the furthest thing from Fusia's mind. He is prepping his team for this week's encounter with the University of New Hampshire at Durham.

According to Fusia, last week's victory over Holy Cross was the best UM game of the season.

Particularly pleasing to the Redmen mentor was the play of his defensive unit.

"All eleven men on the defensive unit played a good ball game", said Fusia, "They actually won the game for us."

The Redmen are in good shape physically, all of their injuries coming early in the season.

The offensive line provided the best, crisp blocking the backs have received thus far this season.

When asked if he thought his charges would be mentally prepared for this week's contest Fusia said,

"A good team has pride and will be up for any game. This week's game is a game of pride."

This is the most praise Fusia has extended the UMass team, as an entire unit, all season.

UM quarterback has won the Sophomore-of-the-Week awards. The Yankee Conference extended the honor and the ECAC did the same.

Milt Morin was mentioned by the Conference for his offensive contributions as was Dick Qualey on defense.

The latest Yan-Con statistics show Landry on top of the quarterbacks with a .636 percentage. The Nashua, N.H., native has passed for 1231 yards and seven touchdowns.

Bob Meers and Milt Morin lead the pass receivers with 30 and 27 passes caught respectively. Morin leads in yards for receptions with 543, and TD passes caught with four.

Landry and Phil Vandersea, UM fullback, are second and third in rushing. Halfback Don Durkin is eighth and Bob Detore is twelfth.

Terry Swanson, UM punter, is second in the Conference with a 37.6 average.

The Redmen have three men in the top five scorers. Morin is second with 49 points, Landry is third with 42 and Vandersea fifth with 30.

Violence Mars Protest; U. S. Policy Denounced

By Jane Roland
Staff Reporter

Over 100 demonstrators participated in a non-violent peace vigil punctuated by scuffles and threats of violence outside the entrance to Fort Devens Army Base in Ayer, Mass.

The vigil was sponsored by UM Young Independents, and the Committee for Non-Violent Action (CNVC) with students from Harvard, Clark, and UConn.

The demonstration was meant to be a quiet one in keeping with the deep sense of respect and gratitude for the many Americans, living and dead, who have fought in America's wars, according to Sid Finehirsch, president of YI.

A man who said he was a Polish freedom fighter burned a replica of the Russian flag in front of the demonstrators and began a counter-demonstration saying, "Down with the American - born Communist stooges. God bless America. Long live America."

SIGNS carried by the demonstrators asked for a re-evaluation of American foreign policy while attempting to communicate with townspeople and soldiers at the base. Entry to the base was denied by the commanding officer who said he would respect their right to demonstrate outside the base but would not allow them to enter.

Some signs read: "End the war in Viet Nam," "Defend freedom with non-violent action," "Does war lead to peace," "Is conscience a crime" and "End the cruel war now."

Military intelligence officers arrested a soldier in civilian clothes when he joined anti-administration demonstrations. An unidentified man driving a car with New Hampshire plates stopped across the street, got out and walked over to the picket line and started grabbing signs. He threw more than 12 over the fence before military policemen came outside and grabbed him. They released him and he drove away.

UMASS sophomore Jane Roland said more than 100 hecklers taunted the demonstrators with catcalls and destroyed many of the placards. She said, "One man roughly grabbed a fellow student and released him only after others shouted at him to behave himself."

"Why don't you cut your hair and shave?" was the question of the day according to Jane who said it was even asked of those who were clean-shaven. Pres. Finehirsch said, "In face of repeated harassment and spectator heckling, Young Independents showed great self-discipline."

The vigil was, in part, a mourning for Norman Morrison and Roger LaPorte, two men who recently immolated themselves to protest American foreign policy.

According to CNVA, many Americans were shocked at this action. Young Independents asked, "Are Americans as shocked at the slaughter and suffering of hundreds, thousands of Vietnamese men, women and children every day the war continues?"

Barry Goldwater said today suicide protests over U.S. involvement in Viet Nam do not prove anything. As Goldwater said at Yale, "Who can understand a suicide? The guy is nuts to begin with. It just depends then on how he does it. I think it is ugly, useless and doesn't prove anything."

In other Veteran's Day news:

- Downtown Boston and Back Bay streets were packed by a parade of 17,000 with an estimated 300,000 onlookers. The parade was led by wounded veterans of the Far East conflict.

- In Providence, R.I., the Armistice Day parade was picketed for a short time by 25 members of Brown University's chapter of the Student peace Union. They were jeered and heckled and soon left. Later that afternoon 200 college students staged a counter march up to the state house and Gov. John Chafee thanked them for support of American troops.

- At Arlington National Cemetery in Washington, Vice President Humphrey placed a wreath at the tomb of the un-

Students Arrive To Swap Ideas

Representatives of college student unions from every New England state will meet at UM this week for a three-day conference.

More than 100 student and staff members representing 25 college union organizations will attend the 17th Annual Region 1 Conference of the International Association of College Unions, to be held in the Student Union Nov. 12 - 14.

Representatives will attend the weekend of seminars and workshops for discussion and development of new ideas in cultural, social, recreational and educational programs provided by college student unions.

Topics discussed by the students and their advisers will cover student interaction and communication, programming dilemmas, student union administration, and the role of the student union in the campus community.

Registration will be late Friday afternoon, Nov. 12. Dr. William F. Field, dean of students, will welcome the group to the university, after which A.L. Ellingson, director of the student union at the University of Oregon and past president of the IACU, will deliver the keynote address.

Workshops and seminars will be held Friday evening and all day Saturday. UM student personnel staff members will serve as discussion leaders for each general workshop topic.

A business meeting and tours of the UM campus are on tap for Saturday afternoon. Speaker at the banquet Saturday evening will be Dr. Dean A. Allen, chief psychologist of the UMass Health Service. Entertainment Saturday night will be provided by Josh White, Jr., and the Carl Boxer Trio, who will perform in the Student Union ballroom. Their appearance is being sponsored by Leonard Rosenfeld.

A continental breakfast Sunday morning, and distribution of the reports of the various seminars and workshops will conclude the conference.

Jones Defends Yahoo As Investigation Begins

By Dan Glosband
Senior Reporter

Yahoo, Yahoo, who's got the Yahoo? As of Monday evening a faculty-student Yahoo Investigating Committee had responsibility for the propagation of UM's controversial humor magazine.

Student Senate Pres. Dick Dacey provided the openers for the public hearing with a statement questioning the applicability of the present constitution, and the functioning of the current Editorial Board under that constitution. He stressed that any criticism must fall on structural issues, for, oral criticism can't help but impinge on censorship.

According to RSO Business Manager Armand H. DeGrenier, the most recent constitution is dated Mar. 1961—a product of the last Yahoo investigation.

Called as a witness, Dean William F. Field registered no opposition to a humor magazine as such, but pointed to a number of criticisms of the present publication. Field made the initial recommendation to place the funds in escrow this fall. His stimulus for such action lay in a number of protest letters received from parents of university students, offensive to the magazine's content.

"There must be some way in which a humor magazine can be a critique of the University and reflect the good humor of other campuses," said Field. He indicated that student tax-supported humor magazines have been on the decline in the country.

Prof. Della Grotte, a committee member, questioned the right of a Dean of Students to hold funds of a student tax-supported, student run publication. He favored final control resting in the student run publication. He facilitation of any fund holding or investigating action.

Yahoo Editor Roger Jones took his turn on the witness stand, and noted, that contrary to

Ticket Sales Soar As Concert Nears

With 3663 tickets sold and the rest expected to go Monday the UMass campus prepares for the Nov. 23 Beach Boy's concert for the benefit of the J.F.K. Memorial Library Fund.

"We were very pleased to break the all time UMass ticket sales record," said ticket committee chairman Sue Morse. "The enthusiasm of ticket buyers made our job much easier."

She stressed the fact that on Monday the remaining 800 tickets will be sold strictly on a first come, first served basis.

Invited guests to the concert include Senators Robert and Edward Kennedy, Mrs. Jacquelyn Kennedy, and President Lederle.

Also receiving invitations are John K. Galbraith, head of the Memorial Library Fund Committee in Cambridge and former Massachusetts Senator Benjamin Smith who was the late president's roommate at Harvard.

In a statement on the concert, class president Bob Keough said "we hope that the appearance of the Beach Boys will begin a new era in campus entertainment at UMass—first class entertainment for a first class university."

They also cite the reports in favor of the Amherst site made by the consulting firm of Booz, Allen & Hamilton as well as those of various medical school deans.

The Booz, Allen & Hamilton report cost approximately $30,000 according to the Taxpayers Committee. Worcester was the fourth-ranked of five sites in this report.

The Committee also asks the court to "permanently enjoin the unlawful exercise of their (the trustees') purported power in attempting to locate the school in Worcester."

PHILOSOPHY PROFESSOR Albert E. Goss, chairman of the Citizens Committee on the Medical School Site in Amherst says: "The trustees have unlimited power. They are expected to act responsibly, and in ignoring consultants' and experts' advice, they do not do so."

Kennedy Aide Speaks

By Cliff Snickers
Staff Reporter

Kenneth O'Donnell, former aide to late President John F. Kennedy, spoke Tuesday night at 8 p.m. in the Commonwealth room, sponsored by Young Democrats. O'Donnell's talk presented the highlights of Kennedy's trip from political obscurity to the White House, and his accomplishments as President.

O'Donnell pointed out that even as late as 1959, Kennedy was not extremely well known by the people whose votes he was seeking in the primaries.

Coming within inches of winning the Vice Presidential nomination in Chicago in '56, at a convention he had attended simply as a member of the Mass. delegation, Kennedy saw that the road to the White House was through the people.

In '57 he began his campaign by being re-elected to the Senate. In '59 he criss-crossed the country, speaking to the people.

The polls began coming in. Kennedy was winning in the primaries. Even in West Virginia, where the issues of religion and civil rights waxed very strong, Kennedy won. He went on to win the nomination and the election. Yet with all this behind him, O'Donnell explained, "his real problems were still to come."

When Kennedy took office, the nation was in a state of economic uneasiness, brought on by the recessions of '54, '56, and '58. In 1959, seven per cent of the labor force was unemployed.

Abroad, there had been a significant "shift in the weight of geography." More than a dozen new nations arose in Africa, led by young men.

It was necessary that Kennedy create an image of the U. S. that had thus far been lacking. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union had to be dealt with.

In Laos, the Soviet was about to gain control. It had to be decided whether to involve U. S. troops. In Cuba, Castro's Communist sympathies became public. Most important, Khrushchev stated flatly in '59 that Berlin was intolerable to the Soviet Union and that after the new President took office he would deny access to Berlin.

Obviously, our military capability had to be increased. But beyond this, Kennedy saw that first our economy would have to be given a boost. Small business loans and housing projects had not been enough.

He therefore initiated an 11½ billion dollar tax cut at a time when the nation was 7½ billion in debt. But the tactic worked.

The incentive to industry sparked the economy, making it safe to build military capability.

Thus, when Khrushchev did confront Kennedy in Vienna in '61 to tell him to get out of Berlin, Kennedy called up the reserves, increased the budget, and held Berlin.

In Cuba, counting on the sane and intelligent Khrushchev that he had met a year before, Kennedy enforced a blockade that forced the Soviets to remove their missiles. It was in these forty-eight hours of tension that, for the first time in history, "two men possessed within their reach the power to destroy mankind," said O'Donnell.

This fact brought to both East and West a realization of the impossibility of nuclear war as a rational course of action. The way to discussion was opened which led to the Test Ban Treaty.

O'Donnell concluded his talk with a summary of the much improved state of affairs in the U. S. today and a statement of what he thought to be Kennedy's greatest contribution—"he awakened the political awareness of the public, and brought the national government more directly into their hands."

A brief question period followed during which it was learned that Mr. O'Donnell is planning a book on Kennedy which will cover the political aspects of the years they were together. The book will be out this spring.

It was also revealed that O'Donnell has political aspirations within the state which point to the Democratic nomination for governor.

O'Donnell would make no formal statement concerning his plans; but he did say that a public statement would be made in the first part of Feb.

STUDENT SENATE

Fac. Policy Approved After Late Start

By Karen Rose
Senate Reporter

The lack of a quorum resulting from Tuesday's power failure delayed the start of a Student Senate meeting which considered the establishment of an Ad Hoc committee to look into the condition of married student housing on campus, accepted a report concerning the present grading system and approved an all Senate policy statement on the establishment of a new Fine Arts Council.

The nine basic points of the statement were all considered individually and debated likewise. The points included dissolving the existing Fine Arts Councils and committees and developing a new council. The new council would draft its own constitution. There are to be five Student Senators and five Faculty Senators on the council—nominated by their respective bodies and approved by President Lederle.

There would be a $4.00 fee collected by the University treasurer's office from each student. Once this fee is paid the students will not be charged admission to any event sponsored by any member organization of the FAC (i.e. theatre productions, lectures, etc.).

Such events are to be under the supervision of a proposed professional manager and will eventually be housed in the proposed Fine Arts Building.

None of the various campus media (Collegian, W.M.U.A., Index, Yahoo, Caesura, Critique, Spectrum or the Engineering Journal) are included in this

Prof. Discusses Students; Stresses Participation

Dr. David Leonard, former professor of history at the University and now at American International College, spoke Tuesday night at eight o'clock in the Rec Room of William James House (Southwest C).

Dr. Leonard's topic was student privileges and responsibilities in a university situation. Dr. Leonard made an analogy between what the university should be and what a church is. He stated that the university should be a "meaningful human community," a "kind of church" where one attempts to achieve a sense of "personhood, vocation, and community."

The main concern of the University of Massachusetts according to Dr. Leonard is "to serve the establishment," (i.e. the government, business world). He declared that the university's main function should be "educating the student."

He further stated that the student should not necessarily try to "fit in" the university. The student, rather, should attempt to "assert his own needs." The student should be a participant rather than an observing learner.

Dr. Leonard also looked at the role of the university in American society. He stated that the university should be the "moral yardstick." Rather than being a servant of society, the university should be an active part of society.

He stated that the university should cause questions to be raised on existing national policies. The university should essentially "create free men who can really serve society" rather than just "perpetuate an establishment."

Dr. Leonard said that three recent developments show promise. He labeled civil rights a great "moral and spiritual movement."

He mentioned the Student Protest Movement, and he called the teach-ins a "moral grid" in which "speaking out critically about profound and tragic situations" symbolize what a university can be.

He reiterated that the "fundamental purpose of a university should be to teach students" and that the university is either a "spiritual enterprise or a fraud."

In the question and answer session that followed, Dr. Leonard commented on the recent problems in the University of Massachusetts.

He stated that the student "must win the struggle to keep student affairs out of the hands of the faculty." There should be a "continuing evaluation and criticism of existing rules." He said that if the students know explicitly what they want in the way of regulation changes and proceed slowly, one "step" at a time, they will eventually be successful.

Dr. Leonard concluded that he hopes the University can teach "community service in the broadest sense."

Peace Corps to Arrive on Campus

by PAMELA METAXAS
Staff Reporter

On Nov. 15 and 16 a Peace Corps recruiting team will be at UMass to provide information and answers to interested students.

The information booth that will be set up in the Student Union will serve as the focal point for the campus visit. All pamphlets and data concerning the Peace Corps will be available at the booth.

The Peace Corps Placement Test will be given on Friday, November 19, at 3 and 5 p.m. in room 132 of the Engineering building. This is the first time the exam has been given on campus.

There will also be a film, "Interview with Shriver" shown later. The exact time and place will be available at the information booth.

Highlights of the two-day visit will be a speech Tues., Nov. 16 at 7:45 by Robert Satin, former director of Peace Corps operations during the recent revolution in the Dominican Republic. The talk that will be in SBA, is entitled "The Peace Corps Under Fire."

Mr. Satin was educated at the University of Michigan and Harvard University. He has served in a variety of positions including Petroleum Geologist, Harvard Teaching Fellow, and Peace Corps Director of the Dominican Republic.

The recruiting team is anxious to extend their campus visit if enough interest is shown and to continue giving the placement tests during the year.

The recruiting team consists of Anthony Masso, John O'Connor, and William A. Guth, all returned volunteers from Panama, Ethiopia and East Pakistan respectively.

The entire campaign is aimed at presenting a picture of the Peace Corps and its workings to the University students. In short, the team wishes to make clear to students that "the Peace Corps provides an opportunity to students to use what ever physical or intellectual skills they have to further what has been loosely called the American Way of Life."

Male Vocalist Sought; Singing Group Forming

Any male vocalists looking for a group in which to exercise your musical abilities? Tenors and basses (particularly) are welcome to join the "Wesleyaires," the a capella choral group of the Wesley Foundation. The group has exciting plans for the coming school year. For the first time, it is completely student organized, and under the Director, Alan Copthorne, a senior at the University, new music has been introduced to the group this semester. The repertoire of about twenty numbers consists of Negro spirituals, sacred anthems and chorales, and other light pieces.

The semester is heavily scheduled with concerts for different organizations, including the Amherst Womens' Club. The group often sings for churches in the New England Conference of the Methodist Church, involving it in places such as Baldwinville and Boston. There are a number of Christmas performances during the first two weeks of Dec., but the highlight of the 1965-1966 season will be a tour in the Boston area in Feb.

The group is made up of students from the University from all classes and without regard to religious affiliation. Financial support comes from the Methodist Church. The enjoyment of singing together and the excitement of sharing mutual interests through music are its main objectives, along with the intention of bringing a relevant message to its listeners. Rehearsals are Sundays from 4 to 6 p.m. at Wesley Methodist Church.

Please contact Alan Copthorne, 220 Greenough, if you are interested in attending. Or, simply come to the rehearsal this Sunday, November 14, at 4 p.m.

The New Woman

College regulations for girls are outdated and do not meet the needs of the contemporary co-ed. Consequently reform is needed. Why? Because today's college girl is deprived of the most significant aspect in growing up—independence. How different is today's co-ed or female in general than her counterpart of just twenty or thirty years ago?

The female (college student or not) has over the years fully broken through the shell that once held her as a domesticated robot. The world of the female that now exists (and many men still ask how it ever came about) is almost on an equal par with that of the male. Today, a woman can enter college; compete for the mayoralty; judge a case; direct traffic; drive a bus; or climb a mountain. In other words, she has invaded most of the holy sanctuaries that were taboo for the fair sex. Time will undoubtedly cause other barriers to crumble as the walls of Jericho once did.

The key, then, to the controversy over women's regulations is equality and independence. It has to be faced that the female student, like all women, has gained a new level of independence over the years. The existing regulations do nothing more than stymie and frustrate this trend.

What is proposed, then, is reform — gradual reform, to be effected in small doses over a period of years. With this in mind, success can therefore only come about through a united effort by parents, administration, and student body.

To The Editor...

To the Editor:

In Wednesday's issue of the Collegian, a story reporting our discussion at Eugene Field contained the following paragraph:

"He (Fr. Thoman) also said that the continuing question of birth control methods is still considered unsolved by the church. He believes that it is a matter of your personal conscience in relation to the community."

I did not make, nor would I make, any statement approximating this. On the contrary, I pointed out that the Council's Declaration on Religious Liberty clearly states that the freedom of conscience dealt with involves freedom from external coercion in choosing and living out that system of paying homage to God which one sincerely feels is most in line with His will, but does not give the right to any committed Catholic to choose at his own discretion to accept or reject any doctrines of faith or morals which the Church authoritatively teaches.

I feel myself bound by this doctrine. In June, 1964, Pope Paul set up a Papal Commission to reinvestigate the Church's position on birth control in the light of contemporary data. But at that time he remarked that no sufficient theological reason for changing the Church's position had as yet appeared, and that therefore the condemnation of all forms of artificial birth control would remain in force as official Church doctrine.

Thus, at least practically, the question of birth control methods is not "unsolved" by the Church. I personally can't see how the committed Catholic today can have any doubt as to what the Church's teaching is or what his own moral judgement must be in this matter.

Thus, it is at least very misleading to state that I believe that the use of artificial birth control methods by a committed Catholic is a "matter of your personal conscience in relation to the community". The problem for a committed Catholic is not the theoretical one of deciding the moral licitness of artificial birth control, but the practical one of whether or not to follow that moral law or not, to sin or not to sin.

The false imputation of such statements to me can reflect most seriously on my competency as a priest and do untold damage to my professional reputation. Furthermore, there is the real danger that the consciences of some or all of the four thousand Catholics on campus might be misled by the acceptance of ideas which I do not hold and certainly did not express.

Rev. Charles Thoman S.J.

"AS AN ITEM FOR OUR STUDENT PRESS—WHAT'S YOUR ENGINEERS' OPINION OF THE EARLY CLOSING HOURS FOR WOMEN?"

Curfews and Womanhood

a guest editorial by Georgios Pan Piperopoulos

Spirited young lady; shapely too; once she passes by, you've got to grab her with your eyes again, and again, and again... She captured me at once: my heart that is; she lost my admiration though, at least slightly. "It's a nonsense," she stated with that categorical, all knowing (almost), velvet of a voice, "that curfew bit and all. We are old enough to know what we are doing; and besides, we should be granted the chance to create a sense of responsibility that we'll carry on from the University to 'real' life. After all, curfew was established to keep girls in at night. That's old fashion now. Look at other progressive schools..."

And then there was the "out-going" co-ed who told me: "One thing is sure; I feel like a louse, guilt complex and that, every time I sign out for home and I and my friends know damn well that I'll spend the night ten minutes away from my dorm. But you see my housemother doesn't know (?) and that's all that counts..."

Finally SWAP came along, and more History was made. Then the editor said: "Yorgi, tell us your opinion." I am doing it.

There is a little legal clause that states, at least in Massachusetts: "Thou shalt not drink until your 21st birthday!" Now, you turn around to me and you say: "but that's a stupid law." I say that it may or it may not be so. What I feel as being more fundamental though, is the fact that while in College (even in high school) most young people grossly abridge this law...
